FEEDING CATTLE

Flies are a great nuisance and responsible for a part of the midsummer slump in production by dairy herds. However poor feeding is more often responsible for the low returns. Pastures were not good early in the summer and proper measures to supplement them were not taken by many dairymen. The man with some silage left is fortunate. Where the hay crop is large, some hay may be fed where pastures are short. For the best cows a fairly liberal grain ration is also advisable. A good mixture may be made from six parts of ground oats and barley and one part oilcake meal. If farmers are to maintain the production of their cows, they must maintain their weight and that means feeding just in proportion as the pastures fail.

THE MINISTER SPEAKS

County and township fairs in Ontario may be reduced in number, according to plans under consideration by Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture. The Minister points out that in many instances government grants have been found higher than county grants to county fairs. One reason for the failure of fairs, he believes, is the tendency to depend too much upon the government for assistance instead of getting results through their own initiative and enterprise. Reduction in the number of fairs, with government aid being apportioned more discriminately, may follow. The Minister also feels that the existing seed crops competitions should be abolished and replaced by registered seed competions would do more to bolster the farming industry than the crops type of competition, he believes.

Speaking on the subject of grading milk, Hon. Mr. Kennedy foresaw a time when city dwellers would be mand a higher quality of milk. Steps were now being taken to clean cattle areas and free them from disease, and the time seemed ripe to get a milk-grading organization under way.

Shipment to England of a special type of Ontario-grown barley, adaptable for malting purposes, would be made shortly, the Minister announced. A heavy demand in England is expected for this type of barley, known as O. A. C. No. 21.

The lettuce harvest on the Bradford and Innisfil marsh gardens is on in full swing, the truck, carrying about one hundred crates, making several trips to Toronto daily. Celery planting has just been finished one grower having over one million plants in.
