Inferiority of Japanese Women Taught From Time Immemorial.

Travelers have noticed how difficult it is to gain entrance into a Japanese family. The female members are merely introduced to the guest and there the acquaintance ends. For this reason the Japanese woman has always remained a fascinating mystery. She may have ideas and tastes, but they are not to be shared with the world at large. The astute head of the family sees to this; he knows perfectly well that if the truth concerning the organization of his household were to be known, he would be considered a very inferior being, and his national vanity would suffer in consequence.

To begin with the inferiority of woman has been taught by philosophers and moralists from time immemorial.

"A woman should regard her husband as her lord, and serve him with all the reverence and all the adoration of which she is capable." So said Kaibara, the great teacher of the 17th century. He said a great deal more in this same strain, threatening women with celestial vengeance should they dare to disobey their lords and masters, or have any thoughts other than how they could best serve and please them. According to this great philosopher women should practice what he terms "a triple obedience"; to her husband and his parents, first of all; a young girl should be completely subservient to her father, and a widow subservient to her son.

This inferiority of woman is founded on the principle of her moral, psychological and even physiological inferiority. "The five greatest maladies of the feminine mind," says Kaibara, "are indocility, ill-humor, love of gossip, jealousy and stupidity. Without a doubt seven or eight women out of every ten are afflicted with all these maladies hence their inferiority as regards men." Confucianism makes of woman an eternal child, an incurable invalid. Buddhism treats her more severely still; not content with denying her reason, it holds her to be diabolical, more wicked even than weak.

Prince's Badge.

The popular tradition associated with the well-known ostrich-feather badge and motto of the Prince of Wales is that they were won at Crecy by the Black Prince from King John of Bohemia. This is, however, tradition only, and is not supported by any contemporary comment or confirmation. The truth is that the origin of the device is unknown. The crest of the King of Bohemia was not an ostrich plume, but the wing of an eagle. Moreover, on the Black Prince's tomb in Canterbury Cathedral the ostrich feathers are employed, by his own direction, as a badge of peace, and it seems scarcely likely that he would have so particularized a device won in battle. Ostrich feathers were popular as badges in those days. The Black Prince sometimes wore three and sometimes one, and so did other princes. In its present form the badge of the Prince of Wales does not occur earlier than the monument of Prince Arthur in Worcester Cathedral, in the reign of Henry VII. On the Canterbury monument to the Black Prince the feathers are not grouped as a plume.

An End to Extravagance.

The mother of a certain pretty seventeen-year-old girl was having a talk with Edith's father the other day about Edith's coming out party. The father, be it explained, has recently made his fortune, and he is sometimes loath to part with any of it.

"One thing is certain," the mother declared emphatically, "I will not allow Edith to come out until she can do it well. She must have the best debut or none."

The father nodded.

"That's all right," he admitted. "She can have this one, but I want you both to understand it's the first, last and only debut I'll ever buy her."

Vandeleur Happenings

East Grey District Division S. O. T. held their district meeting in the school house here on Tuesday afternoon and evening of last week. There was a goodly number present at the afternoon meeting with quite a sprinkling of delegates from the divisions throughout the district. There was a small attendance at the evening meeting owing to the downpour of rain, which continued throughout the evening. Mr. McAslin of Mill Creek ably filled the chair and an excellent program was rendered by the Vandeleur Division. Speeches were delivered by Messrs. Wm. Cullis, J. I. Graham, J. M. Davis, and Rev. Wilkinson, district secretary. The next district meeting will be held at Thornbury.

The dwelling of Michael Farrel, Egremont, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Farrel was in Mount Forest that evening, and his children, who were motherless, had gone to bed leaving a lamp lighted. It is supposed the lamp exploded and set fire to the house. The children clambered out of an upstairs window in their night clothes and nothing else was saved. The house was a frame one and was insured for $400.—Confederate.

A remarkable story of endurance comes from the vicinity of Kemble. On 14th August, five weeks ago, Mr. Gardner, who is well known throughout Kepple, missed a yearling steer from his herd. After several days had been spent in unsuccessful search it was given up as lost, though all hope of its recovery was abandoned, as it was thought possible the animal might have joined the cattle that were grazing along the shore. However nothing was seen or heard of the lost steer until Monday, when Mr. Gardner, visiting the back of his farm, heard the lowing of a beast apparently coming from underground, and hurrying to the spot whence the sound came found the long lost steer imprisoned in a crevice of the rock about two feet wide and ten feet deep. There it had been for at least thirty-two days without food or water. With the help of Mr. D. Davidson, his son, and Mr. Ferguson, Mr. Gardner soon released the animal from its prison; and though it was much emaciated, it was able, after it had been given some food and water, to walk to the barn, a distance of about a half a mile. The animal seems to be none the worse of its trying experience, and is apparently doing well.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color, and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

An old arm chair that was used by Sir John A. Macdonald during the four years that he practised law in Toronto has been presented to Mr. R. L. Borden by Mr. George A Kingston of Toronto. The chair was in the office of Macdonald and Marsh on Toronto Street, and later passed into the possession of Mr. Wm. Lount. On his transfer to the bench, the chair was handed over to Mr. Kingston, who was retiring. It is an old-fashioned, comforable maple frame, and has recently been re-covered in heavy dark leather. Walkerton

It costs 7c per day to feed a prisoner at the Walkerton jail, according to a report just issued by Jailer McKechnie. People who claim that the price of living is going up will not be able to substantiate their statements by referring to the jailer's figures. And the humorous part of it is that most of the prisoners are fatter when they leave than when they enter the institution. To increase a man's weight on 7c. a day is certainly a feat that few know the secret of.

Not since Brant produced the big Waechter steer or since Walkerton gave birth to the five legged one, has anything more curious come to light in the steer line than that now on exhibition at Mr. John Reutz's farm near Dunkeld. The latter animal has two tails, perfectly formed and capable of doing great service at fly time. With two tails swishing its back, the steer is able to crop its grass in fattening comfort, while the other members of the herd who are not so liberally supplied in this line grow thin with envying this two-tailed wonder. The animal would certainly be an attractive feature for a zoological garden.
