World's Largest Annual Exposition Will Celebrate

60 Years An Agricultural Fair, the C.N.E. Continues to Progress, To Increase in Scope—1938 Show Emphasizes Growing Importance of Dominion of Canada In Fields of Industry, Commerce—Exhibits From European Countries Have Prominent Place—More Entertainment Features Than Ever Before.

This year the Canadian National Exhibition is celebrating its Diamond Jubilee. For sixty years this great organization has functioned without interruption and has in that time increased in scope, magnitude and prestige. In 1879 it was little more than a country fair with its influence barely extending to the boundaries of the Province of Ontario. Today it is acknowledged to be the world's largest annual exposition with a world-wide influence and which draws visitors from the four corners of the globe.

Basic Industry, Agriculture

The Canadian National Exhibition was originally an agricultural Fair. Its influence has vastly grown and extended since those days but nevertheless the place of agriculture in the activities of the Canadian National Exhibition is still of major importance. This year throughout every field of the basic industry greater activity is evinced than ever before and the thousands of entries in all sections are expected to eclipse all previous years.

British Government Interested

The growing importance of the Dominion of Canada in the industrial and commercial world is this year emphasized in greater degree than ever. In the International Building will be found the displays of six European countries, the largest representation the Exhibition has ever had. In the Governments Building the overseas dominions of the British Empire are again all represented, as is the eastern group of the British West Indies.

The importance attached by the British government to the Canadian National Exhibition is exemplified this year in the fact that it has, through the Department of Overseas Trade, taken over a complete building known as the United Kingdom Pavilion to house a huge prestige display illustrative of the vast progress in British transportation and communications down through the years.

For Lovers of Art, Music

The Art Gallery, always a focal point for lovers of beauty, is more interesting than ever. The famous Art galleries of Great Britain have contributed many beautiful and famous paintings to this year's show, not only from the brushes of contemporary British painters but also many old masterpieces. Sculpture is represented by the works of Epstein and Frank Dobson.

Lovers of music have many a rare treat in store this year for the musical presentations are indeed numerous. Heading the list is the band of the Royal Artillery from England, over seventy strong. This band is unique among the world's military bands, in so far as it is also a symphony orchestra of great merit, as every musician can play at least two instruments. Then there is the Welsh Imperial Singers who will be heard in concert at the Coliseum and on one gala night being accompanied by the band of the Royal Artillery. The Mendelssohn Choir, Canada's premier choral organization will be heard in concert from the Band Shell and the Music Day attractions will be actually more numerous than ever before.
