The Years Twelve Children.

January, worn and gray,
Like an old pilgrim on the way,
Watches the snow, and shivering sighs
As the wild curlew' round him flies;
Or, huddled underneath a thorn,
Sits praying for the lingering morn.

February. bluff and cold,
O'er furrows striding scorns the cold,
And with his horses two abreast
Makes a keen plough do his behest.

Rough March comes blust'ring down the road
In his wrathy hand the oxen goad;
Or, with a rough and angry haste,
Scatters the seeds o'er the dark waste.

April, a child, half tears, half smiles,
Trips full of little playful wiles;
And laughing, 'neath her rainbow hood,
Seeks the wild violets in the wood.

May, the bright maiden, singing goes,
To where the snowy hawthorn blows,
Watching the lambs leap in the dells,
List'ning the simple village bells.

June, with the mower's scarlet face,
Moves o'er the clover field apace.
And fast his crescent scythe sweeps on
O'er spots from whence the lark has flown.

July, the farmer happy fellow,
Laughs to see the corn grow yellow;
The heavy grain he tosses up
From his right hand as from a cup.

August, the reaper, cleaves his way,
Through golden waves at break of day;
Or in his waggon, piled with corn.
At sunset home is proudly borne.

September, with his baying hound,
Leaps fence and pale at every bound,
And casts into the wind in scorn,
All cares and dangers from his horn.

October comes, a woodman old.
Fenced with tough leather from the cold;
Round swings his sturdy axe, and lo!
A fir branch falls at every blow.

November cowers before the flame,
Blear crone, forgetting her own name!
Watching the blue smoke curling rise,
And broods upon old memories.

December, fat and rosy, strides,
His old heart warm, well clothed his sides;
With kindly word for young and old,
The cheerier for the bracing cold,
Laughing a welcome, open flings
His doors, and as he goes he sings.

Infidelity.—No. 4.

To the Editor of the Advance.

Henry Ward Beecher says, "An hypothesis was a glorious guess," but your matured Infidel takes no such inglorious uncertainty into his calculations. All ecclesiastical, psychical, or scientific scholasticism, contrary to their Agnostic, or Freethinking announcements, are damn'd with vile invectives; or glossed with low, base, trifling, if not obscene, jest; altogether incompatible with the gravity those great and important subjects demand. Whether right or wrong, the fact of them being subjects for discussion at all—man's origin and destiny—the existence of a God—the authenticity of Christ—demand a fair, candid, and honorable criticism.

The Infidel's forte lies not in logic, stern and true; their theory never did and never will stand its test. It suits only the base and corrupt, and succeeds but very poorly under their best circumstances—where is the most of poison producing miasma there will be the most disease; so, likewise, where is most irreligion there is and will be most immorality, and the foul, non-vitalizing principles of Infidelity.

The success of Infidelity, viewed as an organization, shows but little or no progress. Although Tom. Paine was a contemporary with John Wesley, a comparison of the fruits is ridiculous. Where are the Temples or Halls of Infidelity? The writer knows of none. There was a Temple in Boston at one time, if my memory serves me, but it was soon shut up; the sheriff was more potent than that brave, boasting society. There is lack of cohesion, want of force, and in the parts where societies have been attempted, it was generally for the basest of purposes. No! the invisible finger of the God they ignore touches them and as Babylon fell so fall all their temples. Success! where is it? Echo answers, where?

For base and sinister motives the lesser lights prate like parrots, Ingersoll in hand—and to the half-witted, they seem intelligent and smart—but it is the intelligence of the parrot! By the wise they are written off fools, and are left alone in their folly. Their theory regarding man commences in mud. A rational conclusion is, that anything more than their success obtained, would be disappointing. But how is it with Wesley for instance, as opposed to Payne? Look at the hosts who revere him wherever the sun shines all over the world! with churches or temples in almost every hamlet. Look at kindred institutions spring into activity since Paine's day; missionary societies, Sabbath school institutions multiplied and multiplying. See the forces Christianity has resuscitated or originated for the enlightening and benefitting the nations!

If for nothing more than for the elevation of the female to honorable position and rank; to a position of coequality with man; from a state of subordination, abjection and slavery—Christianity deserves universal recognition and admiration.

Christianity immeasurebly distances Infidelity in everything vital, useful, and sublime.

If it were possible, please collect into one great hippodrome all the Infidels of the ages down to Ingersoll—and himself included—their very best—and place with them the results of their labors—in their charities, their halls of learning, their arts and sciences, in important discoveries, which have revolutionized the world—such as Printing, the Mariner's Compass, Steam, or Electricity, or [illegible], and Ichabod, in legible character[illegible] everywhere written. Compare then [illegible]d their works with Bacon, Newton, Morse, Wilberforce, Howard, Wesley, and a host of others, and the blessings to humanity from their discoveries and labors, and Infidelity is placed at an enormous discount. Their motives respectively, guarantee the resulting fruit. The Infidel aims at the root of goodness; it wages war with essential and sublime agencies; it aims to demolish Christianity, to blot out the Sabbath, to ignore God and Christ, to annul marriages, and to annihilate every spiritual element or ordinance. The conscience is relieved of guards and consequently courts of justice become farcical, and general disruption follows.

The motives of the Christian are, to be good and to do good; and what is good to and for himself, he eagerly endeavors to impart to others. The ten millions of adherents of John Wesley alone, vindicate the grandeur and worth of the man, the superiority, success, and Godly recognition of this one branch of the great Christian heritage, as against all the Infidels that ever lived.

But why contrast a thing so self-evident? A wayfaring man tho' a fool realizes the benefits of the one and the abominable fruits of the other.

It is to be hoped, that our young men, nay, our old ones, too, will scorn such dangerous, such damnable doctrines, as are propagated, or endeavored to be, by designing men—professed Infidels—who, from a mere love of bravado, often spue out sentiments abhorrent and devilish in character, as I trust I have briefly yet sufficiently shown. The man who speaks disrespectfully of the Being you worship, give him a wide berth, and regret will never be yours. Remember the Scripture saith,—"The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."

Too Much "Water."

To the Editor of The Advance.

Sir,—Some of the young men of this village viewed the grand scenery in the neighborhood of one of the most notable waterfalls in the Province, the other day. One of the young men seemed to be particularly affected by the grandeur of the scene—or by the strength of the water. Upon his return to his nativity, he was visibly affected in the cerebellum, which affected considerably the lower extremities. However, he manfully went to the sacred house, but morpheous overtaking him there, he had to retire before the eloquent sermon of the pastor was concluded.

An Editor's Tribute.

Wayne, Ind., "Gazette," writes: "For the past five years have always used Dr. King's New discovery, for coughs of most severe character, as well as for those of a milder type. It never fails to effect a speedy cure. My friends to whom I have recommended it speak of it in same high terms. Having been cured by it of every cough I have had for five years, I consider it the only reliable and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, etc," Call at W. FOWLS are as profitable as any other stock the farmer can keep, and more so, provided he pays to them the same attention, and is much interested in them, as in his other stock. In a majority of cases fowls are merely kept on the farm because they cannot well be dispensed with, and not because the farmer wishes to reap any profit there from. As a general thing, you will find that poultry on farms belong to no special breed, but that they are a mixed up mess. Unless the farmer keeps birds that come from a good stock, and feeds them regularly, he cannot expect any profits.

DR. LOW'S WORM SYRUP will remove all kinds of Worms from children or adults.

A Good Receipt.

To the Editor of the Advance.

By many years experience I have proved the following receipt to be of inestimable value to House-keepers for removing stains from cloths and woodwork. A pound of common washing soda and half a pound of fresh unslaked lime and put into 6 quarts of boiling water. This being allowed to settle the clear water is then poured off and tightly corked for use. A cupful poured into a boiler of soap suds cleanses and bleaches the clothes beautifully, and greatly lessens the labor of scrubbing. It is also used for bleaching skeleton leaves.
