Statute Labor.

Soon, now, the festive pathmaster will hang his hammer on the outer wall, and, summoning his thrall about him, will sally forth to make the side line and concession worse than they were before, if that were possible. Since the time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, ye pathmaster has been piling mud on the middle of the road, which the fall and the spring rain gleefully wash back into the ditch. With a patience and a persistence worthy of a better cause ye pathmaster puts it back the following June; and this see saw business has been going on ever since Columbus discovered America. Occasionally the pathmaster will dump a great load of rock in the middle of the highway, but the husky farmers and the "transient public" carefully drive around this primitive piece of macadam if they have to take to the fields for it. By way of amusing the great Unwashed the pathmaster sometimes undertakes to make water run up-hill, but he has never made a real success of it. Should he ever win out, he will take his place on the Scroll of Fame with Marconi, Edison, McComb, Westinghouse, and the late lamented Mr. Russell, of Russell fence fame. You will never tumble into the pathmaster's ditch. All you've got to do is to stay in his ruts, and nothing but a cyclone or a steam shovel will lift you out of them. The average farmer has few joys. The fall fair, the circus, an occasional funeral or an election furnish him with an outing occasionally, but "road work" is a fixture. Dolce far niente. Had all the statute labor in Ontario during the past fifty years been intelligently applied, every highway in Canada would be as smooth as a billiard table, the rural bridges would be works of art, and every cross-road would be a new delight. As a rule, the average farmer knows as much about road building as my dog does about the autonomy bills. It's great sport when some conceited and domineering jay gets appointed pathmaster. You can hear them sassin' each other along the beat. Sometimes the men whale the pathmaster, sometimes a feud is started that will burn until the third or fourth generation of them that worked on the roads. The free and independent farmer hates to be ordered around, and the sooner the pathmaster goes to join the dodo in oblivion, the better for all hands—and the roads!—The Khan.

Is Your Catarrh Any Better?

Probably getting worse all the time. Why not give up that snuff and stop dosing your stomach? The one sure treatment is "Catarrhozone," sure to cure because it goes where the disease really is. Certain to cure in your case because it has restored tens of thousands worse than you are. Catarrhozone is a thorough cure because it destroys the causes as well as the effects of the disease. Relief is prompt, cure is quick with this powerful remedy, which is guaranteed to cure Catarrh in any part of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes or lungs.

A rather interesting case was tried at Walkerton Division Court recently, that of Farewell vs. Bannerman. The defendant is a farmer in Culross. Dr. Farewell attended his wife for parts of the years 1902 and 1903, and put in a bill for $198. Bannerman paid $100 and then got tired, and refused to pay any more. Rather than have any trouble over it the doctor agreed to throw off $48, but Bannerman refused this offer, and then suit was entered to collect the whole amount. The jury awarded the plaintiff $25, each party to pay his own costs, but as a jury has no say in awarding costs, the judge ordered them to be paid by the defendant. The costs amounted to about $30.

A recent regulation issued by the post office department is worth bearing in mind by those having boxes. As all the postmasters are liable to make mistakes in putting mail matter into wrong boxes, this new regulation requires people to examine their mail before leaving the office, and should they find a piece not addressed to them, they must return it at once or be liable to a fine of $200. That it is the fault of the postmaster, makes no difference.

"Stomach Catarrh"

—— It is a fatal waste of time to trifle with snuffs, powders, inhalers, or other dangerous nostrums, with the idea of curing Catarrh of the Stomach. Once Catarrh has reached the stomach it can only be eradicated by creating pure, rich blood. Catarrh is a germ disease. The stomach and intestines become nests for myriads of these tiny germs. Local applications have no effect on them. They must be driven out—the stomach cleansed, the blood purified, the system toned up. "PSYCHINE" will positively cure the worst form of Stomach Catarrh, by purifying the blood, cleansing the stomach, and destroying germ life. Thousands have been cured of the prevalent malady, through this remarkable discovery, "PSYCHINE." Druggists recommend it.
