THAT HUSBAND OF MINE.

(CONTINUED.)

'Miss Amelie will tell you that we have been trying our best to make Lina at home with our city, Mr St Olave,' said Jack, while I went out to supper with Mrs Nettleton.

'They have all been very kind to me,' murmured Lina.

'But I hope they have not succeeded in setting you against us altogether,' said St Olave.

'No—I mean, soon,' said Lina, looking pale.

'Why, that is news to me, Miss Lina,' said Jack. 'I thought you were going to spend the summer with Mr Harman.'

I have decided differently, Father,' Lina, then conquering herself, 'there was nothing about the old house which pained my attention, and I feel much better in return sooner than I expected.'

Lina looked grateful. Jack [illegible] at side glances at St Olave. He talking now frequently to Lina, who were beginning to [illegible] I DO I the way to the parlor [illegible] by the two gentlemen. [illegible] I had my hands full, what with greetings and introductions [illegible] was a packed house, as Charlie said [illegible] and how gladly [illegible] I have halted his ideas [illegible] the ball only have been with [illegible] Everybody missed him, and I [illegible] that the party would [illegible] But presently some [illegible] the piano, and all the [illegible] Jack took upon himself [illegible] of ceremonies, and [illegible] performed his part. Charlie [illegible] have done better.

'Have you seen Miss St Olave?' [illegible] I asked.

'Yes, I saw her,' he said, with a [illegible] 'Do you know how Charlie [illegible] and singing. I hope since he's so [illegible] isn't provoking that he [illegible] to-night, of all times?'

'[illegible] but he may wake out of [illegible] and he's down here yet [illegible] supper. By the way, who [illegible] gentleman with the romantic [illegible]

'Do you mean St Olave?'

'[illegible] I come in blood to man [illegible] Are they [illegible]

'[illegible] I have [illegible] Jack [illegible] I thought you [illegible] to spend the summer with Mr Harman.'

'[illegible] decided differently, Father.' [illegible] then conquering herself, [illegible] matters about the old house which [illegible] my attention, and I [illegible] sooner than I expected.'

[illegible] looked grateful. Jack [illegible] at side glances at St [illegible] the ball grew frequent [illegible] were beginning to [illegible] I DO I the way to the par[illegible] by the two gentlemen. [illegible] I had my hands full, what [illegible] and introductions [illegible] was a packed house, as Charlie [illegible] and how gladly [illegible] I have halted his ideas [illegible] the ball only have been with [illegible] Everybody missed him, and I [illegible] that the party would [illegible] But presently some [illegible] the piano, and all the [illegible] Jack took upon himself [illegible] of ceremonies, and [illegible] performed his part. Charlie [illegible] have done better.

'[illegible] of the evening, Lina [illegible]

'All [illegible] I'm