ROUSING LAST QUARTER WINS FOR MAACS 51-36

A thrilling last quarter spurt, in which the MAACS nearly doubled their score, resulted in a smashing defeat for Wauconda in the weekly Sunday afternoon game at the McHenry High School gymnasium, 51-36. Wauconda had shown unlooked for resistance and even led McHenry at the half, 17-14, but those points scored by everyone on the MAAC team cinched the contest.

Gus Freund copped the scoring honors for the first time this year, five of his six baskets coming in the last half. He also had five free throws for a total of seventeen points. McCracken was a close second with thirteen points.

McHenry started out as if they were going places and led at the quarter 9-7, but Wauconda surged ahead in the second period to lead midway through the game. The third quarter found both teams rallying round the basket with twenty-two points being scored in all to end with the score tied at 27 all. And then the big dash for the finish line with McHenry out in front all the way.

Wauconda was seriously handicapped by the loss of Breithaupt, high school coach, and Hironimus, ex-high school star, who both left the game on personals in the second half.

BACON'S STRIP

By "ZEKE" BACON

Congratulations to Coach L. B. Crane and his Hebron champions. It has been a long time since Hebron last won a championship and they well deserve it. There isn't a team in the county that begrudges those clean, sportsmanlike Green and White warriors the honors that are coming to them by virtue of their great work in the county tournament. It is often said that you can tell of what a coach is made by the way his team behaves on the floor, which makes Coach Crane just about the best in the county.

Crystal Lake finally arrived at the point where everyone had almost given up looking for them after the most promising team in years had failed to click. With most of the team left over from a fair aggregation last season, the knowing ones thought they should be up in front at the start, but such was not the case, as team after team picked on them. Then they won a game from Richmond in the tournament and the old spark grew into a flame and the boys got hot enough to whip a strong Harvard crew in decisive fashion. But Coach Crane must be a Boy Scout as he knows how to extinguish a fire as well as how to build one and his own boys were the hottest on the final night, hot in a manner that cooled the Lakers and made them easy victims.

Hebron last won the county championship in 1924 and then McHenry followed with a title winning team in 1925, a team that whipped the same team with which Hebron had won the title the year before, whipped them in both the district and county tournaments. Maybe next year will see McHenry through again on the heels of Hebron. We hope so.

The boys around school are getting a big kick out of kidding Coach Orr on his culinary ability. He may not be able to burn water, but he can burn the bottom out of drip-o-lators, coffee pots to you and me. Seems the coach arose a wee bit earlier than usual the other morning and wished to make himself a cup of coffee without disturbing the household, so he connected the coffee pot and started to shave while it was heating. Only he didn't put any water over the coffee with quite disastrous results to the coffee pot as the bottom couldn't stand the excessive heat. Now, girls, if you can cook and—, we-ell.

Sunday is going to be a busy day around these parts for all forms of athletics. The MAACS play Darien at the High School gym and that town team has been going plenty hot this year (except when they play Algonquin). At the Palace Recreation a big bowling match will start at 2:30 with the Alemite team from Woodstock facing the Palace team. At the City Hall more than a few golf bugs will whet their mid-winter appetite for the game by attending the annual meeting of the McHenry Country Club, which will start at 1:30 and will include the annual election of officers. Down at Cary the Norge Ski club will hold its annual championship ski jump, an event that will attract more than a few thousand people if the weather gives them a break.

More about that MAAC team that is seeking to revive the old spirit that used to exist in independent basketball circles. Last Sunday the boys played Wauconda, a team that wasn't a setup by a long ways. Wauconda led at the half and the top teams were tied (exactly) at three quarters. Then McHenry turned on the steam and were out in front by a 51-36 count at the finish of the game. And the last quarter netted the winners exactly 24 points, which is some scoring in any game.

Tuesday night at Algonquin they didn't fare so well as the Indians from down the Fox took them into camp for the second time this season, nosing them out 41-37. The second team represented by Joe Schmitt and his gang, won their contest for the only McHenry victory of the night as the girls' team lost.

Mick Krause seems to be breaking out around the county, in print. Seems his prestige as an ice skater must have leaked out and got noised around, finally coming to the attention of a scribe. Surely is to bad the skating pond isn't finished so that Mick could exhibit his prowess, but the Gods are with him and furnished the ice anyway, so let's see you get going, Mick.

F. Hartel of the Woodstock Alemite league, was high scorer at the Palace last week with a high count of 259 which nets him the buck donated for the man getting the highest score. For the rest of the season the prize will be an electric lamp suitably hewed from a tenpin for the bowler getting the highest score in any competition during a period of two weeks, that is, one lamp is to be given away every two weeks. Drop in and look at the lamp, anyway.

Richmond's inspired basketball squad continue to lead the way in the Little Conference, despite the fact that they failed to go any place in the County Tournament. With five wins and no losses they are out in front and are without a doubt the most improved team in the league as last year they were in last place all the way, without a victory at this stage of the game.

To prove that things are topsy turvey this year as compared to last, Huntley, champs of most everything in basketball in these parts last year, and now bringing up the rear without a win in either lightweight or heavyweight divisions. Coach Flancher lost about everything he had by graduation and can't seem to find a clicking combination among the limited prospects which he has down in the southwest corner of the county.

In the lightweight division McHenry is still out ahead, despite a reversal at Hebron in their last start. Grant and Hebron have each lost but one game, but McHenry has more victories to keep them out in front with the banner.

Richmond was expected to fold up after their first few victories, despite all the nice things the newspapers have been saying about their winning streak, but now it looks as if they might go right on winning, as all but one of their victories have been gained on their opponents' floors. McHenry is the only team in the conference that has lost to Richmond at Richmond.

This is encouraging news to Coach Orr and his lads, as they have to face the Gunderson crew at McHenry January 25 and Coach Orr thinks he can do something that night which might alter the standings in the league somewhat. Richmond beat them by four points at Richmond early in the season and the Orr team has improved quite a bit since then, though they still have plenty of rough spots to polish. The showing McHenry made against Woodstock before the regulars left the game on personals leads Orr to believe the team is finally arriving at its peak. Let's hope so, as they'll need all the good work they can produce to take Richmond, when that team comes here January 25, which is only next week.

BOY SCOUT MERIT BADGE EXPOSITION

The biggest Boy Scout activity in McHenry County will be the Merit Badge Exposition to be held in the Marengo Community High School, January 25th and 26th. Field Scout Executive, E. L. Ellis says that according to reports from troops participating in the big show the public will have a real opportunity to observe the Scouts demonstrating many of the things that they learn and do in Scouting activities.

Scouts of troop 162 of McHenry are demonstrating the merit badge requirements for basketry, camping and photography. Among the other subjects to be demonstrated are Radio, Cooking, Pioneering, Stamp Collecting, First Aid, Aviation, Wood Turning, Wood Carving, Carpentry, Leather Work, Chemistry, Electricity, Taxidermy and Firemanship.

In earning Merit Badges, Scouts are encouraged to obtain useful knowledge and acquire skill that may be valuable in later life. Such a vocational training is a valuable supplement to training in manliness, courtesy and morality which is the fundamental aim of the Boy Scouts of America.

The local Scouts and Scout Leaders have been working to make their booth a real worthwhile project. They feel that local citizens will have a justified pride on observation of their work at the Exposition. The Scouts have tickets for the Exposition and by purchasing from them you help their troop treasury.

ANNOUNCE NEW 1935 NASH AND LAFAYETTE

The major improvements are announced in the new line of Nash six and eight cylinder cars for 1935. They range from advanced body styling to a newly proved system of spring suspension, and their sum-total results in the strongest bid for public approval that Nash has ever made in its 18 years of manufacturing history.

Power plants in both the six and eight are stepped up in horsepower, wheelbases are longer by 4 inches; an automatic cruising gear boosts top speed, at the same time reducing gas consumption, oil consumption and engine wear; springs are re-designed to give a smooth, untiring ride; steering has been made easier; super-hydraulic brakes have been adopted; air wheels are standard equipment on all models; "mid-section" seating moves rear seat passengers forward into the "comfort zone;" the Aeroform body is not only comfortably roomy for six passengers, but is said to be the safest and strongest ever developed for a motor car; and twin airplane type ignition called "Flying Power," assures unfailing starting, complete combustion which reduces gasoline consumption and increases speed and the practical elimination of crankcase oil dilution.

Because it is most apparent to the casual observer, the new Aeroform body design of the 1935 Nash will probably elicit the most comment from visitors, for Nash engineers have proven that advanced streamlining in addition to being efficient, can also be beautiful. The car is modeled in graceful and smart curves from front bumper to tail light; every inch streamlined for style, beauty, speed and economy, in exactly the same manner as a modern airplane. The windshield slopes back at an angle of 33 degrees. The back slopes at an angle of 35 degrees. There is no spare tire or other obstruction to prevent the air from rushing over the top and sliding off the rear, practically without drag. The spare tire, together with the tool kit, is carried under the rear deck in a compartment where there is also plenty of room for baggage.

In addition to its streamlining, the all-steel, one-piece Aeroform body has other features to recommend it. The lines which curve gracefully both horizontally and vertically add to the interior roominess making every model a six passenger car. Three passengers may ride in comfort on the front seat, which lacks only four inches of being five feet wide. These curving lines also contribute greatly strength and safety of the body because they tend to dissipate the force of any blow or pressure exerted at any point on its outward surface.

Turning their attention to passenger comfort, Nash engineers have done a number of things to attain a smoother, more pleasant ride. They lengthened the wheelbase 4 inches, and moved the motor forward over the front axle. This automatically provided room to bring the back seat passengers forward so they sit ahead of the rear axle instead of above it, and it also redistributed the weight of the car so that it is exact balance front and rear instead of being heavier at one end than at the other.

But mid-section seating and balanced weight were not enough, and so the springs were re-designed. Previously, all leaf-type springs have been much shorter in front than in the rear with the result that the front springs bounced with a short, jerky motion while the longer rear springs had a slower "rate." This variation in "rates" of the two springs caused back seat pitching, just as the stiff front legs and the kicking hind legs of a bucking horse gives a pitching ride to the man in the saddle.

Still another feature contributing to passenger comfort is a mechanical device which would not ordinarily be considered in the "comfort" category. It is the automatic cruising gear which engineers have developed for the 1935 Nash. While one of its chief functions is to give greater operating economy, by reducing the engine speed, it also benefits passenger comfort by eliminating much of the engine noise and vibration which is known to be a large factor in producing fatigue.

As the car speed reaches 40 miles per hour, this gear comes into play and immediately the engine speed is reduced although the speedometer continues to register 40 miles an hour. When the car speed drops to 30 miles an hour, the cruising gear is automatically released from duty and the conventional gear once more takes up the job.

Factory tests have shown that with this new gear in operation, approximately five more miles per gallon of gasoline, and a saving of 60 percent in oil consumption is attained at speeds of 40 miles per hour or better. But this is not the only saving, as can be realized when it is known that at 60 miles an hour in conventional gear the motor is making 3200 r.p.m.'s, whereas with the cruising gear it is making only 2000 r.p.m.'s.

Although last year's models seemed to provide everything for passenger comfort, body designers have found several ways of adding to the luxury of the interiors on the 1935 cars.

Roominess, of course, heads the list with ample room for six passengers having been provided in all models. There is also more headroom and legroom than in last year's car. In addition there are arm rests for front seat passengers; the gear shift lever is moved so it will not interfere with anyone's comfort even when three ride in front; real sedan comfort is provided in two-door sedan models by an undivided 3-passenger front seat and adjustment control of the front seat has been simplified.

Changes have also been made in the instrument panel, but the package compartment on the right hand side, and the radio control panel on the left, remain as before.

In their presentation of the new Nash cars, factory executives and distributors take considerable pride in pointing out innumerable chassis features, many of which are exclusive with Nash. Foremost among these is the twin (airplane type) ignition which is called, appropriately enough Flying Power. Only Nash, of all American car builders, has taken the step of providing two spark plugs for each cylinder, although the U. S. Department of Commerce requires all commercial planes of over 40 horsepower to use the twin-ignition system.

Nash engineers claim that Flying Power results in 22 percent more engine power, 2 more miles per gallon of gas, and 5 more miles top speed, because two spark plugs explode all the gas in the cylinder and none of it escapes, unused, out the exhaust pipe.

Because Nash is so proud of its "built-to-stay-built" reputation, there are any number of other "inside" facts to be learned. For instance, crank pins are hollow drilled in order to remove about three tons of centrifugal load from main bearings. All moving parts of the motor are lubricated under full pressure, and connecting rods are rifle-bored so oil can be forced to cylinder walls and piston pins. Aluminum pistons are used because, being lighter than cast iron, they permit quicker acceleration and dissipate heat faster. And in order to prevent the aluminum piston from expanding faster than the cast-iron cylinder, Nash uses patented Invar struts in its pistons, thus maintaining a nice, tight fit at all times between piston and cylinder walls.

So it goes throughout the entire chassis. But space does not permit of running the entire gamut of mechanical contrivances with which these cars are fitted. The principle ones have been mentioned, and the others may be easily discovered by those interested because each Nash employee is as eager to explain them as if he, personally, had invented each one.

ATTEND SCOUT DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Krause, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Freund, Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Hess, Supt. and Mrs. C. H. Duker, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ferwerda, Mr. and Mrs. Ray McGee, Harold Bacon and Scout leader M. L. Schoenholtz were among the 135 Scouters and Scout parents and leaders who assembled at the high school gym in Woodstock Thursday night for an enthusiastic dinner meeting.

H. B. Megran, of Harvard was chairman of the meeting and talks were given by George Driesbach Scout executive, who spoke of the Boy Scout work, and Tom B. Gill, Rockford attorney, an enthusiastic Scout booster, who talked on the broad and always interesting subject of "Boys."

The report of the year was read by the county executive, R. L. Ellis, and gave evidence of a very successful year.

Local Scouts are now planning to attend the Merit Badge exposition to be held at Marengo on Jan. 25 and 26.

There will be thirty booths where the Scouts of Boone and McHenry counties will show the many things they learn in the Merit badge program.

The McHenry Scouts will demonstrate the requirements that a Scout must complete to receive badges in photography, camping and basketry.

Romantic Ensemble

The romantic ensemble is made with a long and flowing cape. The ostrich feathers that trim it at the neck add to its charm. Shirrings at the waist of the gown give it a slender look. It is of dark green chiffon.

COUNTY MEETING

A county meeting of the Home Bureau will be held at the auditorium on Jan. 25, Miss Ward, of the extension staff of the University of Illinois, will be present and speak on "Business Practices."

There will be a morning session at 11 o'clock, which will be given over to reports of delegates, who attended the meeting at Urbana.

A pot-luck dinner will be served at noon, with each one bringing their own table service, which includes plate, cup and silverware, and a dish to pass. Coffee will be served by the McHenry unit at five cents a cup.

This meeting will be open to all and it is hoped that local women will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear Miss Ward.

McHenry unit is honored in having this city selected for the county meeting and it is hoped that members and friends will attend.

GIRL SCOUT EDITION

My, what a nice meeting we had this week. Court of Honor meeting was held before the scout meeting.

Patrols discussed new matters. The third patrol corner is furnished now with the furniture brought by the girls.

After passing tests we played Red Rover. Old Solomen Levite, never sang his song with more pep than we did.

At the patrol meeting of the first patrol at the home of our patrol leader, Betty Althoff, "Cootie" was played, the prize being won by Ethel Althoff. A patrol name was chosen, the "Busy Beaver" patrol, with the motto, Busy as a Beaver. Lunch was served and enjoyed by all.
