Apple Juice Is Now A Popular Beverage

Apple juice has made tremendous gains in popularity as a Canadian beverage. This is due in part to advertising, and also to improved quality of the juice being offered for sale. The quality has been enchanced by improvements in methods of processing and containers, so that now apple juice is conveniently available in attractive bottles as well as n several sizes of cans. People are drinking more apple juice, not because they are told that it is nutritious, but because they like it.

Considerable research by several agencies and investigators has contributed to the production of better quality juice. Improved methods of selecting and handling the fruit, deaeration and flash pasteurizing of the juice have all assisted in producing a fine flavored apple juice of good keeping qualities. Advancements in the treatment of tin cans for use with apple juice have also been beneficial.

While it is now possible to give the public a really good apple drink, additional research is still desirable. Present methods of manufacture may be further improved with a view to producing, not only a uniformly at-attractive and appetizing apple juice, but one in which the maximum nutritive properties have been retained.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has recently established standards for apple juice. This assures the public a more uniform and better product. The juice may be one of three types: clear, unfiltered, or a crushed, pulpy type, somewhat similar to pineapple juice in appearance. Thus there is considerable choice available in the selection of apple juice to meet individual prefernces.

MORE FAST TRAINS ON THIS CONTINENT

Railroad passenger service in Canada and the United States is much faster taday than it was a year ago, according to the annual train scredule survey just completed and made public by Railroad Magazine. This study shows that separate runs operating daily at an average speed of a mile-a-minute or more, grew during the year from 997 to 1,226 — a jump of 23 per cent. The extension of mile-a-minute railroading, it is pointed out, is primarily due to the general improvement of inter-city services rather than to a spectacular speed-up of any one system.

Canadian army trucks and other mechanized equipment is playing a major part in the British victory over the Italians in Africa.

Morale of Enemy Cannot Be Counted Upon

Windsor, Dec. 30, 1940

Dear Mr. Thurston:

Since it has not been my pleasure or privilege to visit Flesherton to speak personally with numerous old friends and meet some of the younger generation who have entirely outgrown my memory, I take this opportunity of writing these few lines.

You, have no doubt by this date, some knowledge of our dangerous, strenuous and miraculous escape from Paris. It cannot be described otherwise and it is only by our thoughts and deepest sympathy for those friends who we have left behind, that we can appreciate how fortunate we have been in getting away.

Imagine our sudden emotion on the departure of the French government, after which, for us, only remained from 8 p.m. until six o'clock in the morning, to do likewise and from that moment we experienced 14 days in which anything might have happened. On four occasions we were extremely fortunate, having had to leave our car and find shelter, nine times in one afternoon. After that period our experiences, although less dangerous, were none the less irritating. Ten days at Toulouse seeking a ticket for the boat, which would enable us to have the necessary visas to enter Spain and Portugal. Permission to leave France, a long and dirty trip across Spain and Portugal to Lisbon, and then to our greatest horror we were forced, after waiting four weeks, to sail on a Greek boat. Anything else would certainly have been desired. On land one can always look forward to courage, take inationi, fulfill them, but looking down into that profound green ocean and wondering how, in case of necessity, a little family of four could ever hold together, was one of the most nerve-wracking experiences imaginable. Our life boats were lowered and we were shown our places and given our life preservers. To each and every one existed the same chance.

But now that it is over, let it be forgotten and let us look forward to what we can do for England. Dear old England! Devastated, bleeding, men, women and babies suffering to the extreme, but still going strong. It must not be forgotten we are far from the scene of action, we cannot in Canada imagine the extent of cruelty and disaster, but the more we hear of it, the more should be our desire and effort to help, the stronger should be our war-cry.

Passing a window, I read:"Be British, keep your chin up"; let us keep the chins of England up and by so doing, we are certain that our own shall be carried likewise.

We can no longer look forward nor depend on the morale of our enemies aiding us to victory. Morale in these countries is now changed into power of control, and any attempt to weaken conviction of victory among those people is quenched in the blood of the guilty one.

We shall never tolerate domination, so in our determination let each and every one, in an utmost effort to maintain our liberty, make of 1941, a triumphant and happy New Year.

The evening was spent in dancing and social chat. After the lunch hour Raymond was called forward and Mr. Jack Hill read an address and Mr. Frank Eagles presented the guest of honour with a fountain pen and pencil set and purse of money. Raymond very ably thanked all for their gifts of remembrance. All joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "There'll Always Be An England". Following is the address:

Friday, Dec. 27, 1940

Dear Raymond:

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening in your honour. To say that we are proud of you for answering the call of your Country in this fight for freedom and justice does not sufficiently express the esteem in which you are held by all who are gathered here. We ask you to accept this gift, not for the intrinsic value, but as a token of the friendship which will always go with you from this community. If you ever send us an S.O.S., remember, we'll be there.

Happy Landing!

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors:

John W. Eagles; John Hill.
