NEW IDEAS FOR COMBINING FABRICS

Simple lines and high contrasts characterize the frock pictured to the left. Plain crêpe satin and figured crêpe de Chine combine to make it up. The wide flares which give the model its fashionable silhouette are achieved by side panels which graduate from beneath the arms to the lower edge of the skirt. The neck is in round outline, back and front and the long sleeves flare over the wrists. Medium size requires 2¾ yards 36-inch figured and 1¼ yard plain material.

Circular panels of Georgette hemmed with ribbon to correspond in color with the figures in the crêpe de Chine used for the development of the frock give this model distinction. The round neckline is finished with a band of ribbon under which the dress is gathered at either side of the front. The long, close-fitting sleeves have darts at the wrists. Medium size requires 3¼ yards 36-inch figured and 1½ yard plain material, with 2 yards of ribbon.

Mrs. Pelling had been staying with her daughter, Mrs. E. G Robinson, the rectory, Schomberg, and had been ill for a considerable period with heart trouble. The end came suddenly on Sunday evening, but, fortunately, without undue suffering. Though only an occasional visitor to Schomberg, Mrs. Pelling had made many friends by her quiet earnestness and friendly disposition. She possessed a sincere and quiet faith, intensely earnest, yet unobstrusive. There mourn her loss two sons, Frederick of Sarnia, Chas. H. of Toronto, and a daughter, Mrs. E. G. Robinson, the rectory, Schomberg.

On Thursday, the 14th, the regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Azor Robertson. Fifty-one members were present. After the usual routine business was disposed of a splendid program was rendered. Miss Ruth Martin gave a beautiful instrumental solo; Miss Norah Greyke an Irish recitation; Mrs. Sawdon a vocal solo; Mrs. Kay a paper entitled "The Joy of Living," and Mrs. Wm Marchant gave a report of the annual district meeting held at Newmarket recently. All of these numbers were roundly applauded. Mrs. Martin and Miss Hazel Dale, hostesses for the afternoon, had the tables nicely laid in the dining room, decorated with sweet peas and roses. Needless to say, a most enjoyable afternoon was appreciated. A vote of thanks was tendered the hostesses and all those who had taken pains to make the meeting a success. The country homes are so beautiful just now that it is a treat in itself to get out and enjoy nature. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Marchant on Aug. 11th. The Beeton Women's Institute will give the program. Every woman welcome

FOR HUNTERS OF HAPPINESS

Happiness is not a single gem—a precious stone so rare that all search after it is in vain. Happiness is a mosaic composed of many smaller stones. Some of them seem trivial, colorless, commonplace; but joined together and judiciously viewed in their relationship to a beautiful pattern for every life, each glows with a charm and preciousness never before suspected.

Human experience has shown that the happiest people in the world are not those going up and down the land searching for happiness as if it were some jewel, carefully concealed and covered up. Rather they are those who have learned to accept each event cheerfully and courageously, with the conviction that it is part of a wise plan and necessary to its completion and beautification.

"I never knew until I got a car," said the bishop, "that profanity was so prevalent."

"Do you hear much of it on the road?"

"Why," replied the bishop, "nearly everybody I bump into swears dreadfully."—The Open Road.

"JUST ONE WOMAN"

When we have tried to enlist women to some specific piece of work, we have heard them fall back on this belittling self-analysis, "I am just one woman, what can I do?" How many women do you want to be, and what more can you ever hope to be than one woman?"

"A lady with a lamp shall stand in the great history of this land." Just one woman—Florence Nightingale. Yet the Red Cross movement has sprung from that English nurse, who did not sit down and bemoan the fact that she was "just one woman." She went from cot to cot in the wards trying to alleviate the sufferings of the wounded soldiers.

Just one woman was Abraham Lincoln's stepmother. But it was the torch she held before her stepson that enabled him to carry on for the abolition of slavery.

Just one woman was Dwight L. Moody's wife—but she taught her husband to write and sent him out the greatest evangelist of the nineteenth century.

Just one woman, knowing the power of banded ill, she felt that love was stronger still and organized for doing good, the world's united womanhood. Francis E. Willard's was the first effort to unite women into a force that would make them a power in the world.

Mathew Arnold has prophiested that "If the day ever dawned when women came together purely and simply for the breaking down of banded ill and the uplifting of the human race, then the world will have a power such as it has never known."

The first streak of daybreak came when Frances E. Willard founded the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and over the bridge which she built have gone the women of the other women's organizations, as they too came into existence, and now at the end of fifty years, we realize that there is a destiny that makes us sisters. None goes her way alone. It is true of organization, as well as of individuals, all that we send into the lives of others comes back into our own, and with that thought entering into national consciousness we see signs of the sunrise for which the world is waiting—the linking up of women's organizations will prove the most powerful influene in the world to-day.

Take a snowflake—you flick it on your clothing—yet multiply that snowflake and let them pile up close together and side by side, and you have what we call a snowdrift—the most powerful engines on our railroads are sometimes powerless before the combined unit.

What is a grain of sand? Yet many grains of sand may prove a cyclone, before which men stand powerless

If I could only put this simple truth straight into the minds of 862,000 women in Ontario, then no Government could stand out against us. The women of Ontario hold the key to the situation and the women of Ontario are made up of just you and me, multiplied many times.

Emmerson says that "the greatest organization is but the lengthened shadow of a single person" and he also says there are no great and small. God put each one of us here for a purpose. The only difference is that some have lit the divine spark given them and others have not.

You are planting flower seeds these days. You look at the seeds in your hand. Suppose you decide to keep them in your hand, what would the result be—they would shrivel up, lie dormant and be of no use. But you plant them and they grow and increase and perpetuate themselves. And you plant many kinds of seeds—yet you never heard of one seed being jealous of another. Each seeks to do its own work.

It is the little pronoun "you" that in the final analysis decides what Ontario shall do when it comes to casting our ballots for the safeguarding of the temperance legislation we have. Lady Astor says, "I do not say that women will change the world, but I do say that they can if they want to." We want to keep Ontario from slipping back because if Ontario goes back, it will mean a setback all along the line. It will retard temperance work the world over. Let us, therefore, work for home protection. Let us stand behind the Ontario Temperance Act for the safeguarding of our boys and girls.

If we vote to elect a Government who would have our Province go into the liquor business by way of Government Control, then we must sell to our own boys and girls. They must be our customers.

The British nation is the best nation on the face of the globe. Canada is her brightest gem. Ontario the banner Province. Can we give our Province over to booze? And that is what will happen if the Government decide on local option. The centres voting wet would then be allowed to have liquor. Do you want Ontario to be the Mecca of the roughs and toughs? If not, we must safeguard our Ontario Temperance Act. Our ballots are the weapons with which we fight. My prayer is that God may be with you as you vote again.

Jette R. Walker,
Chairman Ontario Women's Prohibition Committee.

CRITICISM

Our newspapers are full of it these days. One newspaper astonished at the Customs revelation blames one political party and another newspaper with equal vehemence declares our sufferings are due to another political group.

All this hue and cry is made in the name of politics—until a noble word has come to stand for the manipulations with which political parties sought control of public offices and public funds. Too often unprincipled methods have been resorted to for party ends rather than for the best interests of the country—with little thought of the higher political morality, without which no nation can endure.

We pull to pieces this Government, and that, for various shortcomings, but after all where does the responsibility really lie?

We read and talk about men in public life and fall upon them as if we would smash things politically, and we do it as though our hands were clean. We pass by on the other side and cry, "Unclean, unclean."

We fail to place the fault where we can deal with it—the fault is in ourselves.

We are the Government, members of parliament are our representatives. Let us criticize ourselves for what has been, and do it constructively, rather than destructively—as Canadians we must contribute to the best essentials of our nation by standing for higher things—by cultivating a superior loyalty to the land we love through higher standards of citizenship.

No nation can endure without developing steadily, a lofty political character. It may be rich in natural resources—but no nation can prosper on that alone. It must have more than that. In the hearts and homes of the nation there must be deeply implanted a love for country, a love for honor and freedom, which comes next to love of God.

The twentieth century is evolving a religion of Christian service to our fellowmen and we must translate that religion into non-partisanship and be willing to dig down and dig up our own party politics if necessary for the nation's sake.

The men and women who receive their inspiration through the churches should be the highest type of patriots, who stand firm for peace, freedom, justice and national righteousness. To this end they should be very much alive to principles and policies of candidates for parliament—and be prepared to support only those who pledge themselves to respect the wishes of the people who place them there.

In the final analysis the ballot decides the destiny of our nation. Women and young people are the great majority of the electorate and the time is ripe for them to demand a truly patriotic statesmanship at Ottawa.

Only righteousness exalteth a nation and no nation can be truly great unless it takes God into national life.

All voters in the polling booth should ask themselves whether they are helping or hindering "God's Kingdom on Earth"—as they mark their ballots.

We must have representatives who will submerge their own selfish ambitions and make them subservient to the best interests of the nation.

Let us re-consecrate to the task of mobilizing the finest statesmanship inside and outside the political parties and elect men and women who will do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God.

Jette R. Walker,
Chairman Ontario Women's Prohibition Committee.

Satisfaction in Selection

There exists in all of us a certain amount of native vanity, in that we feel that our judgment in matters affecting our own requirements is superior to that of a stranger. And this is quit in order and absolutely justified. We know the requirements of our own business as to quality required; we have, by experience and actual practice, concluded that a certain grade, color or quality suits our purpose best.

In Printing

We have made our choice, and usually know pretty well what we want and how we want it. Co-operation in securing this can best be obtained from the home printer, for it is his desire, in fact his duty, to see to it that he secures for you just what you want, and that he carries this regularly in stock. In the printing, also, your wishes can be carried out by consultation and co-operation.

The carpet-bagger, however, will always try to sell many times your ordinary requirements; he will most likely try to work off a job lot of paper. And as for style of work, since there is no chance to consult, and as no proof is submitted, the customer must take it as supplied, regardless of his own ideas.

Therefore, in order to get what you want, and when you want it, in the matter of your printing requirements, consult
