MARKDALE

A Voice From the House of Refuge

To THE EDITOR OF THE ADVANCE:

DEAR SIR—Will you kindly give me space in the colums of your valuable paper, to express a few remarks in connection with this admirable institution, for the information of your many readers. It would have been a difficult matter to find a more depressed in spirit, or sad hearted person than the writer, when the expected hour arrived in which he was unavoidably necessitated to take his departure from the neighborhood in which he had spent so many years among so many friends, to spend the rest of his days in a House of Refuge. Low as were the spirits and sad as was the heart, yet it is not matter of wonder that only a few hours should suffice to dispel the gloom, to drive away the darkened cloud and restore the depressed one to his wonted state of cheerfulness. To find welcome in a bright, comfortable and neatly furnished room, with its two comfortable beds and snowy white furnishings; to be greeted with the kindly countenance and cheery words by the estimable matron, as she deposits a pile of reading matter on the dressing table; to be served with a substantial and inviting dinner, and a little later, to receive a most cordial welcome from, and a pleasant conversation with the equally estimable governor, was sufficient to raise the spirits of the most depressed, and anyone who cannot be cheered by such reception must indeed be irreconcilable. As the writer is unable to leave his room, he cannot give in detail the working of the institution but, being pleasantly situated with a fair view of his surroundings, he is favorably impressed that everything is complete and by far exceeding his expectations. The food is excellent, abundant, inviting, well and regularly served; the rooms are clean, comfortable and well ventilated as well as light and cheerful looking; the ablution rooms are complete, the inmates are required to take a bath every Saturday afternoon. Those who are unable to leave their rooms are provided with neat toilet service and dressing table, their meals are brought to them. the meals are served to the inmates in two separate dining rooms in the basement, males and females by themselves. The medical gentleman in attendance is almost a daily visitor. His genial countenance is medicine itself. The electric lights in the hallway have a pleasant effect after dark. We understand that each room will be provided with a lamp in the near future. Thursday in each weak is visitors' day, when visitors are courteously shown through the building, but we are inclined to think that a person would not be denied the privilege of seeing a friend on any other day—however, on this point I am not positive, having made no inquiries. A large number of ladies visited us last Thursday and appeared to be favorably impressed with the institution. It is expected that arrangements will be made in the near future for holding divine service each Sabbath for the benefit of those who are unable to attend outside churches. There are at present nine inmates, five men and four women, and it is pleasing to note that each one is willing to do what he can for the institution and in helping those who are unable to help themselves. We trust that our worthy governor will soon be able to resume his duties, feeling confident that his pleasant countenance and kindly words will be efficacious in gladdening the hearts of those under his charge.

To provide this magnificent home for the poor has, unquestionably, been an expensive undertaking, but it reflects unspeakable credit on the county, and how grateful should each of us feel that the days are past when the aged, respectable but homeless poor are thrust into a common jail to spend their last days on earth under the same roof with criminals and murderers. Let us hope that the lockup for refractory inmates, which, we understand, is built in connection with this institution, will never need to be put to a worse use than the custody of spades, hoes and garden rakes. Let us hope that all whose misfortunes compel them to seek a home under this roof will feel it their bounden duty to comply with the rules of the house, and do all in their power to maintain in the future the credit of its inception. As school children, by attention and obedience, materially assist their teacher, even so can the inmates of this house assist the governor and matron in making this institution not only a credit to the county, but a pattern for the province. —INMATE
