DOUBLES AND QUITS.

strike; a millocracy who detested the military, and would none of them; and a neighbourhood of bloated aristocrats who so thoroughly ignored the town that they included us in the ostracism to which they treated it. Such was the place in which our lines were cast. I may add that it always rained, that the neighbouring country was level and uninteresting, and for miles round the vegetation was blighted by the noxious breath of the town's million chimneys. Then there was no barrack accommodation for our billiard-table, and the billiard-rooms of the town were unavailable, being infested by unclean and insolent manufacturers; racket-court there was none—nor cricket ground; and months lay between us and the hunting season. Altogether there was nothing to be done but eat, drink, sleep, and grumble. To none of these occupations is the British officer averse, yet the honest fellow likes to vary his pleasures like others; and why not? Probably these gloomy accessories mattered less to us than to the others. Self-absorbed as I was, and engrossed in a superior source of trouble, perhaps the dull monotony was even less distasteful to me than would have been a pepetual racket of gaiety. That, however, was by no means to prejudice my right to swell the full-toned chorus of discontent which rose in the barracks from morn to dewy eve, [illegible]uding in a comprehensive anathema the town and all its works, along with that sublime imperturbability the Horse Guards, for dooming us to such a sojourn.

Those who had the largest aptitude for being bored declared that it was "the evenings that killed them," and I dare say so it was. There was no theatre nor public amusement of any sort, and desperate were the substitutes, even cheerfully accepted. A temperance lecture advertised for a fortnight previously had really been looked forward to with interest, and well attended from the Barracks. A wild beast show which had visited the town for three days, and had four exhibitions per diem, was punctually attended by many officers at every diet; so much so, that Jack Leslie declared that the lion, near whose cage they had sat on several occasions, had latterly always risen, grinned, and wagged his tail like a dog on the entrance of the Barrack party.

To us thus bored, then, and clutching at every straw in the way of amusement, it was a matter of no small excitement to see, one day, the walls and boardings plastered over with flame-coloured posters inscribed in green letters with the word "Hurrah!" and nothing else. There was interest, there was promise in the word; and the detachment said to itself cordially, "By all means hurrah!" The posters continued to cheer away upon the walls without explanation for three days; and then came another mysterious inscription in yellow and blue, "Would you believe it?" This enigma was much canvassed. Practical men got angry and said, "D—n it—what?" Others suggested that the mayor had gone mad, &c., &c., &c.; but no one could make anything of it. Expectation was therefore at its height when a third fulmination at all events asserted something—"Plotski is coming!" It was "Ptotski's advent, then, that we were invited to hail with jubilation in the first placard, and the almost unearthly happiness of that event that was suggested by the second.

But who the deuce was Plotski? his visit was gratifying, but who was he, and what? Was he a Polish refugee come to lecture on the wrongs of his fatherland? Was he an itinerant dentist, a vagrant homœopath, a conjuror, a wizard, or what not? Conjecture lost itself. Time must show; and it did, for a third placard announcing "He is here," was followed next morning by an inundation of hand-bills on the mess-table finally clearing up the Plotski mystery. These announced that the eminent Signor Plotski, LL D., of Amsterdam, Buenos Ayres, and Moscow, accompanied by his wife, the irresistible Madame Plotski (nee Kartoffel of Bagdad), would at the urgent request of the leading inhabitants of M—, favor that town with a two days' visit for the purpose of "lecturing (with experiments and scientific demonstrations) on certain phenomena connected with magnetism, electricity, and phrenology in their relation to the human will." This was very gratifying; and nothing could be more satisfactorily dirty and scientific than the appearance of the great man when he presented himself in person that forenoon to solicit the favor of our patronage. In countenance he was one of the most villainous and ill-favoured savans it has ever been my lot to contemplate. He wore a fez and black spectacles, and an all-enshrouding frock-coat of rusty black which reached to his heels, and suffered, here and there, to appear at abnormal crevices, hints of some possible linen of an almost impossible grimness. His accent when he spoke was so incomprehensible and peculiar at first that we tried him in French. The sage however, was ignorant of that frivolous tongue; he said, "yah," and "si," indeed, when interrogated as to his capabilities in German and Italian, but could further converse in them, alleging mysteriously that there "was a curse" which made his own language (which he omitted to name) or the "the Arabesch" the only fitting vehicles for lofty thoughts.

"I have come, Gen'ral," he said, addressing the Major—"I have come, Gen'ral and gents, to talk a weesh out of my hart. You have all 'eard of Pots-a-grass?"

"O'yes!" said I "of course we all know about him."

"Then I need not to tawlk about 'im;" and he paused abruptly. "You are aware of grayvitation?"

"Yes, yes."

"Then I need not stay long with 'im either."

"You are aweer that the mateeril forces are rig'lated in their developpment by a cat'nation of homogenus causes?"

"Yes," said the Major, frowning, and slowly nodding his head, dense as a turnip, as if making a gigantic effort to grapple with the subtlety of the idea

"yes, clearly, so."

"Ferry well, so far; you beleeff in something?"

"Yes," said the Major sadly bothered.

"You shall disbeleef it all at my weesh," cried the Professor, snapping a pair of dusky fingers under the Major's nose.

"How?"

"You say four make more nor two?"

"Certainly."

"I shall make proof-ment that cet ees less!"

"Brave, Professor!" cried Jack Leslie "I'm a convert already, and I'll be generous enough to pay two bob instead of four for admission to your entertainment to-night—is it a bargain? Reserved seats, mind."

"Silence, Mr. Leslie!" cried the Major, who flattered himself he was rather coming out in science; "be silent, sir!"

"Oh! cet ees ferry goot, so far; let 'im say 'is funny word. He shall come in for no sheeling at all, cef he weel geeve hees body for make exper'ment."

"Thank you," said Jack; "I'll rather go back to the old faith, and pay four bob."

"Ferry goot, so far; but I need not to delarge much now. You weel come, Gen'ral and gents—you weel come to my conversadzony?"

"Oh, certainly!"

"Here are the permits;" and he produced a bundle of filthy tickets, and distributed them, receiving money "according to the old faith."

"Professor, said an officer who had recently mounted a popular hobby, "I daresay you know something about spirits?"

The Professor looked wistfully at him, but replied, "Tank you, not now; one glass wine—sherry, perhaps."

"Oh, sherry! certainly; but I didn't mean that. You deal in occult science; are you as all given to spiritualism?"

"To all science, sare; but not as a professor. In private I am ferry much with the spirits."

"Major," whispered the spiritual officer, "m'ghn't we ask him up to supper after the lecture, and have a little spirit-rapping?"

"By all means;" and the Professor was invited, and gladly agreed to come.

LEIBIG'S

Liquid Extract of Beef

AND TONIC INVIGORATOR.

Besides the Condensed Beef prepared from the beatparts of the animal, the preparation contains Quin ine, Peruvian Bark, and numerous herbs and roots grown for their tonic and health-giving properties.

This is the only condensed beef that does not require cooking or warming. It was especially manufactured under the direction of Baron Von Liebig, before the late Franco-Prussian war, for the German soldiers. Its tonic qualities are much greater than those found in any ordinary Specific or Appetiser, and its nutritive properties are sufficient to sustain the body without the addition of solid food. It is now recommended by the faculty in preference to anything else as the best remedy for Consumption, General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Lassitude, &c.

No article has yet been discovered that is so effective in all cases of failing health in the old, or weakness in the young. This preparation is not only the best, but it is the cheapest Beef Extract offered to the public: Two Tablespoonsful being sufficient three times a day.

Great care should be taken in purchasing the Liquid Beef Extract. See that the bottle contains the German label and certificate from Professor Wagner, of the University of Wurtzburgh, and that it is prepared by the Liebig's German Beef Extract Co., of Hamburg, as other extracts of an inferior quality have been put on the market.

Price 60 cents per bottle.

The Nutritious Condiment of the North British Cattle Food Co. GOLD PRIZE MEDAL, awarded, London Exhibition, 1862. At the Exhibition of British and Foreign Manufactures, held in the Crystal Palace, London, 1867, the Nutritious Condiment was awarded the Prize Gold Medal for gentleness and utility. It will coax the most impaired appetite. It renders coarse provender rich and palatable. Horses fed on this Condiment for a short period of the year receive as much benefit as if they had been out to grass for a season. Its regular use is beneficial and not injurious, as is the case with some worthless prepared drugs palmed off on the public at high prices, and designated Cattle Spices, &c. The Nutritious Condiment is composed of pure North American grass for their fattening properties and health-giving qualities. By using it, a saving of twenty per cent is effected in the cost of feeding and the animals are in better condition. It is not only the best but the cheapest Condiment for cattle in existence, being just half the price of any of present in the market. All the principal prize cattle at the Royal Agricultural Show, held at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, London, June 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, were fed on the North British Cattle Food Company's Condiment. The Prize Ox of Wharton, exhibited by Lindsay Jr. & Jewitt Bros., who will be glad to supply the food in any quantity, or forward pamphlets of testimonials without fees, the First Horse and Cattle Premium in England, Canada and the U.
