Shortly before midnight last Friday night a wholesale seizure of whiskey was made by License Inspector Beckett and P. C. Andrew Shute at Owen Sound. Earlier in the night a farmer's wagon came over the east hill road with a heavy load, and the story is that two small boys climbing up on the back to take a ride were ordered off by the driver. A suspicious rattle of bottles was heard, and the lads, suspecting the contents to be contraband, are said to have given the police a tip, and inspector Beckett was informed. The wagon was tracked to the yards of the City hotel, and, just as the unloading began the seizure was made. The farmer said he took the load on at Holland Centre and was to deliver it to a man named Riddle in the city hotel yards. He loaded the wet goods back into the wagon, when directed by the license inspector, and hauled it down to the lockup, where the stuff is held. There is no man of the name of Riddle in town, and as the farmer's directions were vague, the onus of proof as to ownership rests on the parties responsible for the shipment. The value of the consignment is over three hundred dollars, and there were nearly nine hundred bottles in the lot.

Councillor Bremner has invented an adjustable cross bar for cutters by which a person may remain in the seat of the cutter and move the bar to which the shafts are attached which will allow the horse to remain on the track when passing another cutter or sleigh. This will be a great convenience to people out driving when the roads are high with drifts. With the adjustable cross bar there will be no such thing as a horse getting down in the snow, or broken shafts. One large carriage manufacturing concern has already offered Mr. Bremner 25c. a cutter on 5000 every year for 3 years for his patent—Chesley Enterprise.
