BELIEVES BUCKETING HAS RECEIVED ITS DEATH-BLOW

Solicitor of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Gives His Opinion on Recent Revision of the Exchange's Rules.

There is much consideration being given at present to the stock exchange situation. Many thing that the recent revision of the rules of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange will right evils that have been handicapping the progress of the exchange for some time past and that soon the market business will be back to something like normal. There is a belief that the public generally is anxious to get back into the market. Naturally those who made money in the market in times past would like to get back at the game and make some more. Of course, there were a number—probably a larger number than generally believed—who made money on the market. The idea that the brokers were the only people to make money on the market in stocks during the past few years certainly can scarcely be upheld by the facts of the case. If everybody had been losing money but the brokers the market naturally would have lost all its support before it did. Everybody would not continue losing money year in and year out. They couldn't have done so, even if they had so desired. On the other hand a large number of those who lost money are anxious to get back into the market so that they may recover their losses. That hope is always part of the game. Thus, it may be taken for granted that both the recent losers and the former winners are anxious for a general resumption of trading so that they may have a chance to make the odd dollar from this form of speculation. They have been so used to it that they feel lost without it.

While there may be a considerable desire for a more general resuming of trading on the market, there is also a rather widespread belief that the market will never be exactly what it was in the past few years. The recent changes in the by-laws of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange are believed to be likely to have very wide effect.

By the revision of the by-laws of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, ratified at a meeting of the members, the possibility of bucketing or the making of fictitious wash sales is completely eliminated and that part of the public which trades in mining stocks is assured of maximum protection in its dealings with brokers, according to A. J. Trebilcock, solicitor of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, who had much to do with drafting the new amendments.

"The new by-laws," said Mr. Trebilcock, "are the result of consultations with the attorney-general of Ontario and the attorneys-general of all the Canadian provinces in conjunction with the report of Messrs Clarkson and Edwards, auditors and accountants, who were employed by the Ontario government in an advisory capacity and who went to New York with representatives of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to study methods of trading on the New York Stock Exchange and New York Curb."

"Bucketing is the term which has never until this session of the Dominion House been clearly defined in the criminal code of the state of New York. For many years section 954 of the New York code has provided penalties for trading by brokers against customers' orders. A similar clause has now by amendment been inserted in the criminal code of Canada and the security frauds prevention act of Ontario and the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange under by-law 42 has included a ruling whereby no member house can make a practice of taking the opposite side of the market to its customers. In other words bucketing has been defined and prohibited.

"Fictitious or wash sales between brokers is likewise made an offence under by-law 62 section 12, which specifically prohibits it. Under by-law No. 11 section 3, is defined conduct which will be deemed as inconsistent with equitable principles of trade and a penalty of a heavy fine, suspension or expulsion is provided (a) for the making of fictitious transactions; (b) for misleading or attempting to mislead the board or committees of the exchange; (c) for upsetting the equilibrium of the market; (d) for bucketing; (e) for improper soliciting of orders; (f) for high pressure salesmanship, etc.

"The audit system now imposed on members of the exchange is as efficient an instrument as can be devised to enforce the new by-law," said Mr. Trebilcock. "On December 31 of each year a complete periodic audit is made of each member's books more comprehensive than anything in force in New York. In addition simultaneous audits will be made on any date chosen by the exchange auditor and without previously advising any exchange member or even the directors. The cost of these audits is paid by the exchange, which afterwards bills the members. The exchange will hold a lien against members' exchange seats until the amount is collected. From results of the first audit last December the average cost to each member will be approximately $1,400 a year. As there are 50 members this means approximately $84,000 annually."

Mr. Trebilcock also pointed out that every member must now keep a stock position book showing at the end of each day his long or short position in the market. This book will be checked at the time of each audit and the broker will know each day just where he stands, eliminating thereby the chances of sudden bankruptcy. "Every possible protection is afforded the public under the new regulations" in Mr. Trebilcock's opinion. "There is no other exchange anywhere," he said, "with more complete machinery for enforcing its by-laws and keeping a check on its members."

PROTESTS AGAINST FREE TEXT BOOKS AT COBALT

A rather unusual complaint was made to the Cobalt school board recently, Larry Stadelman, proprietor of the book and stationery store in Cobalt, objecting to the board's plan of supplying school books free to the pupils. This plan has been followed for years in Timmins and has met with general favour. The cost of education in the public schools has been reduced by the plan and greater uniformity given to the children in the matter of books and supplies. The cost to the parents is reduced, the expenditure being included in the general school levy. It may be said that the plan has worked well in town and there have been no public objections to it, and no other objections that have been noted. Mr. Stadelman, however, presents another side of the case, declaring that the supplying of school books by the school board is unfair competition with the local merchants. Only one trustee favoured Mr. Stadelman's side of the case, the other trustees holding that the greatest good to the greatest number was the policy that should apply to the work of the school board. The supplying of the books to the school children certainly seems to be the greatest number and in view of the fact that there is practically no profit in school books for the dealers—unless advance is made on the marked price—the dealers here made very little objection to the change when it was made here some years ago.
