MINING FLASHES

T. C. Fawcett, M.E., in charge of operations at the Morris Kirkland Gold Mines, in a wire to local officials, states that a slash on the 808 crosscut on the 808 vein returned a value of $28.70 across 3.8 feet on the east wall and $11.55 across 4.6 feet on the west wall. This is undercutting the 708 orebody.

J. D. Turner, mine manager of Skookum Gold Mines, reports that diamond drill hole No. 1 put down on No. 3 vein has cut a 50-foot dyke and is in altered granite. Both the dyke and granite contain quartz and mineralization. Surface work to date on the property has revealed nine veins which have been opened up for various lengths. The present drill programme is designed to test these showings at depth. A party of Toronto, London, St. Catharines and Hamilton business men visited the property in the Red Lake area over the week-end.

Twenty-four feet of the 55 feet of ore so far opened up on the downward extension of the new east-west vein on the 7th level at Darwin Gold Mines, averages $20.50 per ton across three feet, according to company officials. Assays for the remaining 31 feet are expected shortly. In the second round in raising operations in this vein on the sixth level fairly well mineralized quartz was encountered. Some fine free gold was noted on the right side of the last face. On the 7th level, in addition to work on the south drift on the Grace vein and the downward extension of the east-west vein, a raise has been started with the object of locating the downward extension of the Grace vein north of the new shaft. On the eight level the last two rounds on the Grace vein drift were in well-mineralized quartz. Cross-cutting has been started toward the downward extension of the east-west vein.

Brae-Breest Gold Mines, following receipt of a wire from the property in the Kenora mining district, reports that 400 feet south of the original showing a discovery has been made which is believed to be the main orebody. Trenching of the showing has revealed mineralization across 60 feet with 15 to 20 feet of the material carrying high values. An extensive programme of surface exploration and deeper diamond drilling has been recommended by H. M. Whimster, mining geologist of Winnipeg, who recently examined and reported on the property. A contract for additional drilling has been let while the crew has been augmented to speed up surface work.

Directors of Ronda Gold Mines at a recent meeting decided to follow the recommendations of Mark Little, M. E., and proceed with a new program of development involving an expenditure of approximately $75,000. The new campaign was decided on as a result of encouraging results secured from preliminary work at the property in the West Shining Tree area. The programme calls for about 2,500 feet of diamond drilling, and the sinking of a 2-compartment internal shaft from the 300-foot level to a depth of 550 feet. Additional power equipment will be purchased immediately.

A party comprising Pittsburg and Toronto business men and brokers have left for the Duquesne Mines property in Destor and Duparquet Townships, Quebec, where a programme of diamond drilling is underway on the Galatea section of the property.

In a report to local officials of Beresford Lake Mines, E. S. McCarthy, mine superintendent, states that work will be started without delay on the new campaign of development that will involve the opening of two new levels at 365 and 500 feet. He states that preliminary work on the Solo shaft, from which operations will be carried out, is practically completed.

A SPEECH HANDICAP.

"I wonder if you could help me," writes a young man of twenty-six. "I graduated from high school at seventeen and then took a course at a business college. Although I did well in my business course an am well recommended, I only seem to be able to get minor positions and I cannot see any hope of my ever getting into a job with prospects of advancement. A friend of mine tells me it is due to my speech. I have a slight impediment, but it is not always noticable. I can speak to certain folk all right, but when I am speaking to others the defect is quite apparent. Do you think this is the trouble and is there anything I can do to get rid of it?"

Perhaps your friend is right. Indeed I think he is. Your handicap seems to be due to some form of fear which asserts itself when you are in the presence of certain people. Perhaps you are afraid of not saying the right thing, or of mispronouncing certain words, or of not making a sufficiently good impression upon the person to whom you are speaking. I think you can cure yourself.

The first thing to do is to face up to the fact that you are too self-conscious. Having done that, then forget yourself. Don't think so much about making an impression on the person to whom you are speaking. Think more of the subject matter of the conversation.

Practice reading aloud to yourself alone. This will accustom you to the sound of your own voice. It will also enable you to familiarize yourself with the sounds of words which you are likely to use in conversation. When you come across words which are strange to you, or of which you are not certain, turn them up in a good self-pronouncing dictionary just to make sure that you have them correct. You will then be less likely to be afraid of them.

If you will practice this you will acquire facility and readiness of speech, and, if you can cultivate an attitude of indifference with regard to what the other fellow thinks of you then I am quite sure you will find your handicap disappearing.

By getting rid of your fear and building up confidence in your ability to carry through an intelligent conversation you will be able to effect a cure and take your place in life. I know of no better method of doing this than that which I have suggested.

Magic Season

The Sarnia Canadian Observer writes:—This is autumn, a magic word and a magic season in Canada. Last winter Nature gave us some hard jolts. She kept us stoking our furnaces, muffling our ears and wishing for a heavier topcoat. And she did her worst last summer—day after day with top temperature readings above 100 degrees and nights from which a furnace room might have been a relief. But this is autumn.

What an enticing sound that word has, after such a summer as that of 1936! It is in the autumn that we begin to sleep normal hours, that we arrive on the job with a comparatively clear head and rested muscles. We begin eating again and the grocery bill mounts, but it is worth it. The motor car becomes more attractive than ever and entices one to highways leading away and away.

Fall rains have restored vegetation. They have started little creeks gurgling over miniature falls. A chill in the air, morning and evening, has stirred interest in the odor of wood smoke and frying bacon and ham. Gone are those perspiring days and nights when a long, cold drink had to serve for a meal.

Philosophy Of Unity

Writes the Halifax Herald — Hon. Charles Dunning has put the case for Canada and Canadian unity just about as succinctly as it possibly could be stated. Speaking to the Maritime Board of Trade at Charlottetown, the Minister of Finance said:

"The things which unite us are infinitely more precious and valuable to us than the things which divide us."

That sentence deserves a place as a motto on the walls of every home in this countryH.

America's Choice

Frank A. Southard, writing in The Forum (New York), says: We revert again to the insistent query: Do we want to trade with the world? Or are our industries so vulnerable, our labour so unskilled, our business men so inferior that only behind an impenetrable tariff wall can our industrial system remain alive? Do we believe that friendly and vast trade relations with Canada, for example, are profitable and desirable? Or do we prefer to shut out all goods "wherever foreign competition is interfering with American production"? The first road leads to great efficiency, more trade at home and abroad, and healthy international relations. The second leads to international hostility, subsidized industries, and higher costs. Whichever road America takes, it must be not by decisions based on the testimony of biased and special interest but by the free and enlightened choice of the whole people.

One improper word or act will neutralize the effect of many good ones; and one base deed, after years of noble service, will cover them all with shame.—Aughey.

Culling Ewe Flock

Extremely old ewes frequently fail to do the best by their lambs. When it gets hot and dry and pasture is short they fail to give milk enough. They soon run down and are never able to catch up with those whose mothers are young and in prime condition. This gives a lot of runty lambs in the flock at weaning time.

There are other classes of culls that every Fall need attention. Those with a light clip of undesirable wool, those that are undersized or develop weak constittions, the individuals that don't seem to have developed the motherly instinct, the wild, tricky ones that are always dodging about and keep the flock excited, the kind that always lag behind when the flock is being called out of the field, stop at the gate, stand there a while and finally turn around and deliberately walk back in the field, drawing the whole flock after them.

"Some of our low prices are due more to underconsumption than to overproduction."

—Rexford G. Tugwell.

Sales Mount

Over twenty-five million dollars of "new ordinary life insurance" was sold in Canada and Newfoundland last month, according to returns compiled by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau and just published by the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association. These sales, we read, (which are based on returns from nineteen companies having 90 per cent. of the business in force) "are exclusive of group insurance and of annuities and pension bonds," August sales were as follows:

Urges Canada To Advertise

Agnes Macphail Says Other Dominions Do So In Old Country

Toronto.—Agnes Macphail, here after her return from a trip to Europe, urged Canada to put on a "dignified and reasonable" advertising campaign for Canadian products in the United Kingdom. Other colonies are advertising, she said.

"Somebody is to blame, something is wrong," said Miss Macphail. "Whether the other colonies are spending money on advertising or not I do not know, but Canadians feel Canada is not as important to the people in London as are the other colonies."

She said she felt more at home in Denmark and Sweden than in any other countries in Europe. Russia has made unbelievable advances in many fields of endeavor, but she doubted if the people of Russia would be so content "if they knew what was going on in other lands."

"There must be terrific monotony," she said. "There must be this awful fear of getting into disfavor with the authorities. There is no fear of economic insecurity there, of either old age or incapacitation but they do not know the same sense of safety as we do."

Tree Trade

Writes the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph, we are living in a highly competitive age; no sooner does someone discover a profitable business connection or line of trade than someone else steps in to do battle with him for it. A proverb of the Victorian age used to say that competition was the life of trade, but it is hard to see how the modern kind of competition is particularly life-giving.

An example is drawn to our attention by Mr. G. A. Newman, Assistant Trade Commissioner in New York, who in a report to the Commercial Intelligence Journal, speaking of Christmas trade—for which it is not too soon to prepare—states that there is an increased sale of potted trees and rather cos ly artificial trees in the Eastern United States where once the natural Canadian tree held sway; domestic supplies being irregular and limited by embargos on pest-infected areas.

In spite of this condition, Mr. Newman adds, however, there is still a regular seasonal demand for trees cut in the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; established dealers in the trade sending representatives to the various producing areas, as a rule, in the summer and autumn to contract for supplies. And just how extensive the trade has become may be seen from the fact that 3,573,642 Canadian Christmas trees, valued at $364,135, were imported into the United States last year, as against 3,681,439 trees, valued at $375,286 in 1934.

The trees thus imported are said to find a market in most of the large American cities of the East that may be reached without prohibitive freight charges. New York, as one would expect, is the main consuming centre; taking annually from 400 to 425 cars of from 1,500 to 2,000; while Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Pittsburgh and other points account for somewhat smaller quantities.

Alleged WIT

Indignant Mother—Are you kissing that young man, Geraldine?

Geraldine — No, Mother. I'm only brushing my teeth on his moustache.

A man, who seems dumb and who realizes it, more or less, quite often succeeds where a man of superior mental attainments fails. Reason, the dull one has poise and patience, where the smart one has neither.

Helen — I know a woman who lived to the age of 40 without learning to read or write. Then she met a man who made a scholar of her in two years.

Henry — That's nothing. I know a man who was a scholar at 40, but he met a woman who made a fool of him in two days.

The one objection to the wages of sin, is that too many other people don't get paid off soon enough.

Herbert — Too bad about the village blacksmith.

Julian — How so?

Herbert — He was arrested for forgery.

"Going away on your vacation?"
"No."
"Then why the radiant expression?"
"Just learned that the wife's relatives aren't coming here for theirs."

Bride — Dear, what is the true definition of a groom?

Hubby — Why, a groom is a man who takes care of dumb animals.

Our wants will, at any time, vastly outrun, the most high-geared production of the machine age. But the one trouble so far as the demand on the producers is concerned, is that we want vastly more than we can pay for.

Mother — What is your baby brother crying for?

Junior — He's dug a big hole in the back yard and can't bring it in the house.

Think it over: A building can be razed after it has been raised, but it cannot be raised after it has been razed.

The man who had an inflated idea of his own importance usually finds that the community has him sized up as he would look after deflation.

The customer proved most exacting, and the clerk grew impatient:

Customer — Are you sure this is a genuine crocodile skin?

Clerk — Quite sure. I know the man that shot it.

Customer — It looks rather dirty.

Clerk — Well, yes, that's where the animal struck the ground when it fell out of the tree.

A local doctor says he answered a telephone call a few days ago and was told this: "Say, Doc, my wife just dislocated her jaw; if you happen to be out this way in the next week or two, call in and see her."

Woman — He used to kiss me every time our train passed through a tunnel before our marriage.

Friend — And doesn't he do so now?

Woman — No; he takes a drink.

The man who tries to work at several things at a time stands a very good chance not to get any of them done.

Little Boy (looking at his mother's new fur coat)—How that poor beast must have suffered that you could have such a fur coat.

Mother — Hush, Junior. You shouldn't talk so of your father.

The transport was shoving off for the Orient. Two little flappers were waving good-byes from the dock.

First Flapper — I think it's a shame to send all those nice Marines to China. What will they do there?

Second FlNapper — What'll they do? Ain't you ever been out with a Marine?

Oh! What a Roll!

Yes, sir—You can bank on rolling a better cigarette with Ogden's Fine Cut.

A minister denounces betting because it's a "means of getting money for nothing." It's even worse than that—it's a means of getting nothing for your money.

Tobacco production in British colonies, which was practically unknown a few years ago, now supplies the United Kingdom with one-fourth of its tobacco requirements.
