under any monarchy whatever. It is also a fact that these very men have given its existence to the great American Republic. They worshipped God before whom all men are equal. A striking illustration here we find in the words of the only outspoken infidel officer of any prominence over the hosts of the United Colonies, Ethan Allen. The influence of Veneration in this republican people proved in one instance at least too strong even for him; for when he demanded the surrender of the British at Ticonderoga, "In the name of the Great Jehovah and of the American Congress." When the people of Israel, desiring to be in the fashion, asked for a king, the Lord said unto Samuel, "They have rejected me that I should not reign over them." Where men have forgotten to worship the Creator, there a king, a pope, a priest, the image of St. George slaying the dragon, or even of the German beer king, Gambrinus, with the back gate for support, may, become the object of Veneration. Some of the best men in the United States believe that the greatest danger which threatens the American republic is that of high treason against the King of Kings in the way of materialistic unbelief.

Abnormal action. As an example of the abnormal manifestation of this feeling so noble in its proper action, may be mentioned the case of Diana Waters, who for twenty years, went through the streets of Philadelphia exhorting every one to repent and incessantly praying aloud, paying no attention to the mocking of the world. She prophesied continually the second advent of Christ and always within a week. Abnormal is certainly the action of this organ in those who pray the best when under the influence of strong drink. I knew one who always when on a spree sought some one whom he considered a pious person to pray for him and with him. These are usually old inebriates whose previous excesses have to a great extent destroyed the force of the organs in the base of the brain. Even the stimulating does not act on organs so destroyed: it ascends higher in such cases and finds the organ of Veneration still capable of some activity.

The Phrenological assertion that the sentiment of Veneration is innate in the human mind, has been much controverted as erroneous. In this the reports of travellers are appealed to, who, among certain tribes, have not found or would not find any religious belief. We might as reasonably say, that the combative principle is not innate because there are cowards; that Acquisitiveness (accumulation of property) is not innate because there are spendthrifts; that there is no innate feeling of Benevolence because certain tribes cannibals; or not innate Ideality (sense of ideal beauty) because many persons, perhaps, whole nations, appear to be wanting in this faculty. Even the practical logic of common speech stands higher in this than the theoretical language of some would-be-philosophers. Does not the idea comprehended in the words God, piety, devotion, edification, etc., prove that reverence is innate. The proofs are so numerous we must be careful lest the trees prevent us seeing the forest.

This organ appears large in the heads of Oberlin, the theologian, John Wesley, Jonathan Edwards, Dr. Pussey, Dr. Chalmers, Luther, Melancthon, and the Emperor William. Its small developement may be seen in the flatness and depression apparent in the middle of the top head of profane and irreverent persons that abound in every community in America.

A WISE CONCLUSION.—If you have vainly tried many remedies for rheumatism' it will be a wise conclusion to try Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It cures all painful diseases when other medicine fail.

A "Mouse Story."

To the Editor of The Advance.

Sir,—Man that is born of woman are as small potatoes; only a few in a hill! But when they go around to the teas, collecting the fares and selling tickets at unusual prices,—people in our neighborhood going to teas, taking three or four tickets generally get a reduction of five cents at least, but this Lady Bank correspondent wanted something to do. But when a creature of this kind promotes himself to the platform to make the girls glad, and it appears in the shape of a mouse and dances around, upsetting the pews and getting so excited over a mouse story that the ladies in place of being glad, malling him down on his knees on the platform—putting him on a level with the—brute—the poor creature looked so forsaken that the congregation did not know whether to give him a cheer or not, but eventually, out of pity, gave him a little one to sustain his drooping spirits.

A STRANGER.

A DOUBLE PURPOSE.—The popular remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil, is used both internally and externally, for aches, pains, colds, croup, rheumatism, deafness and diseases of an inflammatory nature.

FOR THE COMPLEXION,—For Pimples, Blotches, Tan, and all itching tumors of the skin, use Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap.
