RIPPLES WITHOUT RHYMES

Issued by the Illinois State Department of Health.

The Illinois State Fair for 1920 will be held August 20—28. The State Department of Public Health will hold its annual exhibit, including the Better Babies Conference. Rules governing the latter will be published at an early date.

When the simple rules of preventive medicine are taught in the public schools of the State, health promotion will be an established fact instead of a suggestive theory.

The primary incentive for a clean town is health; the second reason is a united community effort induced by pride in outward appearances. When all elements work together the result will be both health and beauty.

Rockford, during its recent Health Promotion Week, had a set of twins at its baby conference which individually attained a high score over a large field of entries.

Clifton, Iroquois County, observed May 19th as Clean-Up Day. The Clifton Advocate's slogan was: "We want Clifton on the map as one of the clean towns of Illinois."

That the public has been awakened to the value of fresh air may be realized from the ever increasing number of sleeping porches throughout the country.

With a little ingenuity the average family can enjoy fresh air and sunshine in its own home, and without the expense of a long, tiresome journey.

S. L. Miller, assistant engineer, Division of Engineering and Sanitation, State Department of Public Health, has recently inspected the method of Chlorinating the public water supply at Carbondale.

West Frankfort has removed the pumping equipment from one of its wells, and has installed same at a newly constructed well which is connected with an intake from the creek.

A forty page phamphlet entitled "A Sanitary Survey of the City of Rockford" has been published by the State Department of Public Health. Municipal authorities who are interested in sanitation may secure copies by addressing request to Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, Director of Public Health Springfield, Illinois.

The Nurses Association for the 13 Illinois District held its bi-monthly meeting at Decatur on May 1. There was a large attendance, and the principal address was made by Miss Adda Eldredge, Interstate Secretary of the American Nursing Association.

The following cases of the several diseases were reported to the State Department of Public Health for the month of April: Smallpox, 973; Typhoid fever, 146; Infantile Paralysis, 6; malaria, 82; scarlet fever, 1,716; measles, 4,802; diphtheria, 789; mumps, 834; pneumonia, 1,127; tuberculosis, 1,302; whooping cough, 1,174; gonorrhea, 1,052; syphilis, 928.

After an exhaustive research it has been announced by the U. S. Public Health Service that from both the health and economic standpoints, men do more and better work in a day of eight hours than in one of longer duration.

A diet list for infants and children has been prepared by the Division of Child Hygiene and Public Health Nursing, State Department of Public Health. Copies may be secured by addressing Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, Director of Public Health, Springfield, Illinois.

Illuminating Irritation.

Ida incidentally indicates interest in ices, Irving, impressionable, infatuated, injudiciously invests. Ida's indulgence in ices inordinate, insatiable. Irving, impecunious, inaptly introduces inexpensive innovations. Ida, instantly irate, in impatient irritation, indignantly, impeaches Irving's iterated infatuation, insinuating indifference, inurbanity. Ida's infantile, inelegant invective illuminates Irving's innermost intelligence, inhibiting infatuation, intercepting intentions.—Youth's Companion.

81 PER CENT OF POULTRY CARED FOR BY WOMEN

In Missouri last year 73,765 birds were eliminated from 1,593 flocks which were culled under the supervision of the home demonstration agent sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture and the State agricultural college. This resulted in a saving of approximately $50,161 to their owners.

In another state, 486 local leaders were trained, with the result that 717,478 birds were culled. Of this number, 274,399 were found to be nonproductive.

About 81 per cent of all the poultry in the country is cared for by women. For that reason special attention is given to poultry by the home clubs supervised by the Department of Agriculture and the State colleges, and farm women are taught best methods of poultry selection, breeding, raising, feeding, housing, culling, canning surplus birds for the home use, preservation of eggs, and cooperative selling of poultry products.

Lack of proper culling thus far has proved to be, in the majority of cases, the principal reason why a flock is not profitable. Forty per cent of the hens in the average farm flock today are nonproductive, and should be sold or eaten. It costs about $2.00 a year to feed each hen. If she does not produce more than that amount in eggs she is unprofitable.

MANY FARMERS NOW GROWING SWEET CROPS

A marked increase in the production of sorghum sirup is indicated by reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture, which has been engaged in a special campaign to induce greater production of this crop because of the keen demand for sugar substitutes. At the beginning of the World War the annual yield of sorghum sirup in the United States was approximately 13,000,000 gallons. The average yield of sirup per acre has been about 100 gallons, but the fact that this figure can be increased is indicated by the department's experiments, in which more than 400 gallons per acre have been produced in some localities.

In urging increased plantings to sorghum the department's experts point out that despite the increasing yields the demand is still greater than the supply, as shown by the price for sirup, which has ranged from 90 cents to $1.50 per gallon, and in a few cases even higher.

There are abundant opportunities for increasing the sorghum production, the experts say, since this crop can be grown in every state in the Union with the possible exception of Maine. In the northern states it is necessary to plant early maturing varieties of sorghum. "Early Amber" and "Folgers" are among the varities recommended by the department which is prepared to supply inquirers with full information regarding the cultivation of this profitable plant.
