REAT WORK IN NEW BRUNSWICK

ODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MADE F. W. HARRIS A WELL MAN.

He Suffered From Kidney Disease for Two and a Half Years—Only one of the Many Cured by the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Central Waterville, York Co., N.B., Dec. 7.—(Special).—The case of F. W. Harris of this place is one more evidence of the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing in New Brunswick. Mr. Harris makes the following statement for publication:

"I suffered for two years and a half from Kidney Troubles, being unable to attend to my work the greater part of the time. I tried many medicines without getting any benefit, but actually grew worse.

"I took three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured me. I think Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy for Kidney trouble."

Bright's Disease is the most advanced stage of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that will cure it. But it is wiser and safer to guard against Bright's Disease by using Dodd's Kidney Pills when your Kidneys give the first symptoms of distress—pain in the back or slight urinary disorder.

S A MAN OF MANY PARTS

UAL CHARACTER OF SIR HARRY H. JOHNSTON.

A Great Explorer, Able Administrator, and Only 45 Years Of Age.

There are few men who have inded the two worlds of thought and ction with such brilliant dash and aring as Sir Harry Hamilton Johnston. Without family influence, and y the three qualities of pluck, energy, and resources, he succeeded in reaking down the barriers of Foreign Office favoritism, and at the ge of forty-five stands with the tters G.C.M.G., and K.C.B. after is name, and a long record of service behind him as an explorer and dministrator in East, West, and entral Africa.

But his reputation does not end ith this. As the author of many mportant books, as a journalist with ew things to tell and a vivid style f telling them, as a master of many anguages, as an artist whose pictures are hung in the Academy, as a aturalist and zoologist with many riginal discoveries to his credit, he as won his spurs in literature, art, nd science.

This man of restless energy, with firm hand upon the activities of ublic life and work, who has ruled ver great countries, and dominated y his strong personality thousands f civilised and uncivilised men in urbulent regions, has a strangely ual character, which perhaps is the ecret of his success.

A COMPLEX PERSONALITY.

"Three-quarters of me," he said recently in a private conversation raves for a life of peace and study, nd retirement from the strife of the world. But the other quarter is possessed by a little demon which pricks me on to take an active part in the practical problems of the world, and will never let me rest."

But always in the midst of the anxious cares of Colonial administration, during perilous explorations through savage regions, and in the turmoil of Imperial politics, the student life, the love of things beautiful in literature, art, and nature have tugged at his heartstrings.

The pervading impression of his personality is one of ceaseless activity. In his quick, searching eyes there is the power of reading men's character which is the sign of all men who have learnt to govern. In his square, firm jaw there is the dogged determination which has carried him through many a great and difficult task. In his brisk, frank, vivacious, enthusiastic speech there is that magnetic influence which marks him out as a leader of men, as a man whom other men will follow, through danger and difficulty, with faith that he will get to the goal he has in view.

A REMARKABLE CAREER.

He was only twenty-one when he first made acquaintance with Africa, which was afterwards to be his happy hunting-ground. Spending some time in Tunis, he mastered Arabic, and probed into the social and political problems of that romantic region. A series of articles on this subject attracted the attention of Lord Mayo, who was arranging a mission to Portuguese West Africa, and knowing that Johnston was familiar with the Portuguese language, he invited him to accompany the expedition. The young enthusiast accepted the offer, and upon the completion of the mission travelled on alone into the heart of the Congo, and tracked the great river of Central Africa through its tropical wanderings.

Returning home at the end of 1883, he produced a remarkable work dealing with the River Congo which brought him into notice, and was the means of his being selected to conduct an expedition to Kilimanjaro, in East Africa. Johnston's great energy and shrewd observations won him the favor of Lord Salisbury, and after he had recorded the results of the expedition in a new book, he was appointed in the autumn of 1885 as Vice-Consul to the Cameroons and Oil River. He was shortly promoted to be Chief Consul, and in this capacity took sole charge of the great territory now known as Southern Nigeria. After that came rapid promotion. In 1888 Lord Salisbury appointed his young protege Consul for Portuguese West Africa, and the year following he was nominated to undertake the task, which he successfully performed of securing, with the aid of Mr. Alfred Sharpe, all British Central Africa and Northern Rhodesia for the British Empire.

VARIED EXPERIENCES.

For these services he was made a Companion of the Bath in 1890, and the year following was given the combined post of Commissioner and Consul-General in British and Central Africa, and Consul to the Portuguese possessions in East Africa. For the six years following he administered Nyassaland, and of his work at this time he says—"If I have done anything worthy of being called good it is my successful efforts in stamping out the horrors of the slave trade in those regions."

During his time he wrote two books dealing with Nyassaland and British Central Africa, and in 1896 came home to superintend their publication and to receive his K.C.B. The next year found him as Consul-General of Tunis, where, in his youth, he had first come in touch with the romance of Africa. Here he stayed until 1899, when he became Special Commissioner to Uganda, a country, with an area of some 150,000 square miles, and containing, as he says: "nearly all the wonders, most of the extremes, the most signal beauties, and some of the horrors of the Dark Continent." Upon his arrival this region was in turbulent and dangerous condition, with a civil war raging in its midst. But in twenty months, under Sir Harry's strong hand and by his deep knowledge of African races, it became a peaceful dependency of the British Empire.

Sir Harry Johnston's great book upon the Uganda Protectorate, produced upon his return in 1902, is one of the most remarkable contributions to the world's literature. It is more than on account of his own experiences and investigations. It is a masterly exposition of the great sociological and scientific problems of the native races of Central Africa, containing also many remarkable contributions to zoology and natural history.

REVOLUTION IN BUILDING.

Machine Which Will do Work of Seven Men.

Mr. J. H. Knight, of Farnham, England, has patented a machine which will lay bricks at a pace hitherto undreamt of even by the "miracle" workers at Neasden.

Hitherto the British workman has considered the laying of from 500 to 600 bricks a good day's work. At Neasden, under American methods, a record average has been struck of 2,278 per man. Mr. Knight claims for his experimental machine that it will do the work of six or seven skilled bricklayers, at considerably less than half the cost.

Simple in construction, the machine weighs about 60 lbs., and does not require skilled labor for its working. It runs upon a light girder, which can be raised as the work progresses. The bricks are fed to it by hand; a lever pushes them home, side rollers keep a face on the work, and other rollers press the bricks down on the mortar, which is run out by a hopper, worked, like the machine, by hand.

It is not suited for ornamental work, but buildings of a plain character can be raised by it from the inside without any of the scaffolding which plays so prominent a part in present-day building.

And it cannot shirk its work.

TOBACCO AT A DISCOUNT.

Tons of War Office Mixture is Lying at the Docks.

The tale of British War Office blunders during the late South African war is not yet complete. The latest instance concerns the injudicious purchase of tobacco for the troops.

Several thousand packages of black cake tobacco, a strong variety, were purchased in America and shipped to the Cape, the idea being that the soldiers might obtain a cheap tobacco from the canteens. It was either too strong for the stomachs and nerves of our men or the consignment never left the wharves at Cape Town until the campaign was over. At any rate, some five hundred tons of this tobacco are warehoused at the present time at Southampton docks, England. They were taken from the holds of the transports Syria and Staffordshire some time ago.

It is difficult to say what the War Office intend to do with the tobacco. As a marketable commodity it has little value. There is not much demand for it in England, and it must be sold at a loss.

A previous stock of returned tobacco was sold from the Southampton Customs at 2d a pound. It probably cost the country double that amount.

Wash greasy dishes, pots or pans with Lever's Dry Soap a powder. It will remove the grease with the greatest ease.

Lawyer Bruce Thornton is examining into the affairs of his late friend and client, A. E. Winston. He finds that his Life Insurance Policies are only "shells." They were all mortgaged to the moneylenders for advances used in speculation. "There is, therefore, nothing left for the dead man's family." "A very sad case, a very sad case indeed," remarked lawyer Thornton. "I wish the poor fellow had carried a policy in the Independent Order of Foresters; that Order would not have allowed him to mortgage it and his family would now be able to enjoy it."

Your Family's Daily Bread.

It is handy to have a life insurance policy upon which you can raise a loan with which to speculate.

Remember, however, that it is your family's daily bread that you are risking.

Every man should carry a life insurance policy which is "pure life insurance," and such a policy is the policy of the I. O. F.
