Ancient Windmills Working For War

Many historic buildings, saved from destruction and restored by the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buidings, are now being utilized in Britain's war effort. Chief among them are the windmills which are making an important contribution to the nation's food supply.

At the outbreak of war, the Society put its resources at the disposal of the State. The Windmill Section was called in to help when the government ordered a survey of country mills with a view to calling them into service in the event of damage to the large industrial milling plants.

When the Ministry of Agriculture appealed to farmers to grow more wheat, oats, and barley, the Windmill Section decided to concentrate on keeping working mills in good condition as such, rather than on maintaining them solely as pleasing features in the landscape.

A scheme which enabled the farmer to get his corn ground at his very door was in line with the government policy of fostering widely distributed food-producing centres.

The country miller, however, striving to maintain an old-world business in a modern industrial world, is, is many cases, living from hand to mouth. The question of repairs to the mill is often a serious problem and it is here that financial help is given by Windmill Section of the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings.

Though many millers are skillful in doing small repairs, it sometimes happens that a structural weaknes passes unnoticed until it becomes serious. A mill kept in working condition may last for centuries, but if its activities are arrested, for however short a period, it is well on the way to destruction. The Windmill Section gives a technical report free of charge, and when necessary, pays the expenses of a visiting millwright.

SCOUTING . . .

Especially those Scouts who new wear, or expect soon to wear, the new Scout Airman's "Flying Lions" badge. The address will be carried by CBC, from 8 to 8.30 p.m., E.D.S.T.

A refrigeration plant now being used in a hospital in the Middle East battle zone was provided by the Boy Scouts of Victoria, Australia. The Scouts also raised the necessary funds and presented the Australian Overseas Forces with an army truck and an ambulance.

The New Zealand Boy Scouts are thoroughly prepared for emergencies. In the event of an air raid alarm the Scouts of Wanganui report in uniform to a central assembly point, and there each boy is given 24 hours rations, notebook, pencil, water bottle, staff and bicycle, and started off to an assigned post. All Sea Scouts report to the Harbour Board.

Upon the declaration of the state of war between Japan and the United States the services of the Boy Scouts of America were offered the Government, and at once accepted and incorporated in the Civilian Defence organization work. It was announced in the United States Senate that local defence councils and Boy Scout councils would develop plans for co-operation, the Scouts' duties to include assisting emergency medical units, acting as fire watchers and providing messenger services.

Speaking of its National Scout Service, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas declared that he felt considerably safer as an American and far more hopeful of the future because the Boy Scout movement is as strong as it is in the United States. "The trust we must repose in our boys is important — grave," de declared. "But with our active Boy Scout Movement training them in character and citizenship that trust is well placed. You see evidence all about you of the way the Boy Scouts are assuming their responsibility to their country."

BIG GUNS IN THE BIG WOODS

Hidden in the tall timber of our Pacific northwest, one of the Army's heavy mobile guns stands guard over the approaches to a vital U. S. industrial area. It is symbolic of the vast, secret defense system protecting shipyards, aircraft factories and other war industries in America's northwest corner.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VIII
JESUS APPOINTS AND TEACHES THE TWELVE
Mark 3:13-19; Matthew 5-7; Luke 6:12-49
PRINTED TEXT, Luke 6:12-26
GOLDEN TEXT.—Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven. Matt. 5:16.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—Spring, A.D. 27.

Place.—An unknown mountain, possibly in Judaea.

12. "And it came to pass in these days, that he went out into the mountain to pray; and he continued all night in prayer to God. 13. And when it was day, he called his disciples; and he chose from them twelve, whom also he named apostles." Up to this time Jesus had been satisfied with gathering converts about Him, calling some of them to accompany him as disciples. Now He saw that the time was come to organize his adherents. The choosing of the Twelve is the first measure of organization that Jesus ever took. The number twelve was significant. Jesus set up in their persons the twelve patriarchs of a new people of God. Twelve new tribes were to arise and form the humanity which Jesus came to install on earth.

14. "Simon, who he also named Peter, and Andrew his brother, and James and John and Philip and Bartholomew. 15. And Matthew and Thomas, and James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon who was called the Zealot, 16. And Judas the son of James, and Judas Iscariot, who became a traitor." These men whom Jesus chose were all men who were accustomed to work; they were men who believed Jesus to be the Messiah and who were truly devoted to him, except in the case of Judas Iscariot. Our Lord saw the work these men were to accomplish, the sufferings they were to endure, the eternal fame they were to attain. He chose them in all confidence knowing His life on earth was to be short and that the church must be built on the testimony and faith of these men.

17. "And he came down with them, and stood on a level place, and a great multitude of his disciples, and a great number of the people from all Judaea and Jerusalem, and the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, who came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases; 18. and they that were troubled with unclean spirits were healed. 19. And all the multitudes sought to touch him; for power came forth from him, and healed them all." This is a severely condensed record of our Lord's mighty ministry in teaching and healing. It would seem that our Lord immediately, as it were, by His own work, gave an example to the apostles of the work they were to do when he was gone.

20. "And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed are ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God." The rich are easily tempted to concentrate on present possessions, often to the exclusion of thoughts for God and others. The man who is a Christian, and poor at the same time, is free to be occupied with things of God, even in the midst of his daily toil.

21. "Blessed are ye that hunger now: for ye shall be filled." These words showed the people our Lord's great compassion for them in their need and gave them a sure hope of a day to come when all life's needs would be abundantly met. "Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh." Again Jesus shows his compassion for men in their troubles, and declares that a time will come when there will never be any more weeping, when everything will be right, when sorrow, and all its causes, will disappear.

22. "Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of Man's sake. 23. Rejoice in that day, and leap for joy: for behold, your reward is great in heaven; for in the same manner did their father's unto the prophets." There is a general conscience which condemns certain forms of wickedness but the world hates those who run counter to its pleasures and prejudices, and in that case hatred may be the tribute which vice pays to holiness. The so-called "religious world" has hated with a fierce hatred and exposed to martyrdom some of its greatest prophets and teachers. Our Lord was handed over to crucifixion by the unanimous hatred of the highest religious authorities of His day.

24. "But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation. 25. Woe unto you, ye that are full now! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you, ye that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep. 26. Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for in the same manner did their fathers to the false prophets." It is not the rich, as such, that Jesus curses, for a Nicodemus or a Joseph of Arimathea will be welcomed as readily as the poorest man in Israel. Jesus is here dealing with historical fact, not with moral philosophy. Were not the rich and powerful, as a class, already in open opposition to His mission? They were thus excluding themselves from the Kingdom of God.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

SNOW may begin to fall at any hour of the day or night, but the hours given above are favorite hours, due to the tendency of cooling air to condense. Three o'clock is the hour of a winter afternoon when cooling is begun, and eight in the morning is the coldest time, and the most likely for the condensation of moisture.

American British Dutch Australian

If it's the Southwestern Pacific area you're talking about, just call it "ABDA."

President Roosevelt recommended the new designation to reporters at a recent press conference. Stands for American, British, Dutch and Australian, he said, and has been in use for some time in Government circles. The more general term, the ABCD powers, still refers to those major powers fighting the Axis in the Far East — America, Britain, China, and the Dutch.
