WORK AND WORRY.

"Josie, did you tell Helen about the sewing circle?"

"Yes Aunt, that will be all right. I'm no fraid."

"Well, I do hope she won't forget the cutting. I don't know how I'm going to do it if she doesn't. We'll be in a pretty fix to-morrow if there's no work ready, and I'll get all the blame. My dear, I thought about something that one of the ladies said, and I supposed I'd fly away from the circle as fast as I could. I have everything to worry me, not a moment's peace can I get."

"Now, Auntie, you know if you do your duty as far as you possibly can, you've nothing to do with the duty of the other ladies. What good will it do you to be in the circle, for you to be a worrying over every little thing that you can't help?"

"It gets on another's burdens," said Mrs. Farwell, drearily.

"I know it is the Lord means for us to bear one other's short comings and infirmities, so that we are not left sighing and mourning, not able to enjoy the beautiful things he gives us."

"The kitch has come off the pantry door, and I can't get it on again, and the cat will be sure to get in and steal something!"

"Will put her out of doors."

"But we must have the window open, and she comes right in."

"Well watch her motions then," replied Josie, smiling.

"Look at Ellinor! She's going up to the Duke, right in the middle of the procession, with a white apron on, sauntering along as easy as possible, while I have to slave at home!"

"Well, I can find plenty to do without taking morning walks, if the old lady is calling on Honorine. Joshua goes every week. His mother would rather have him come than me, anyway. People can't say I neglected my house work, or let my children go dirty and ragged."

"Why, does anyone say that, Mrs Farwell?" asked Josie, looking admiringly after the little neatly dressed lady, who had on the daintiest of morning wrappers and white aprons, as she tripping up the village street to the house of old Mr Farwell. She could see a tiny pot of jelly in her hand. Ellinor was always making some delicacy for the old folks.

"No, no, I don't know as they do, but how in the world can she get her work done so as to have time for walk on the Fairmount. She must neglect something."

"Why I have always noticed that nothing in her house is remarkably neat, she takes matters coolly with no hurry or flurry, leaving things for another time that cannot be done in one day. She has a small girl, too, I believe."

"Yes, I believe in one doing one's work. I tried to keep a girl once, but she, like and disliked! While she was here she never took a stick to her kitchen, no, she washed the floor, and then washed the dishes with her hands. I had to do my own work, and then I found it's done properly. What's that? Something in the pan? I'll watch, I wash, making Mrs Farwell cook in that direction in double quick time."

"Hey-day! that mean as has got some pits of eg, and knocked down my new thing soup tureen! It's big dog to pacify, Julia and all," added the sinking down into a seat and burying her ample apron.

"I have more than my share! What can I do now without that splendid tureen!"

"Did you weren't going to use it to-day, Auntie, and after all you don't use it much, and won't miss it the cause of you would do some other things."

"I'm not talk about it, there! All this work and fuss, an I company coming and then that lovely tureen smash! I can't endure it."

"Well, Auntie there's only one sure way of getting rid of your troubles, and that is by praying over them or about them, casting your burden on the Lord."

Josephine Stansfield," cried Mrs Farwell, dropping her apron, and giving Josie a look of severe astonishment. "How can you talk so irreverently? Pray about a broken tureen!"

"Why not?"

"Do you suppose the Lord wants us to trouble Him with foolish things like that? He's a great and holy Being, and we are to come to him, with reverence, I think."

"He told us cast our burdens on Him, and it certainly was a burden to you to have your valuable dish broken, wasn't it?"

"Yes, I suppose so, but I never would think of praying about it."

"I believe if we went dinner to our Father with our little wearing cares we would be far happier than we are. Just see how beautifully those glasses shine, Auntie! Everything is going on swimmingly now, so forget your mishap and get ready to welcome your guests who will soon be here, it is likely."

"But Hetty went to the window with an anxious look in her eyes and anxious eyes.

"I hope the children won't stop to play in the brook, when they come home at noon. The water is dreadfully high now. Just as likely as not they'll both be drowned! There's Pittie again! She's sauntering back as if she had no dinner to get or any thing to do! I wish I could have as good times."

"She takes her time as she goes along."

"It seems, but I can't. I want everything done just so before I can go anywhere or enjoy myself a bit. You don't know half of the work I've got to do this spring, Josie. I'm going to quilt four bedquilts, one a white one, in little fine diamonds and shells, and after they're done I'm going to sort my rags. I've two or three barrels full, and they've to be picked over and dyed all colors, and cut up fine, for I'm going to work a crumb cloth like that handsome bought one of Susan Jones. I expect my back will ache and like enough I'll be sick abed before it's done, but make it I must, and before house cleaning too! The house is awfully dirty this year, but I can't afford to hire help. I must drag through myself."

"Oh, Aunt, I'm tired of hearing you talk about working! You plan ahead so far on such piles of work! Enough for ten women, I'm certain."

"It's hard work I can tell you, but I must do it and rest afterward."

"You'll be too tired to enjoy it then, you'd better take a day once in a while and go visiting to divert your mind, or only do half of your hooking and quilting this season."

"I must do the whole. Nobody about does half the work that I do. It's my luck to have so much on hand that I can't get clear of it!"

Consumption Cured!

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a Vegetable Remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all Throat and Lung Affections also a Positive and Radical Cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper.

CATARRH.

Five Years' Sickness Cured by Four Bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

Pain in Shoulders, Back and Lungs, and Droppings in Throat Disappeared.

ST ANDREW, P Q, Sept 19, 1876

Mr F J B HARDING

Dear Sir: Being desirous that those who know something of the merits of your Catarrh cure (Curious Recovery Fulfilled) inform you what it has done for me. I am twenty nine years old, had been out of health for about five years. I had employed three or four M.D.'s and tried several nostrums, without receiving any permanent benefit, but continued rather to grow worse, until last fall, when I had to give up and be unable to do an hour's work at a time. Had severe soreness and pain under the shoulder blades and through the shoulders, with very lame back, and a feeling as if nothing short of a weight bearing it down, with continual dropping in the throat and down upon the lungs. Such was my condition when I commenced to take your Catarrh Remedy, one bottle of which cleared my palate and gave me an improved appetite, and after taking four bottles I was restored to health, able to attend to my business and continued labor, such as chopping and clearing land, at which I have been engaged the past season. My case was by Officials solely, with Drs Phelps of Montreal, who gave me up to die. Yours truly, HENRY SNIDER

GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM.

Trade Mark Registered.

Every person has heard of the wonderful effects of the Spruces and the Pines in cases of Lung Diseases. The Rev. Mr. Murray, in his book on the Adirondacks, lately published, relates the case of a consumptive young man who was entirely cured by a three months' camping out among the pines. In France the physicians regularly send their consumptive patients to the pine woods, and order them to drink a tea made from the spruce tops.

Gray's Syrup is a scientific combination of the gum which exudes from the Red Spruce tree. In this preparation the gum never separates, and all its anti-spasmodic, expectorant, tonic and balsamic properties are preserved.

For Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Throat Affections, &c., it acts like a charm. 1089
