Mrs. Wm. Boyd visited Mrs. J. Wilson of Beaverdale last week.

Mr. Herb. Wiley, accompanied by his sister, Miss Olive, and Miss Edith Scott, were guests of Mr. Will and Miss Ethel Heath, on the first of the week.

Mr. Robert Irwin visited friends at Elmhedge for a few days recently.

We understand with regret that our efficient teacher, Miss E. Scott, has decided to relinquish professional duties in our school at Easter.

Mr. Robert Ptolemy of Walters Falls, accompanied by his mother, visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Boyd on Friday last.

Mr. J. Lougheed of Wodehouse, originator and promoter of the proposed rural telephone line from Rocklyn to Wodehouse, Riverdale and Markdale, was in our burg on Monday soliciting subscribers. We trust that the citizens of this vicinity will be enthusiastic boosters of this stupendous project.

Misses E. Scott and N. Stephenson were the guests of Mrs. R. Brown, town line A. and E., recently.

Our genial old bachelor, Mr. Faulkner, whose eyesight is somewhat defective and about 85 years young, had a thrilling experience on Saturday night last. About 7 o'clock in the evening he took his departure from D. McIntosh's for his home about half a mile north, and, according to his own statement, when about half way on his return trip he wandered from the straight and narrow way into a ten-acre field, where he chased himself around all night in ten feet of snow, vainly endeavoring to relocate the highway. Next morning about 7 o'clock he arrived at the home of Mr. McIntosh in an exasperated and exhausted condition, but otherwise none the worse for his nocturnal stunt. Had Mr. Faulkner not been a man of remarkable physical ability, grit and determination, he undoubtedly would have been gathered to his fathers.

MERRIEELD—HENNING

One of the prettiest and most impressing weddings of the season was celebrated at the cosy home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Henning on Wednesday evening, March 6, when their eldest daughter Martha was united in matrimony to Mr. Chas. Merrifield of Beaverdale. Promptly at five o'clock the bride entered the profusely decorated parlor, leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of an appropriate selection from Lohengrin, ably rendered by Mr. Robt. Gibson of east Riverdale. The cermony took place under a beautiful floral arch of roses, evergreens and wedding bells, Rev. Mr. Phalen of Markdale, being the officiating clergyman. Mr. Robert Henning, brother of the bride, supported the groom and Miss L. Merrifield of Beaverdale, gracefully assisted the bride, who was charmingly attired in a becoming costume of white silk trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion, and carried a gorgeous bouquet of cream roses and maiden hair ferns. Following the joyous reception, the multitude of guests adjourned to the dining room, where a dainty and delicious wedding dinner was served, after which a most enjoyable evening was spent in achieving the butterfly whirl until the approaching dawn. The popular young bride was the recipient of a large number of elegant and costly presents, which attested the high esteem in which the young couple are held in their home vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. Merrifield are jolly, sociable young people, and begin married life with the best wishes of a host of friends for a happy and prosperous future.

May their years be full of sunny days
And life's own skies be blue;
And the future ever see
Their fond, fair hopes come true.

Address and Presentation

On Thursday night of last week, prior to their departure for Idaho, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fisher of Rock Mills were waited on by a number of friends and neighbors and presented with the following address, accompanied by a purse containing about $35 in gold, a jewel set and fountain pen:

Mr. Thomas Fisher and Family,—We, your friends or neighbors, learning with deep regret of your intended depart from our neighborhood to make your future home in Idaho, have gathered in your home this evening to spend one more pleasant evening with you before you leave us, to express our deep regret at your departure and in a small way to show our appreciation of yourselves. We wish to present you with this purse of gold, jewel set and fountain pen, as a slight token of our esteem for you, not on account of its intrinsic value but as a souvenir of our respect, as we have always found you good neighbors, ready to lend a helping hand, and to assist whenever called upon to do so. As you look back on the days spent in Artemesia may you rest assured that whatever may be our lot, we shall not forget the times spent with you. While sorry to part with you, we wish you happiness and rosperity in your new home, and if we should not be permitted to meet again in this world, we hope and pray that it may be our happy lot to meet in that happy and where parting is no more. Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors—Alex. English, J. O. Allison.

Mr. Fisher was taken completely by surprise and was unable properly to thank the donors. He desires The Advance to convey his grateful thanks to the friends who so kinkly remembered him.

CAUGHT A TARTAR.

Retort of a Witness That Broke Up a Cross Examination.

"The purpose of a cross examination in a law case," said a judge, "is to try to break down the testimony of a witness, but sometimes even the smartest lawyer catches a tartar and instead of breaking down the witness he himself is all broken up. I will never forget an answer made to me by a Hebrew witness who was the complainant in a burglary case in a county court. He charged the young gentleman whom I was defending with breaking open the door of his apartment above his tailor shop. On direct examination he testified that the alleged burglar had broken the chain on the inside of the door. I started in to cross examine with that ease of manner which characterizes every lawyer who has a good point up his sleeve. In my sweetest tones I asked:

"'Now, my dear sir, you say this boy broke in your door?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'And you say he broke the chain that was fastened on the inside?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Now will you tell me how any man on the outside of a door could possibly unfasten a chain that was on the inside?'

"Quick as a flash he blurted out: 'How should I know? Vy don't you ask him? Dat's his business. I'm a tailor. He's a tief!'

"That cross examination came to a full stop then and there."—Brooklyn Eagle.

WANTED AN EXCHANGE.

A Curious Adventure In Which the Czar Nicholas Figured.

The Czar Nicholas was very fond of masquerade balls and one night appeared at one in the character of his Satanic majesty, with grinning face, horns and tail, and seemed to enjoy the character very much.

About 3 o'clock in the morning he went out and, throwing over him some furs, called a cab and ordered the coachman to take him to the Quai Anglais. Being very tired, he fell asleep. When he awoke he found the coachman had taken the wrong direction, for the Quai Anglais was in the most fashionable part of the city, while around him were only miserable hovels.

Nicholas began to remonstrate, but the driver, paying no heed to him, drove through a stone archway into a cemetery. Then, taking a long knife from his girdle, he opened the door of the cab and said:

"Give me your money and your furs or I will kill you."

"And do you give me your soul," cried Nicholas as he threw off his furs and disclosed his personification of the evil one.

Overcome with terror, the coachman fell senseless on the ground, while the emperor himself drove the cab back to town and afterward used more care in the selection of a coachman.

An Easy Medical Degree.

Time was when medical degrees were obtained at St. Andrews without all the difficulties of today, and the story is told concerning a learned professor of old, who had advised a particular student whom he had never seen in the flesh and of whose work he knew but little, to call upon him at his house so that he might be examined for his degree. The morning was a brilliant one, and the learned gentleman found it impossible to resist the attractions of the links. Before setting out, however, he had left a message with one of the maidservants, and a conversation like the following ensued on the arrival of the student at the appointed time: "Are you the gentleman who was to call this morning about a degree?" asked the girl on opening the door. "I am," was the reply. "Well," said the maid, "I was to tell you that it was all right. You have passed!"—Scotsman.

Not Just What He Said.

A well known parson, preaching to a crowded congregation at a church where in his younger days he had been curate, alluded to the many changes that had taken place. He contrasted the attendance with that of days gone by and remarked, "At one time in this church there was not a soul—er—person in the gallery."

Next day, in a report of the service which appeared in one of the local newspapers, the minister was reported to have said, "At one time in this church there was not a sober person in the gallery."—Exchange.

Address and Presentation

On the 11th inst. Mr. and Mrs. James Sproat of Ceylon, previous to their departure for Alberta, were waited on and presented wich an extension table and watch fob. About 70 friends and neighbors assembled and a pleasant evening was spent. Following is the address:

To Mr. and Mrs. James Sproat:

Dear Friends,—We, a few of your neighbors and well-wishers, have met at your home this evening to bid adieu before your departure to your new home. During your many years here you have both been bright and cheery neighbors, ever wearing a sunny smile of happiness and ready at all times to lend a helping hand to those needing it. We know your place will be hard to fill, but assure you that you can carry with you the confidence of having done all in your power for the success of those you are leaving behind. Language cannot express our feelings, so we have concluded we could not let you leave us without showing you in some other manner our feelings towards you. Please accept these tokens of remembrance from us, not for their intrinsic value but to have as a reminder of the many happy days we spent together, and we trust and pray that you may both live many years to enjoy their usefulness; and when you look upon them may you be reminded of the fact that every neighbor whose name is attached was your personal friend. We all unite in wishing you and your family continued happiness in your new home, and hope you both, as the heads of the family, may be spared for many years to rule wisely in the future as in the past.

May your home be as the roses,
Interspersed with sweet perfume,
And your long life, when it closes,
Find a bright, eternal home.

—YOUR NEIGHBORS

His hens were not laying fast enough to suit a chicken rancher out in Washington so he set himself to devise ways and means to increase their output. He set the hen house with paintings of nests full of eggs; he placed heaps of china eggs in all convenient corners and finally at fifteen minute intervals during the day he had a phonograph repeat the triumphal cackle of a hen who had just accomplished her chief duty and was telling about it. The result was surprising; the output is doubled and the hens still live. And this is not exaggeration, either.—Ex.

Capt. Wm. Tate Robertson, one of the pioneer captains of the upper lakes, died at his residence, Owen Sound, Sunday afternoon. For some time he has been in poor health and gave up active work on the lakes about ten years ago. Since then he has been, until the appointment of the American-Consul, Deputy American Consul. For the past three years he has been Harbormaster. He is survived by his widow, who was the third daughter of the late Judge Creasor. He was born in Chatham, but came to Owen Sound about 1863, first filling the position of purser on the old steamer Frances Smith, and on the death of his uncle, the late Capt. W. H. Smith, he became captain.

Kolapore

We are pleased to report the box social which was held in the Kalapore public school on the evening of March 15, a decided success. In spite of the bad roads a goodly number turned out, Meaford, Ravenna, Banks, Gibraltar, Collingwood and Feversham being well represented. We beg to thank our Feversham friends for their kindness in so ably assisting in the program. Much credit is due our teacher, Miss Jennie Hale, for the patience she exercised in preparing the very excellent program. The proceeds amounted to about $40, which will be applied to a new fence for the school grounds.

Bird fanciers of Meaford are much exercised over a disease which is taking off large numbers of their best fowl. S. McClain had the misfortune to lose 80 out of 100 birds in one week. The cause of the disease is a mystery.

Are You Weak, Bloodless, Anaemic?

You Can Be Cured of Poverty of the Blood Just Like Miss Everett Was.

Since the early ages, in all countries among all classes of people, anaemia has been one of the most pernicious conditions that affect mankind.

Writing from her home in Paisley, Mrs. Everett says:—"My daughter had just passed her sixteenth year, when she began to rapidly lose color and strength. Serious complications set in that made her family and friends most anxious. We were not only worried on account of her ill-health, but because she was likely to lose her years' work at the High school, where she was preparing for the profession of teaching. The doctor said it was 'Anaemia.' I knew the best remedy was Ferrozone—and made my daughter take two Ferrozone Tablets with every meal. The first box did little more than increase her appetite. But with the second box it was really delightful to watch the signs of returning health. Annie's face became sort of a yellowish at first—that deadly whiteness disappeared. But it wasn't long before a ruddy glow was perceptible in her cheeks, and real good color returned. All Annie's troubles were cured—she grew strong—vigorous—heavy in weight—feels and looks the picture of health."
