Municipal Printing.

Experience has taught us, that the printing fraternity of this section are laboring under a great mistake in reference to municipal printing. It is a fact that can't be gain-sayed, and the fraternity have no one to blame but themselves, that this class of printing is being done to-day, at from one half to one third its actual value. Why is this? Simply because, to get it some will do it at these prices. There is no reason why any municipality should not pay actual value for the work done. It is the duty of municipal officials to save every dollar they can in printing as well as other matters, and no blame can be attached to them. But those doing it for such low figures are to blame. The amount of work done cannot be estimated by the uninitiated. Is there any reason why an understanding among the fraternity arrived at, on such a base prices, so that all work could be estimated and arrived at without the cut throat prices it is being done at to-day. We know of no municipality that is an object of charity or one refusing to pay honest value for work done. We do suggest in this matter as well as others, that the fraternity in the counties of Peterboro, Northumberland, Durham, and Victoria, do meet, arrange a list of prices for such work and each stand by it. A list can be placed in the hands of each municipality so that any councillor can tell the price of every page or line to be printed. There is nothing unfair in this, but what is honest between man and man. We should like to hear from the craft—their views on these matters.—Hastings Star. We voice the sentiments of the Star.

Live Stock Notes.

Winter laying requires warm quarters and plenty of food.

The size of the cow and the amount of food eaten are no indication of what she will do at the pail or what the milk will churn out.

It may be a little early to look after the grain supply for next winter's feeding, but preparations can now be made to insure securing a good supply of "greens" for the winter feeding. The root crop, rutabagas, turnips, beets, onions, small potatoes, and cabbages, are all especially desirable for winter feeding and are really among the essentials if eggs are desired.

This is the turkey killing season, and while the largest turkeys are usually most salable, it is well for those who intend to continue breeding to save two or more of the old turkeys a second and even a third year. Such turkeys will produce stronger and thrifter chicks, less likely to be tender and injured by wet weather. The wild turkeys always mate with the old and strong gobblers and in this way they attain greater hardiness than has our domestic fowl.

The coarse grains are cheap this winter and hay is generally scarce if not dear. In most cases for their nutritive value the coarse grains like corn and oats are quite as cheap as hay or straw. They are much better for young stock, which needs to get its nutrition in a form that will not take it all day to digest it. That is the trouble in feeding exclusively on straw and other course fodder. The animal can do no more than sustain life, and after being stunted all winter its digestion is so injured that it never recovers. Keep the young stock growing, and it will be better for it during all its after life.

Fowls that are plump and have plenty of meat on the breast will always sell well in market. The carcass, however, depends on the breed. To know which should be preferred it may be stated that the breeds that are the most active and fly the highest have the most meat on the breast. This is easily explained, as the ability to fly implies great muscular powers, and the muscles are mainly on the breast. The Games, Dorkings and even the Leghorns, are plump on the breast, and they cannot fly over a high fence. Brahmas can fly and they have but little breast meat. The Langshans and Cochins are apparently of the same stock, but when a fowl of both breeds is dressed for market, the Langshan will be found much superior, as it has a large proportion of meat on the breast.

Who Could Not Edit a Country Paper.

In the minds of a good many otherwise sensible people to conduct a weekly paper, it is only necessary for an editor to look over his exchanges and clip and paste untill the form is full, when out their sheet comes and everybody gets their copy of it. That would be very nice indeed. But such people will forget the acres of paper the editor will look over to find a paragraph that may prove of interest to his readers or the time that it takes him to condense a half column account into a paragraph. Then he should be out around town looking up items of local affairs and at the same time his place is in the office looking after the work and provide copy for the "devils" who try to drive him crazy with yells for "copy." He should also be out around town looking up work and advertisements, for even the most obtuse will readily see that the annual one dollar for the price of the paper will not long keep the pot boiling or the presses in motion. At the same time he has his books to post up, his accounts to make out and bills collecting to get money to pay the compositors and pressman; rent, fuel, stock, light and other running expenses to provide; act as his own foreman in making up forms, be proof reader, reporter and editor all in one. These are a few things that the country editor has to do or get snowed under and that very quickly. After doing these things to the best of his ability and brought out his paper, he is met by some saphead with the sapient remark, "I find a word mispelled here," or "a word was mispelled there." Is it any wonder that such will get a short answer once in a while? Is it any wonder that country editors grow bald, turn grey and die young? All the more that those who take the paper never think of paying for it until the end of the year, and perhaps not then, but expect him to hire a rig and go after it or take a trip on the train and spend twice the amount due in collecting it. Oh, the way of the transgressor may be hard, but the way the unfortunate editor has to plod is infinitely harder.

OBITUARY.

By the death of Miss Reid, which occurred at her home on Friday morning, Feb. 7th inst., Omemee loses one of its oldest inhabitants. She was born Jan. 10th, 1810, and was the daughter of David and Catherine Reid, of Tullylark County, Fermanagh, Ireland, and the youngest of a family of ten children most of whom lived to a good old age.

She came with her mother to New York while quite young. After living there for a number of years she visited Canada and spent a year with friends. She afterwards returned to Ireland spending a year there and a year in London, Eng. About thirty eight years ago she settled permanently in Omemee.

Miss Reid led a very active and useful life, until six years ago when she fell on an icy sidewalk while going to church, since which time she has been almost constantly confined to the house.

She was very charitable and hospitable and will be held in tender memory by numbers of relatives and friends.

The deceased was very intelligent and well read, and preserved her interest in current events to the last.

She was an exemplary member of Christ Church, and three years ago, presented the church with the sweet-toned bell, which calls the worshippers together.

The funeral took place on Monday, Feb. 10th, and was largely attended by relatives and friends from far and near.

DICKSON'S RACE.

I take great pleasure in announcing to the people of Peterborough and surrounding country that I have bought out the entire Plant, Patterns, Machinery and Agencies of the above well-known Factory on Dickson's Race.

I have also made arrangements to continue the lease and to carry on the manufacture of Iron and Wooden Force and Lift Pumps, Cisterns, Steel Windmills, Tanks, Fanning Mills, Hand Seeders, Churns, Washing Machines and every other line formerly manufactured in the above premises.

I have also removed the temporary Pump Shop which I opened on Charlott street a short time ago—and will now be found at my Factory on Dickson's Race.

With the long, practical experience I have had in this business, and with the splendid facilities which I now have for turning out good work, I am confident that I will be able to guarantee perfect satisfaction to all who may favor me with their orders.
