Temperance on Swipes.

But I want to deal with two points which Swipes has been advancing: 1st, the CLERGYMEN; 2nd, the so-called INFORMERS.

1st. I would state without fear of successful contradiction, that there is not a class of men of the same number on this continent, better educated, more judicious in their deliberations, and morally they stand superior to any other class. Again, there is no class so thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the human race, their sorrows and heartaches, and there is no class of men that has done so much to lift it up. Their life's problem is this; and almost to a unit on this continent, in all their deliberative bodies, they have declared in favor of prohibition. There is no class of men so thoroughly conversant with the destructive and ruinous influence of the saloons, and there is no class of men so thoroughly disliked by the saloon-keeper, and when Swipes makes assertions about them that are contrary, he ought to be prepared to prove them. They have never asserted to any illegitimate means to coerce or intimidate people to adopt their views, and aside from the propagation, they enjoy the confidence of the people. It is a law that every man has a right to exercise any persuasive power which he has to bring about any reform he may desire, so long as he is not treasonable. This right the saloons have used, with the addition of brute force. Again, in their efforts in the prohibition question they are supported by the leading jurists, by the best and most intelligent jurists, from the solicitor up to the highest on the bench; by the very best medical men; by the startling catalogue of crimes committed year by year; by all the laws of political economy; by the leading statesmen, such as Gladstone, John Bright, and others on this continent; by public sentiment, which is gradually crystallizing into law, imperfect though it may be, and still more imperfectly administered. We are beginning to discover that an honest, conscientious lawyer is hard to find. Untrustworthy is one thing, always unreliable. Again, what motives have the clergymen to serve by agitating for prohibition? PERSONALLY, NONE beyond the benefit of their congregations. It is very easy for Swipes and men similarly constructed, to impeach them with base motives, and those who are aiding them. The fact is, that I don't know of a paper published on this continent, pretending to be in the front rank of journals, that advocates the traffic. I believe there was one published in Toronto a few years ago, but it never amounted to much; and all the wealth of the liquor traffic cannot get a man to advocate their interests on a platform. Did Swipes ever hear or attend a prayer-meeting conducted by saloon-keepers, to ask God to direct or help them in their agitation? The verdict of the age is: Execrate the traffic. Why does Swipes advocate higher license, or any license? If I were as thoroughly convinced of the just claims of the business, I would agitate the repeal of all license, and let every man sell it the same as bread, or tea, or tobacco. Why has it such an invidious protection, giving over to a saloon-keeper only so many hundreds of our citizens that he may plunder and ruin them? Why not pass the same law in respect of groceries and dry goods? The prohibition stamps it with being wrong. The method of the Gospel necessarily controls the masses, and this is the only business that does not flourish more luxuriantly where the Cross is lifted up. Why, Swipes, if you have any spark of manhood, you owe it to the clergymen. They have usually been foremost in all reforms that have benefitted the human race. If the government of a province has a right to compel the removal of public nuisances beyond city limits, or prevent a saloon of being within the prescribed distances of church or school, we ask only the extension of this principle.

2nd. The so-called informers. The word is derived from in formo, to give information, or animate or accuse one for violating any law or statute. It is a law or a principle at the very basis of the science of jurisprudence, that every member of a community is supposed to be not only law observing, but a law enforcer, and on this principle I have seen those looking on at a riot compelled to assist in quelling it. If this were not the case the few policemen in Ontario would be wholly unable to maintain order or suppress illegal acts. The informer will cover all cases where information is given concerning lawless acts, and if Swipes is correct in his advice no such information should be given nor sought. If Swipes chanced to walk out and saw a man murder another, or rob a traveller, or pinch a piece of railway up, or burn up a neighbor's house, or his own house, to be consistent with his statements he would never inform, so as to bring any of the guilty parties to justice. The government is grossly wrong, or any private party, to offer a reward for information leading toward detection of crime, and any one seeking the aid of a detective grossly wrong. If Swipes had an office where he conducted business, and during his absence it was robbed, he comes in, relives the loss, but never mentioned it. Not he! he would be no informer; and so the principle goes on. I would like to know how long such rights would be observed. Informer is the cry of the world to criminal, and when people are willing to hide crime or conceal the criminal it has always been considered a mark of the lack of moral sense and perception. In the eye of equity the criminal is the worst criminal of the two. The Land League in Ireland says, no informer; the moonlight and moonlight cry out, no informer; and the answer comes, violating the law of the land, crime and, no informer; and Swipes echoes it also. Almost every argument, Swipes? The first act of rebellion has always been the manufacture of three laws to order and put down government. Twits cavalry by inoculating them with sentiment against his fellow man, God made us even companions to give information, as in some way he is equal to lend to the prevention of crime or wrong doing, and yet this Swipe twits him for being a citizen of any civilized nation. The prevention of all evil has constituted the law. With this as a primary, the State is an governing body in the exercise that could growing, or valuable law. The extreme of the Swipes theory would be the growth of lawlessness and insecurity of life and property. Christians even will believe one of any responsibility to the world. Again, one of the issues of the criminal law in Britain is that the informer will be protected and shielded by the strong arm of the law. This is right. Also Swipes pours out his chivalry in denouncing the informer of the act, and so do the saloon-keepers. Why does Swipes go under an assumed name? Why is the informer never anxious to know who is bringing his wife out to justice? Simply that he might murder or burn down my or his or some other member or home. Swipes, or in some other way have revenge. The law is intensely of the land are built up with blood. The cross of God rose upon the whole institution. The Christian influence spread the Bibles to day [illegible] one of the prominent influences [illegible] conducting for centuries. [illegible] have always been the strongest of the saloons, and the influence of the British parliament is engaged in suppressing the teaching of Swipes. Surprising audacity, to stand so towards men and women whose homes have been blighted and cursed by it, for endeavoring to put it down! Infamous assertion, to call by vile names the woman whose son or husband has been murdered, not by the revolver of the bar-tender, but by that which has killed both body and soul, because she dares to bring the law to bear on the murderer. There never has been such heroism evinced in any struggle in the annals of history as by the patient, suffering victims of the traffic. I look upon it as a debt I owe my fellow man and this Dominion, by every legal means in my power, to cleanse out this plague spot. I have sworn Carthaginian hate against the business. The saloon-keepers will be taught, and must be, that their lawlessness and intimidation must stop, and if the law is not a sufficient preventive there is manhood enough in the TEMPERANCE PARTY OF ONTARIO to suppress by the might of right this wrong doing. The terrorism with which the saloons and their allies are trying to rule Ontario has never been equalled. The freedom of the slave was purchased by the loss of hundreds of thousands of lives; even so let us purchase the freedom of the rising generations. Virtually the saloons say to-day, see what a defiance your prohibitory statutes is! you can't enforce them, right they point to the revolver, knife, explosive, or fire, and shout, do it if you dare. See, there is no public sentiment to back up the law now that they have it. Don't you venture, etc. The saloons know full well that no one inspector, either Short or Long, can possibly enforce the Act in a county without private individuals assisting; and men stand astonished with virtuous horror at men trying to enforce it, and at the same time think it no crime to encourage the law breaker. The church, school and criminal court must combine their forces against the saloon. The methodist church with her two millions of members, is pledged to this. The roman catholic influences nearly 7,000,000 in this direction. The labor organization of this continent has this plank in its platform. The prospects never were so bright. The temperance reform stands "on the heights of Christian heroism and answered prayer." Prohibition is the sublime fact of the future.

"Tis weary watching wave on wave,
And yet the tide heaves onward;
We build like corals—grave on grave,
But heave a pathway sun-ward.
We're beaten back in many a fray,
Yet ever strength we borrow,
And where the van-guard camps to-day,
The rear shall camp to-morrow.

Bracebridge Model School.

To the Editor of The Warder.

OAKWOOD, Jan. 2nd, 1888.

DEAR SIR,—Would you kindly allow me sufficient space in your valuable paper to correct some misrepresentations made in Lindsay papers regarding Bracebridge Model School.

1. No lower examination is set at the close of the Bracebridge Model School than at the close of any other Model school. The same papers are used all over this province.

Some teachers in training at Bracebridge Model School are legally qualified to teach in any part of Ontario, including East Victoria. We have always had some attending our school who had passed thro and second-class teachers' examination.

Yours very truly,
GEO H. O. THOMAS,
Principal Bracebridge Model School.
