The War Summary.

Admiral Sampson is said to have forced the harbor at Santiago, blowing out the Merrimac, sunk last week and attacked Cervera's ships, sinking two of them and sustaining the despatch states, some damage to one of his own ships. The word comes from Kingston, Jamaica.

The monitor Monterey and collier Brutus sailed from San Francisco yesterday for Manila.

Admiral Dewey officially reports that the insurgents in the Philippines have scored several victories over the Spanish and have taken prisoners fifty officers and 1,800 men.

Reports regarding the military occupation of Santiago are conflicting, but on the whole there is reason to believe that 5,000 United States troops have effected a landing in the vicinity of the city.

United States officers who were in the battle of Manilla have arrived at San Francisco and give a graphic story of the affair.

Despatches from the Philippines indicate that the native auxiliaries of the Spanish are deserting by hundreds and Manilla will likely soon fall into the hands of the rebels.

The Spanish Minister of Foreign affairs has sent a note to the different powers of Europe declaring that the United States violated international law by capturing Spanish vessels before a declaration of war and in other respects.

Various persons held under United States laws for filibustering in Cuba before the outbreak of the war were discharged yesterday.

A disguised Spanish spy endeavored to take Commodore Schley's squadron into Santiago harbor with the supposed object of having the ships blown up by the submarine mines.—Globe.

Scalded to Death.

Kingston, Ont., June 5.—The two-year-old son of Mrs. William Kemp, Division street, was yesterday left with Mrs. Gallivan, a neighbour, while the mother went to market. The child was playing about the house, and in some way tumbled into a tub of boiling water. Before the accident was discovered the boy was so badly scalded that death resulted in a few hours.—Mail and Empire.

Killed by "X" Rays.

Middleton, N. Y., June 4.—Patrick J. Hardy, who was examined under "x" rays at Loomis sanitarium a few months ago, and who claimed that his flesh, skin, and internal organs were shrivelled under the exposure, is dead. He was confined to his bed, and brought suit for $20,000 against the sanitarium. Three weeks ago he was removed to the county almshouse, where he died.—Mail and Empire.

UNCONSCIOUSLY HUMOROUS.

Some of the Amusing Stories In Which John Stetson Figured.

It was Stetson who on landing from the steamer after a stormy voyage exclaimed, "Thank God, I am once more on vice versa!"

Mrs. Billington on her return from America brought home many Stetson stories. One of the best had reference to the sudden necessity of enlarging the programme of a variety entertainment. His manager had, as he believed, successfully filled the bill. Stetson arrived on the scene in the midst of the opening numbers. "What is on now?" he asked. "Well, it's just a pretty, sentimental duet by the brothers So-and-so." "Sentimental, eh?" said Stetson. "That's good." It was one of those duets that have supplied George Grossmith and other entertainers with some of their best burlesques of part singing. The tenor asks a vocal question, the baritone replies—a kind of litany, with variations. In this case the tenor was a feeble looking youth of 50, with one of those voices that may be music or an escape of gas.

Stetson stood at the wing and contemplated the duetists—youthful tenor of 50, aged baritone with the manners of 20 and such a wig!

"Where are the friends of my youth?" began the tenor in pathetic tones that hardly reached the orchestra.

"Where are the loved ones gone?" responded the baritone in a gloomy gurgle. "Farther back," said Stetson from the wing. "They'll hear you better lower down the stage." Having thus got them well out of the way of the curtain, "Ring down," he said to the prompter at his elbow, and the drop fell. "On with the next number in the programme," he said, "and send those two gentlemen to my room. How long are you engaged for?" he asked them. "Two weeks, Mr. Stetson," they answered with deferential humility. "How much?" "Fifteen dollars a week."

"Very well, my poor fellows. There's your money," he said. "I won't detain you. Go and find the friends of your youth." When you tell this story, it is necessary that you should sing the lines to their right tune and with characteristic imitation of two played out voices, and bear in mind how cynically courteous Stetson would be in commanding the faded duetists to go straightaway in quest of those friends of their youth.—Newcastle Chronicle.

BEFORE THE BULLFIGHT.

A Solemn Chapel Scene When the Toreador Kneels In Prayer.

"Now," said my friend, "we will go to the chapel." "The chapel?" "Why, yes, the next room is a small chapel where every toreador goes before the fight to pray and ask God and his patron saint that his life be spared and that he be given the courage and strength to take that of the bull." We entered the small chapel, at one end of which was an altar covered with flowers and lighted candles, in the middle a crucifix, and behind a painting of the Virgin Mary. One of the toreadors came in and, kneeling at the altar, began to pray. What a contrast! This man, covered with silk and gold, kneeling in front of the Christ, asking for the protection of the kind and sweet lover of humanity and asking (in order to kill) the protection of him to whom all lives are dear and precious.

"You see the man there kneeling and praying?" said my friend. "Well, he is Manuel Garcia, generally called 'Espartero,' the greatest living toreador. He is the first espada of Spain and is celebrated for his great courage. When he sticks his sword in the bull's neck, he never jumps aside, as other toreadors do—no, he wants to stop the bull there to kill him on the spot. As it is nearly impossible, he has often been seriously wounded by dying bulls. He has saved over 100,000 pesetas. He will retire from the ring a rich man in another year."

The man had finished praying. He left the chapel, shaking hands with his friends, and I could not help thinking, "A rich man in one year—yes, provided"— But I did not dare finish my thought even to myself, and, raising my eyes to the crucifix, I murmured involuntarily, "God spare him!"—A. B. de Guerville.

Quite the Thing.

"James, bring me some clean linen."

"Alas, sir, you have none! The laundryman refuses to hand over until he is given the money for that last batch."

"Well, why don't you give him the money?"

"There isn't a farthing in the house, sir."

"Well, well! Am I broke?"

"Yes, sir, absolutely."

"Dear me! I suppose I had better get up and see about it. Bring me my suit, James."

"Gone, sir. Everything pawned except the old frayed frock coat you were going to give the housekeeper."

"Great heavens! I'll stay in bed all day first! Get me something to eat, anyhow."

"There's nothing in the house, sir, and the restaurant keeper refuses to let us have anything more without cash."

"By Jove! Nothing to wear but dirty linen and a frayed frock coat, nothing to eat and no money! Good gracious! I can never look my friends in the face again!"

"Why, certainly you can, sir, and cut a greater dash than ever before," urged the faithful James. "Tell 'em you are a Bohemian and are doing this in obedience to the artistic instinct."—Strand Magazine.

Sincerity.

In life sincerity is the sure touchstone of character. The good and valuable man is he who strives to realize day by day his own sincere conceptions of true manhood.

Thousands are struggling to exhibit what some one else admires to reach the popular standard, to be or appear to be respectable and honorable, but few make it their aim to live thoroughly up to their own individual convictions of what is right and good.

Carlyle well says: "At all turns a man who will do faithfully needs to believe firmly. If he have to ask at every turn the world's suffrage, if he cannot dispense with the world's suffrage and make his own suffrage serve, he is a poor eye servant, and the work committed to him will be mistone."—New York Ledger.

Deadly Odd Number.

"Are you superstitious about the number 13?"

"That's what! I used to earn $13 a week, and now I get only $10."—Detroit Free Press.

They're Too Real.

"I used to have a great relish for practical jokes."

"Don't you still enjoy them?"

"No, not since I'm married."—Chicago Record.

June Wedding.

On the evening of Wednesday, June 1, Mr. Wm. J. Kennedy, of Emily, was united in marriage to Miss Hannah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Thurston, Rev. G. A. Kenney, of Dunsford, officiating. The bride was the recipent of many handsome presents. Mr. Kennedy recently purchased a farm north of Omemee, where he and his bride have come to reside. The Mirror wishes them happiness and prosperity.

The Omemee and Lebanon Methodist pulpits were occupied by Rev. Mr. Leggett Sunday. His sermons were very much appreciated by the congregations.

BETHEL.

Special to the Mirror.

The Ice cream social under the auspices of the League was a decided success on Tuesday evening last We were pleased to meet our former pastor, Rev. J. M. Garbutt, and hear him address us once more. Rev. G. Robinson accompanied Mr. Garbutt and gave an address, and together with the music rendered by the choir, we had an excellent programme. The ice cream and cake coming in after the program added greatly to the evening's enjoyment.

Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, of Melrose, occupied the pulpit on Sunday evening last in the absence of Rev. R. M. Pope, who had gone to conference, and was heartily welcomed by the people.

Mr. G. Switzer is erecting a large kitchen in addition to his already commodious dwelling, which will, when finished, present a handsome appearance, and will afford all the comforts and conveniences necessary for the enjoyment of life.

Mr and Mrs. T. M. Caldwell are spending this week visiting friends and relatives in Perrytown.

Rev. W. Cragg paid his brother Harry a visit on Tuesday last and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Kerr.

There will be a union pic-nic in connection with Bethel Sunday School, on June 15th, in the grove opposite the church. Middle Road and Ops Sunday Schools will be invited to unite with us, and also our own public school together with Mr. Hooper's and Mr. Houghton's schools.

Rev. John Garbutt has returned from Conference, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. Switzer.
