P.S.—
"Station-to Station calls are cheaper."

Mrs. Allen wonders why calls to her home cost 40c, while Mrs. Brown's cost only 30c.

The reason lies in the postcript of Mr. Brown's letter. "Call me regularly . . . . Station-to-Station calls are cheaper."

So Mrs. Brown gives the distant telephone number and tells the operator, "Anyone there will do." That makes it a Station-to-Station call.

The low evening rates (after 8.30 p.m.) and still lower night rates (after midnight) apply on such calls; and, usually, connection is made *while you remain at the telephone.

Do as Mrs. Brown does. *Remember the postscript.

MURDER BY CAR

If a man kills his neighbor by recklessly stepping out and firing an automatic pistol, experience has shown thathe will be liable to a charge and conviction of manslaughter and a substantial prison sentence. But if the same man takes a two-ton automobile, drives recklessly and kills his neighbor, the sequel may be complete exoneration or aneglegent homicide charge, followed by a light fine. Why the discrimination? The man who practices with a firearm in his back yard and pots his neighbor through a window is rare and not much of a menace. The reckless driver appears to become more common every day, and more of a hazard to every man, woman and child in every community. If this habit—considering manslaughter by reckless driving a minor offence to be condoned by the courts—continues, the gunman may as well put away his traditional weapon, lay in wait on his enemy's usual route to the office, pick him up on his bumper at 40 miles an hour and tell the authorities it was an accident.
