Rearing Chickens on the Farm

There is every indication that there will be a great consumption of poultry in Canada this year. The demand for every class shows a striking increase during the last few years. Mr. F. C. Hare, Chief of the Dominion Poultry Division, does not believe it possible for the farmers to rear, for at least five years to come, more utility type chickens than can be sold with profit on the Canadian markets alone. Moreover, commission merchants in Great Britain can handle profitably at least $1,000,000 worth of our poultry yearly Last year the export of chickens to Great Britain was materially reduced on account of the great demand in Canada. The poultry exports from Canada to Great Britain were only $160,513, a small proportion of the $5,154,093 imported by the mother country. The greatest value of poultry was exported from Russia, Belgium, France and the United States. Each of these countries shipped over $1,000,000 worth. It is a short sighted policy on the part of our farmers to neglect this industry, when there is an unsatisfied demand for poultry. Information with regard to any branch of the business can be had gratis, and the business is a profitable one.

It will pay almost every farmer to improve his flock before the breeding season begins. The old fowls should be killed. There is a greatly increased profit in breeding from utility-type specimens rather than from common barnyard stock. It is preferable to select the eggs for hatching from a breeding pen of the best ten or twelve hens and one cockeral rather than from the larger number of laying hens on the farm. As a general rule, the eggs that are incubated on the farm are the eggs from the poorer layers. A utility type Plymouth Rock cockerel should be bought and placed at the head of the breeding pen. A great improvement will be noticed in any flock of farm fowls by crossing with the Plymouth Rock.

The eggs for hatching should be kept in a cool place (40 to 60 degrees.) The chickens should not be hatched later than the middle of June. May-hatched chickens are preferable. It is quite possible for almost every farmer to increase the number of chickens reared with little extra labor.

Sitting hens should not be allowed to hatch chickens in any place they choose about the farm buildings. They should be in one pen, set apart for this purpose. The nest boxes should be made without a floor and placed around the sides of the pen. Two or three shovelfuls of earth should be thrown into each nest box and a hollow space scooped out for the eggs. The earth should be covered sparingly with straw. A board is required in front of the nest to confine the hen at will. This nest will give outdoor conditions in an indoor pen. The sitting hen should be thoroughly dusted with sulphur to kill the vermin. All of them should be fed on whole grain and grit, and watered at one time. The hens should be placed on the nests and closed in when they finish feeding. It is advisble to start several hens together. The infertile eggs can be tested out on the ninth day and one or more of the hens reset.

There is a great loss in farm-reared chickens, caused by the mother hen having her liberty. The hen wanders through the wet grass; the chickens follow her and become chilled and the weaker ones die. This loss can be prevented by confining the hens in a brood coop. It is more satisfactory to have a large brood coop that will be a shelter during inclement weather. A packing box of three or four feet, each dimension, is none too large. The cover is reversed (opened end on the ground) and an opening one foot high is made across one side of the box against the open end. Two one-inch by two-inch cleats are nailed on the two ends of the box at the ground. The cover or floor is reduced in size so that it will slide in on these cleats. This allows the floor to be removed for cleaning. The box should be covered with tar paper to make it water tight and there should be a 10 by 14 pane of glass in the front. This glass should slide in cleats for ventilation. In front of the one foot opening at the ground there should be a crate 15 inches high covered with laths, two inches apart. The hen comes out into the lath crate to be fed and watered; the chickens run through the laths. This form of coop will house safely one hen and 30 chickens. The number of coops is thus reduced. The hen and chickens should be placed in a grass field. This will reduce the mortality due to the chickens being reared on infected ground around the farm buildings. A number of cases have been reported to the Poultry Division of chickens and turkeys dying because of feeding on ground previously infested by diseased fowls.

Yours very truly,
W. A. CLEMONS,
Publication Clerk.

A sad event occurred on Tuesday evening about nine o'clock, by which a little child lost its life. The scene of the occurrence was at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. McLeod, Mill Road. Their little boy eleven months old was sitting on the floor and picked up a screw nail which it put in its mouth. When noticed it was in a dying condition. and although the parents concluded that it was choking from some cause nothing could be done until it was too late. Drs. Middlebro and Dow were both summoned but before either arrived the child was dead. The nail was found to be lodged in the windpipe, the widened head being too large to pass down, and completely closing the passage like a valve. It was hastily removed and efforts made to restore animation but without success. The parents will have much sympathy in their bereavement.—O. S. Advertiser.

LIFTING THE BURDEN

With a Gentle Hand—ANTI-PILL.

Woman's life is a battle with nerves that sap strength and energy. Shattered nerves aggravate and promote chronic troubles. There is no time in a woman's life Anti-Pill fails to do good.

When the sleep is restless, food causes distress, headache or dizziness, pains in the side or back, indigestion, palpitation, appetite poor, constipated, all tired out, depressed—just one trial of Dr. Leonhardt's ANTI-PILL will "lighten the burden" that is dragging you down. It begins its work in the stomach from which the blood is fed and the nerves controlled.

ANTI-PILL embraces a new principle. Its effects are different from anything else, and there is no mistaking its wonderful influence. Dr. Leonhardt has prepared the formula entirely free from the injurious ingredients common to present day Pills, etc. It is the ideal system treatment. Price, 50 cents per box of dealers, or by addressing WILSON-FYLE Co., Niagara Falls, Ontario, who will also mail free sample to any address.

A correspondent informs us that a farmer near Mooresburg, in order to break a good road to his bush, hitched his team into the sleigh and took a large soapkettle in tow to scoop out a path, but as the strange craft was too buoyant his hardy old father seated himself in it and as the team was started up and the snowship did its cowcatcher work he began a basso to sing, "Rocked in the cradle of of the deep." The kettle, besides, making a smooth path, also left a conspicuous black mark behind which enabled the wea herbeaten seamen to navigate without a compass and prevented their horses from getting snowblind. Ancient sugarkettles will now be taken out of the museum and given a chance to gain popularity anew.—Chesley Enterprise.

The largest load of leather that ever left an Owen Sound tannery was moved to the Canadian Pacific freight sheds yesterday afternoon. The consignment was entirely of harness leather for Montreal, Toronto and Brandon and the load was valued at $2,600.—Times.
