CRUSHED UNDER A TON WEIGHT

An Orillia Man's Head Went Through an Inch Board—Another Under an Elevator

TheOrillia Packet tells of a bad elevator accident. Two men named Ritchie and McPherson were standing under an elevator loaded with a ton of machinery when the gearing broke and let it fall. The Packet says: When the falling hoist struck Mr. Ritchie, his head went through the inch planking as though it were pastboard, and he was left standing amidst the wreck. Mr. McPherson was not so fortunate. He was struck on the shoulders by a two-inch plank which formed one of the crosspieces of the upper hoist, and was borne to the ground with his face jammed against his boots, and the weight of a ton of machinery bearing upon him. Mr. Ritchie ran upstairs under the impression that he would be able to lift the hoist there, but found the apparatus broken. He then raised the alarm and a crowd of men gathered, who after strenuous exertions succeeded in raising the hoist sufficiently to remove the unfortunate young man who was pinned beneath it; his face crushed between his legs, and his head thrust into his ribs, but the rescuers were relieved, albeit somewhat surprised, to find that he was still living. He was got out, taken home, and medical aid summoned as scon as possible. An examination showed that he had received a bad cut over the eye, where his boot had been pressed into the flesh, and that a couple of ribs were broken. He was also severely bruised and shaken up, but his injuries were not by any means so serious as to be expected, and the physicians were able to relieve anxious friends and a sympathizing public by the assurance that aside from the danger of internal complications there was a fair chance for recovery.

VOLCANOES ARE ACTIVE

In Different Parts of the World They Are in Eruption

The volcano on Stromboli Island (off the north coast of Scicily) has commenced a terrible eruption. A colossal column of fire is rising, and incandescent stones are being emitted from the craters. Many houses on the island have been destroyed.

According to advices received lately from Apia, Samoa, via Tonga, a volcanic eruption has broken out in Savaii (the westernmost and largest of the Samoan group). Six craters are reported to be emitting smoke and flames. One village in the vicinity is covered two inches deep with ashes.

A San Francisco despatch says: The steamship Newport, from Panama, brings particulars of the recent eruption of Mount Santa Maria in Guatemala, according to the officers of the Newport, the destruction of life and property has been immense, and necessity for relief is said to be urgent.

Coffee plantations in the districts of Costa Cuaca, Chuava, Reforma, Palmer, Costa Grande, and Kolhutz have been buried seven feet in volcanic ashes and debris. Thousands of cattle have been destroyed, and the loss of life is thought to be large.

Details from the scene of the greatest damage were hard to get. One firm offered $2,000 to any person who would go to their Miramar plantation in Costa Cuca and bring news of conditions there. When the Newport sailed this offer was still standing.

The towns of Palmar, San Felipe, Colombia, and Coatepec are said to have been completely buried in debris from Santa Maria.

THE SEA GULLS

Oh, the sweeping swing of the blue-gray wing
As they circle before the eye,
And the swerving dip of the breast adrip
Of the gulls that seaward fly!
They hang and balance, they waver and float
With an idle air and an aim remote,
Then suddenly cleave the sky!
And naught know we of their query or quest
As they pause a breath on the blue wave's breast,
Or the secrets that hide in the closing blue
Where they sail and sail and are lost to view.
