Odds and Ends.

Better the child weep than the father.

The world is for him who has patience.

No pains, no gains; no sweat, no sweet.

It is too late to spare when all is spent.

Why is a flirt like a Southern rebel?—Because she's fond of Beauregard.

A wise man may be pinched by poverty, but only a fool will let himself be pinched by tight shoes.

A man's good fortune often turns his head; his bad fortune as often averts the heads of his friends.

Real glory springs from the silent conquest of ourselves; and without that the conqueror is naught but the first slave.

A man comes to church and falls fast asleep, as though he had been brought in for a corpse, and the preacher were preaching at his funeral.

ADVERTISING for a wife is as absurd as getting measured for an umbrella. 'Talk up' to the dear creatures if you'd marry them. One-half the world was born to marry the other half.

'One might have heard a pin fall,' is a proverbial expression of silence; but it has been eclipsed by the French phrase—'You might have heard the unfolding of a lady's pocket handkerchief.'

Whenever you see a lady and gentleman alone in a cab, each looking out of a different window, be convinced that they are perfectly harmless, for they have been married some months at least.

AN EXACT MAN.—'Is that the second bell?' inquired a gentleman of a sable porter, at a country boarding-house, the other day. 'No, sar!' exclaimed the darky; 'dat am the secon' ringin' of de fust bell; we has but one bell in dis house!'

He that is perfectly wise is perfectly happy: nay, the very beginning of wisdom makes life easy to us. Neither is it enough to know this, unless we print it in our minds by daily meditation, and so bring a good will to a good habit.

Not long ago a youth, older in wit than in years, after being catechised concerning the power of Nature, replied, 'Now, I think there's one thing nature can't do.' 'What is it, my child?' 'She can't make Bill Jone's mouth any bigger without setting his ears back.'

It has been said of the late celebrated Rothschild, that, though no man was less lavish of his money, no one was more ready to detect a love of it in others. It was one day, while at a city feast, that a gentleman observed that for his part he thought venison was very good, but that he loved mutton better. 'Ah! ah! I knowsh vy! it is becausch he doesn't like to pay de prishe—it is becausch mutton's sheep, and venshon's deer.'

SINGULAR CUSTOM.—At Munich there prevails a singular custom: Every child found begging in the streets is arrested and carried to a charitable establishment. The moment he enters the hospital, and before he is cleaned and gets the new clothes intended for him, his portrait is painted in his ragged dress, and precisely as he was found begging. When his education is finished in the hospital, this portrait is given to him, and he promises by an oath to keep it all his life, in order that he may be reminded of the abjected condition from which he had been rescued, and of the obligations he owes to the institution which saved him from misery and gave him the means by which he was enabled to avoid it in future.

ADVANTAGES OF WOMEN.—A woman says what she chooses without being knocked down for it. She can take a snooze after dinner, while her husband goes to work. She can go into the streets without being asked to "stand treat" at every saloon. She can paint her face if it be too pale, and powder it if too red. She can stay at home in time of war, and get married again if her husband be killed. She can wear corsets if too thick—other fixens if too thin. She can get divorced from her husband whenever she sees one she likes better. She can get her husband in debt all over until he warns the public not to trust her on his account. But all these advantages are balanced by the great fact that she cannot "pop the question."

WHOLESOME RULES.—Mr. Simeon in referring to evil reports writes:—The longer I live the more I feel the importance of adhering to the following rules:

1st. To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others.

2nd. To believe nothing of the kind until I am absolutely forced to it.

3rd. Never to think in the spirit of one who circulates an evil report.

4th. Always to be moderate as far as I can.

5th. Always to believe that if the other side were heard a very different account would be given of the matter.

A SINGULAR HUSBAND.

Dr. King relates the following anecdote. He states that, in the early part of the last century, he knew a Mr. Howe, a sensible, well-disposed man, possessed of an independent fortune, and married to a young lady of good family, of agreeable person and manners, and who, for the first seven or eight years of their marriage, made him an excellent wife.

Without any previous dispute or difference, he rose one morning very early and told her that he was obliged to go to the Tower to transact some particular business; and the same day, about noon, she received a note from him, informing her that he was under a necessity of going instantly to Holland, and should probably be absent three weeks or a month.

He remained absent, however, longer than the specified time, and for seventeen years and upward she never heard of or from him. About three years after his disappearance, Mrs. Howe was obliged to apply for an Act of Parliament to procure a proper settlement of her husband's estate, and a proper provision for herself and two children out of it, as it was uncertain whether he was alive or dead. This she did, as when he first went away she and her friends feared that he might have contracted some large debt unknown to her, the difficulties of which he could not easily surmount. In fact, for some time after his departure, she had lived in constant dread of demands from creditors, of seizures, executions, &c. Nothing of this kind, however, took place; and on investigation it was found that he not only had left his estate free and unencumbered, but had punctually paid the bills of every tradesman with whom he had had any dealings to the utmost exactness, receipts and proper vouchers for all bills being found, arranged in the most methodical manner, in his bureau.

Shortly after this the children both died, when the supposed widow, in order to lessen her housekeeping expenses, discharged the greater part of her servants, left Jermyn Street, and took a small house in Brewer Street, Golden Square. This was about ten years after her husband's departure, when one evening, after she had resided in Brewer Street about seven years, while she was sitting at supper with a party of friends, among whom were her brother-in-law, Dr. Rose, and her sister, his wife, a note, without any signature, was delivered to her, in which the writer requested the favor of her giving him a meeting the next evening, in the Birdcage Walk, in the Park. She read the note with some surprise, and then tossed it to Dr. Rose, saying—

"You see, brother, old as I am, I have a beau."

The doctor, who perused the note with more attention, instantly declared it to be Mr. Howe's handwriting. This, of course, surprised all the company, and, indeed, so much affected Mrs. Howe, that she fainted away. On her recovery, it was agreed that the whole party should accompany her next evening to the Park; and they had not been there many minutes when the lost husband came to them, and after embracing his wife and saluting his friends, walked home with them, took possession of his house and wife, and lived with her in great harmony until his death.

It appeared that, instead of going to the Tower, as he said, he had actually gone no farther than to a little street in Westminster, where he took a room, for which he paid five or six shillings a week; and changed his name, and disguising himself by wearing a black wig, (for he was a fair man,) he had escaped detection, and remained in that lodging during the whole time of his supposed absence. Even when the Act of Parliament was applied for, he had enjoyed the pleasure of reading the progress of it in the papers, at a little coffee-house near to his lodgings; and when his wife removed to Brewer Street, he contrived to get acquainted with a man of the name of Salt, a corn-chandler, who lived directly opposite to her residence. Salt supposed him to be a bachelor, and became so fond of his company that he generally asked him to dinner twice a week, when Howe used to watch his wife's house with so much apparent curiosity, that Salt often recommended her to him as a very suitable wife. On Sundays he regularly went to Salt's pew, in St. James's Church, whence he could see his wife without being seen by her—a practice which he sedulously adhered to until the avowal of his existence and return.

Though he cheerfully told all these circumstances, no persuasion of his wife or friends could prevail on him to assign any reason for his extraordinary conduct; but he owned that he had taken with him for subsistence between one and two thousand pounds, in gold and bank-notes, which, after great economy, was then all expended. Discovery of course became necessary for a further supply; and indeed some of his friends surmised that if he could have raised the money without discovery, he would still have remained concealed in his obscurity.

Farmers' Column.

TO CURE HAMS—LOSS OF WEIGHT.—John C. Bishop, Fond du Lac, Wis., writes to the American Agriculturist: "I have never failed of having most excellent hams by using the following recipe—the shoulders are equally good, only fatter: Rub the hams thoroughly around the bone with salt, using the best quality. To 4 pails water add one quart molasses, six quarts salt, and one tablespoonful of saltpetre: they should remain in this pickle covered five weeks. Cobs are preferable to any other article to smoke with; sack and whitewash, and you will have first quality hams the year round. In packing my pork last Fall, it occurred to me to ascertain how much is lost in weight by smoking hams. I cut out a ham which weighed 24½ lbs. After taking from the pickle, in which it had remained some 5 weeks, it weighed 25½ lbs. To-day, one month after smoking, it weighs 22½ lbs., having lost over 3 pounds. A barrel of side pork weighing 200 lbs., that I packed freed from bone and most of the lean meat, on being re-weighed, had gained 8 pounds.

LUCK IN FARMING.

There are few words oftener upon the lips of a certian class of farmers, than luck. Smith is a "lucky dog," because his corn never rots, his wheat never winter-kills, his sheep never get into his rye, and his cows never invade his meadows and orchards. His crops are better than his neighbors', and even his wife and children have a more contented look than other people. Every thing he touches thrives. What a lucky man Smith is! Now, the fact is, luck has nothing to do with Smith's success in life. If you watch the man, you will find that every result he reaches is anticipated and planned for, and comes of his own wit and work. It is the legitimate reward of his labors; it would have been bad luck, if it had turned out otherwise. His corn always comes up because he always selects the seed himself, and hangs it up by the husks in the garret where it is thoroughly dried. He does not plant until the sun has warmed the soil enough to give the germ an immediate start. He drains his wheat field with tiles, and the water that used to freeze and thaw upon the surface and throw the roots of the wheat out and kill them, now passes down in the drains and runs off. His fields are green and beautiful in the spring, when his neighbors' are russet brown and desolate. His fences are in repair, and his animals are not made breachy by the continual temptations of dilapidated walls. His wife and children are comfortably clothed and fed, and are not kept in a continual fret and worry by a husband and father who has no system or energy in his business. "A time and place for every thing," is his motto, carried out. The shoemaker is always called in when his services are needed, and none of the household get wet feet, catch cold, have the fever, and run up a doctor's bill of twenty dollars, for want of a cent's worth of leather at the right time in the right place. Smith does not believe in luck. He knows that health in the family and thrift upon the farm depend upon a thousand little things that many of his neighbors are too lazy or careless to look after. So, while they are in the tavern, or loafing in the village, or running amuck in politics, he is looking after these little things, and laying his plans for next year. He has good corn, even in the poorest year, because the soil had the extra manure it needed, to bring out good, long, plump, well-capped ears. He meant to have eighty bushels to the acre, and he has it, good measure and running over. Talk with him about luck, and he will say to you, "It's all nonsense. Bad luck is simply a man with his hands in his breeches pockets, and a pipe in his mouth, looking on, to see how it will come out. Good luck is a man of pluck to meet difficulties, his sleeves rolled up, and working to make it come out right. He rarely fails. At least, I never did." Smith is right. Attend to your business, and you will have good luck.

A young lady from the rural districts of Hoosierdom lately visited Chicago with her beau. Getting into a city railroad car for the first time, she took a seat, while her lover planted himself on the platform with the driver. Pretty soon the conductor began to collect the fare, and approaching the rustic maiden, he said: "Your fare, miss." The Hoosier rosebud allowed a delicate pink to manifest itself on her cheeks, and looked down in soft confusion. The conductor was rather astonished at this, but ventured to remark once more: "Your fare, miss." This time the pink deepened to a carnation, as the rustic beauty replied: "Wal, if I am good-lookin', you hadn't orter to say it out loud for folk." The passengers in the cars roared with laughter, and the lover coming in to see what was going on, at once settled the fare.

STARTLING, BUT TRUE!

SURVIVE OR PERISH.

Holloway's Pills.

The history of this great remedy is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It is not a history written by one man, but even derived from the experience of one nation, but consists of a compilation of cures among the sick of every country, in every climate, which has never been addressed in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

In whatever form or country disease may be found, these Pills and Ointment should be used, as the purifying agents they are, will be the surviving medicine.

DYSPEPSIA.

The great source of this distressing malady quickly yields to the influence of these purifying Pills, and the digestive organs are restored to their pristine tone; no matter in what form or shape this dreadful disease exists, these Pills will eradicate it, and nothing can stand long against the purifying properties of these Pills on the human system.

GENERAL DEBILITY AND NERVOUSNESS.

From whatever cause, loss of spirits, and all other signs of a diseased liver, and other disorganization of the system, which under the exhausting influence of this atmosphere is so prevalent, these Pills are a certain remedy.

SICKLY FEMALES.

Should lose no time in trying a few doses of this regulating and conservative remedy; whatever may be their complaint, it can be taken with safety in all periodical and other disorganizations; its effect is all but miraculous.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma,	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints,	Indigestion,
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness,
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits,
Diarrhœa,	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds.

CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernible as a Water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicines or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

Sold at the Manufactory of Professor Holloway, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 63 cents and $1 each.

There is considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N.B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. 149

MATHEWS' VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE.

This celebrated Dye was first prepared in 1845; since that time it has been used by thousands, and in no instance has it failed to give perfect satisfaction.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Is the cheapest in the world. Its price is only Fifty Cents, and each bottle contains double the quantity of dye contained in those usually sold for one dollar.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Is the safest composition of its class. It is warranted not to injure the hair, or the scalp, in the slightest degree.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Works with rapidity and certainty. It causes no annoyance or trouble to those who use it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Produces any shade that may be desired—one that will not fade, crock, or wash out; one that is as permanent as the hair itself.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Does not, in any manner, interfere with the natural softness of the hair; it neither scorches nor dries it.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Is the best, cheapest, safest, most convenient, most successful, and most permanent Dye ever used.

THE VENETIAN DYE

Having gained an extended reputation, the public are CAUTIONED against purchasing any prepared in the same style, under the same or different name, as they are mere imitations, and liable to do injury.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK

FOR 1863.

GREAT LITERARY AND PICTORIAL YEAR

THE Publisher of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a magazine for the last THIRTY-THREE years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam," who will furnish a story for every number of the Lady's Book for 1863. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view far ahead of any other magazine. Marion Harland writes for no other publication. Our other favorite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

THE BEST

AND CHEAPEST LADY'S MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD.

THE LITERATURE

is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

is all original, and would cost 25 cents (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in "Godey."

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving, as we do, many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work.

GODEY'S

IMMENSE DOUBLE SHEET FASHION-PLATES.

Containing from five to seven full length Colored Fashions on each plate. Other magazines give only two.

FAR AHEAD OF ANY FASHIONS IN EUROPE OR AMERICA.

Godey's is the only work that gives these immense plates, and they are such as to have excited the wonder of publishers and the public.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS, of which we give twice or three times as many as any other [illegible] taken for steel. [illegible]

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other magazine has these. [illegible]
