HELPS TO SEE--SPECTACLES

The place to stem a torrent is at its source.

The time to take steps to preserve your sight is now. Give your eyes the best of care always. Do not foolishly overwork or strain them. Immediately when they show signs of failing power, have them carefully tested and properly fitted with the best and most perfect spectacles that can be had.

This does not always mean the most expensive by any means, nor does it mean the cheap and ruinous trash usually hawked about by peddlars and irresponsible travelling quacks, whose object is to get your money regardless of the means.

Eyes that require glasses at all should be fitted with good lenses, the best of their kind. The best lenses for one eye troubles may be much more, or less, costly than those required for another, according to the nature of the optical defect.

The plan of giving one kind of glasses to all kinds and conditions of eyes is about as sensible and satisfactory as giving castor oil or quinine for every ailment, from a scratch on the finger to the small-pox.

The changes brought about by age are inevitable; they cannot be prevented any more than death itself. To refuse to take advantage of the comfort offered by science and art—as applied to optics—viz., to refuse to wear glasses when one's eyes begin to fail and need them—will hasten these changes in the eyes, because the strain put upon them becomes greater and greater. It would be just as rational to stop the clock and expect that time would stop in consequence.

"But if I begin to wear glasses I must always continue to do so."

In nearly every case this is true. But remember that in every such case, from the time you begin to require glasses—whether you use them or not, you can never see satisfactorily without them.

Now which is best, to wear glasses and see, or to do without them and only half see?

Our object is to sell spectacles only where they are required, and will prove beneficial, and in all other cases we so advise.

Forgive and Forget.

BY REQUEST OF L. H.

Forgive and forget! 'Tis better
Than blaming either one,
Since nothing now can change it,
For everything is done.
The play has been enacted;
Now let the curtain fall,
Nor even allow the shadows
To linger on Memory's wall.

Forgive and forget—'tis better;
Far nobler, far wiser, more true,
For you to try to forgive him,
For him to forget even you.
Let everything, then, be over—
Believe me, there'll be no regret.
If you will but freely forgive him—
If he will forever forget!

I know 'tis no easy matter,
Forever to put away
All the fond recollections
You've cherished for many a day.
But like many a one before you,
The longer that you live,
The more you'll find to forget, dear,
The more you'll learn to forgive.

The Orange Address to the Queen.

To the Editor of The Warder.

SIR,—The readers of THE WARDER, who take an interest in Orange matters, will remember the address that was published in its columns last June, that was passed at the semi-annual meeting of the County Lodge of Victoria, congratulating Her Most Gracious Majesty on her attaining the jubilee of her reign. I have this day received the accompanying reply which you will please publish in THE WARDER. You will notice that the reply is dated 29th July, although not received by me until to-day, the delay I presume being caused by its being addressed to me to Lindsay, instead of Little Britain.

I am, etc.,
