"Try Ayer's Pills"

For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout. Stephen Lansing, of Yonkers, N. Y., says: "Recommended as a cure for chronic Costiveness, Ayer's Pills have relieved me from that trouble and also from Gout. If every victim of this disease would heed only three words of mine, I could banish Gout from the land. These words would be—'Try Ayer's Pills.'"

"By the use of Ayer's Pills alone, I cured myself permanently of rheumatism which had troubled me several months. These Pills are at once harmless and effectual, and, I believe, would prove a specific in all cases of incipient

Rheumatism.

No medicine could have cured me in better shape." C. C. Rock, Corner, Avoyelles Parish, La.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for sixteen years, and I think they are the best Pills in the world. We keep a box of them in the house all the time. They have cured me of sick headache and neuralgia. Since taking Ayer's Pills, I have been free from these complaints."

"I have derived great benefit from Ayer's Pills. Five years ago I was taken so ill with rheumatism that I was unable to do any work. I took three boxes of Ayer's Pills and was entirely cured. Since that time I am never without a box of these pills." — Peter Christensen, Sherwood, Wis.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1889.

The Drunkard's Orphan Child.

A little girl with golden hair,
And eyes of azure blue,
And face of heavenly beauty rare,
Like a rose just wet with dew—
Was seen to hurry down the street,
Not right nor left looked she;
Regardless of the lookers on
That asked who she might be.

Her tattered dress, her shoeless feet,
Told of a wretched life;
And though so young, so very young,
Her years scarce numbered five—
Her eyes, like sweet forget-me-notes,
Were filled with pearly tears;
The hearts of all were moved to see
Such beauty dimmed by cares.

She hastened on until she reached
The house of Dr. Clare;
She knocked, then waited patiently,
Till the door should appear.
He came out and questioned her,
For a kindly heart had he;
But her youthful voice was choked with tears
Neither words nor power found she.

He took her trembling hand in his
And looked her to inquire,
Pointing the cause of such distress
Which filled her little heart.
This kindness quite o'erpowered her;
She began to weep anew,
And leaned her head upon his breast;
While Doctor Clare wept too.

But when she had composed herself,
She told why she had come.
She said, "'tis for my mother, dear,
Who is very ill at home.
Will you not come, kind Dr., sir?
We money we have none—
For mother said she was dying,
Yes, doctor, will you come?

If mamma died I should die, too,
For I told the angels so
In my evening prayers and this morning, too;
And they'll take me I know.
My pony died a year ago;
He used to drink and swear,
And go to tavern every night
To spend his money there.

Until one night he got so drunk
He scarce could walk alone—
The tavernkeeper turned him out;
His money was all gone.
He staggered then across the street,
And through the blinding storm;
But in the morning, clear and cold,
We found his lifeless form.

"But now, kind sir, do come with me,
I must no longer stay;
For mother was asleep when I
Stole from her side away.
She knew not I was coming here,
So I must hurry on
For fear that she might wake and find
Her little Nellie gone."

Poor mother, she will never wake
Within her garret home;
For while poor Nellie thought she slept,
Her soul to God had flown.
Named of a physician now,
She is above his care;
For in His love the Lord had come,
And answered every prayer.

But Nelly thought her still asleep,
And kissed her marble cheek;
Screamed, "O, mother, wake up now!
And to your baby speak."
But when she could not make her hear,
Her cries of grief were wild;
The Lord, look down in pity on
The drunkard's orphan child.

The Debate in the House of Commons on Col. O'Brien's resolution re Jesuit Bill.

HOW UNREASONABLE THE DEMAND IS.

That under the B. N. A. Act, and in this day of colonial rights and of self-government, the Federal authority in Canada is to indicate the sort of legislation, one of its provinces according to the legislation, the cohesive legislation, to say the least of it, which used to exist in the Mother Country 300 years ago. I have reminded the House what the privileges were even as regards the Act of Supremacy conceded to the people of Quebec, by the terms of capitulation, and by the terms of the treaty, and by the terms of the Quebec Act. I have shown that absolute freedom of worship was extended by the Treaty of Paris and by the Quebec Act, and I have shown the House, I think, what is the meaning of the reservation as to the laws of England, in force as regards public worship in this country. In the year 1765 the law officers of the Crown made this statement on their responsibility to the Lords of Trade and Plantations:—The subjects of his Majesty residing in the countries in America, ceded to his Majesty by the Treaty of Paris are not subjected in the colonies to the incapacities, deprivation of rights and penalties to which the roman catholic subjects in the kingdom are.

LORD NORTH'S STATEMENT.

Lord North, the First Minister in that country, then said the same thing in debate, which I will read from an extract under my hand. He said: "It has been the opinion of many able lawyers that the best way to establish the happiness of the inhabitants is to give them their own laws as far as relates to their own possessions. Their possessions were marked out to them at the time of the treaty. To give them these possessions would not be very wise as to the free exercise of that religion. This likewise is no more than was confirmed to them by treaty as far as the laws of Great Britain can confirm it. There is no doubt that the laws of England do confirm the exercise of full and free religion, differing from that of the church of England in any of the colonies. Therefore, I apprehend that we ought to not extend them to Canada." Let us not in dealing with this question, the supremacy be more restrictive on the people of our own country and in favor of the authority of the sovereign, whom we all revere, and whose powers and prerogative we all wish to maintain to the utmost; than the sovereigns of Great Britain have been themselves. Now what has been their action with regard to this question of the supremacy? Let me read to you a passage from Lord Thurlow's statement in the debates of 1774: "I state in the beginning that the proclamation referred to did not affect to relate to Canada, but I said that the recapitulation reserved all their effects movable and immovable, but even if it were otherwise is it supposed that tithes would accrue to the king, though they might not have sent for them.

POWERS OF THE POPE.

And yet these people in the province of Quebec who are said to be under the provisions of the Supremacy Act, so severe that they cannot recognize the sovereignty of a foreign bishop, were in 1774 by his Majesty's Attorney General authorized to collect tithes from the people, although perhaps not by the authority of law. While 76 years ago, by a solemn Act or statute, the roman catholic bishop of Quebec was recognized by the Governor of the province under royal instructions, we are told that the Act of Supremacy was enforced and yet that man was a bishop simply by sovereignty of the first bishop of his church. He was a bishop simply because he had received from Rome the bulls which, under the statute of Queen Elizabeth, it was high treason to bring into the country at all. That was the way in which the civil and religious rights of the people of this country were treated upwards of 76 years ago; but after the lapse of three-quarters of a century we are to be wiser, and we are to enforce against the great section of our people legislation in preserving the rights of the Crown, which the Crown deliberately chose to ignore 77 years ago. In 1817 the roman catholic bishop of Quebec received a mandamus calling him as such to the legislative council of the province. He, holding his office by the will and under the bull of his superior bishop, was called, by virtue of his office, to be one of the governors of Quebec. In 1839 governor Colborne issued letters patent incorporating the catholic bishop of Quebec and all his successors. He might have been appointed by his superior, under the bulls which these gentlemen tell us apply to the province of Quebec to-day. It was high treason to act at all in 1836. A roman catholic college was incorporated by the province of Prince Edward Island, and the question was submitted to the law officers of the crown fifty odd years ago whether that was a violation of the supremacy of the crown, fifty times over, if anything, more than this Act of Quebec is a violation of the rights of the crown, but the law officers advised that it was within the competency of the legislative powers as they then existed, and it was no derogation of the Act of Supremacy if the Act could be held to apply to that province. But since that period, since the period when the officers of the country charged with the maintenance of the rights of the crown, who, as I said before, were infinitely more restrictive than we are asked to be to day, three quarters of a century later. In the meantime what a change has taken place in the politics of British North America. We have been placed on a different footing.

WE HAVE RECEIVED FREE INSTITUTIONS.

We have received legislature powers and by the voice of our sovereign, by the voice of our Parliament, by the policy of her Ministers as expressed in every Act or statute, it has been designed that subject only to those matters which are of imperial concern, we shall be fully clothed with the right of self-governing free men in every part of Canada as our fellow subjects in the heart of England are, and yet we are told now that we are not only under the restrictive legislation of 300 years ago, but no Legislature of Canada has the power to repeal any restrictive legislation, and that any restrictive legislation of that kind is beyond the competence of Provincial Legislature.

POWERS OF PROVINCIAL LEGISLAAURES.

We heard last night the singular statement that the Provincial Legislature is only a delegated authority. I deny that statement as explicitly as it is courteous to deny any statement made by an hon. member of this House. I go further, and say within the limit of its authority, and subject only to those powers of disallowance, the Provincial Legislature is as absolute as the Imperial Parliament is itself. (Applause.) The Imperial Parliament is not restricted as to the subjects over which it can legislate. The Provincial Legislature is restricted over the subjects on which it can legislate, but in legislating on these subjects it has all the rights which it was possible for the Imperial Parliament to confer. I say more that the Provincial Legislature, legislating upon the subjects which are given to them by the British North America Act, has the power to repeal an Imperial statute in so far as it interferes with its control over those subjects. It has been urged upon the House these two days that we had no power, and the Act 28 and 29 Vic., called the Colonial Enactments Act prevented any statute having the force of law in any colony which, has any provision in it repugnant to an Imperial statute. Very good.

After citing a number of appeals to the Privy Council, in which the powers of Provincial Legislatures were considered and in which it has held that colonial legislatures were in no sense delegates of, or acting under mandate from the Imperial Parliament, he said: "In treating a question of this kind the Provincial Legislature is surely untrammeled in the exercise of its powers by Imperial legislation of centuries ago. If the supremacy exists in relation to the provinces of British North America, if we have no freedom of religion, then I say the first duty of this House, of every Legislature in the Province of Canada, is to declare that we have not, in this nineteenth century, the rights of free men. In the year 1850 the bishops, the roman catholic bishops, in the province of Upper Canada were incorporated, and their successors from time to time have had economical rights. Their successors, our friend from Simcoe would tell us, had renounced their authority, but he should have added these words in connection with his argument, "in communion with the church of Rome." In 1850 the Legislature of Upper Canada incorporated all those people and gave them corporate powers, yet the hon. member for Simcoe says it is unconstitutional.

HARTLEY.

Special to The Warder.

STRAYED.—Last Saturday the Hartley base ball team of this place selected a young man for the purpose of purchasing an outfit for the club in the town of Lindsay, and from the above date nothing has been seen of him, only some description by Gypsies from Palestine was given recently of an awful looking object, bearing the appearance of a wire face prevailing through that territory. We henceforth trust that any persons seeing such an object will by no manner of means be the least alarmed, for this community has declared that such was prowling in the neighborhood on Sabbath last. Of course this will only teach our young men next time to select one qualified for the purpose, and also one that will deliver all goods in proper care; and not allow such a sight to go before the public, especially amongst the fair sex.

BUSINESS.—Business men for ever. Our village has greatly been enlightened since our worthy shoe maker Mr. Samuel Graham has opened out here. From his commencement his business has proven a fine success owing to the general satisfaction of his work.

ILL.—We regret this week to report the illness of Mrs. E. Taylor of this place, who has been suffering for some time with great distress and is still in a failing position.

LINDEN VALLEY.

FROST.—This locality was visited with a hard frost last week, doing considerable damage in some places to potatoes and other vegetables, also to barley and the hay crop, which will be under the average crop if we don't get warm weather and less cold rain. Fall wheat is well advanced in growth for this time of the year.

VICTORIOUS

First Prize and Diploma competing against the Toronto, Brantford, and Noxon Binders. Its success in the field last season and also at Exhibitions this fall is conclusive evidence of it being the best Binder on earth.

It has more good points than any binder made.
This binder fulfils the promises and handles easier in the field than any other.
The driver has full control of the machine and every lever is within easy reach.
It is a two horse power binder and a child with strength enough to handle a team can run it.
It will do any good thing that any other binder can do.
It is a home manufactured machine, which every sensible farmer should consider the advantage in purchasing.

Place your order early for one of those reliable machines and save the annoyance of being harrowed to death by agents, and probably give your order to them for a machine you will feel sorry for afterwards.

Ask your neighbors how our New Steel Binder suited them last season, and take their advice. Call and examine our machine for 1888.
