A large number of cattle were offered for sale at our cattle fair last Monday, but as not many of them were in good condition for shipping, few sales were made. Considering ruling markets, too, the prices asked in many cases were too high.

A little girl of Mr. W. J. Cooey's (Meaford Road) got lost in the woods, near her father's residence, about 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning of last week, and it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before the almost distracted parents succeeded in finding her.

Mr. Alex. Madill, of Eugenia, possesses a very fine Percheron two-year-old filly, got by the famous stallion, "Nugent." Mr. Madill's filly was weighed in Flesherton Wednesday of last week, and turned the scale at 1380 pounds. Now, trot out your great Clydesdales!

Mrs. J. D. Clarke, of Hamilton, is the guest of Squire Armstong, her father. We never saw Mrs. Clarke looking better than she does now—she seems to get handsomer with increasing years. It will be rememberered by many of our readers that Mrs. Clarke's husband is one of the talented editor's of the ever popular Hamilton Times.

We are much pleased to learn that our clever young friend, Mr J. J. Bannon, passed the recent Pharmaceutical Examinations at Toronto very successfully. Mr. Bannon has our best wishes for his future success, and if a most excellent moral character, and close earnest, and zealous application, count for anything, Mr. B. is bound to achieve it.

The water in Flesher's pond has not been as low for years as it is at the present time. It must be at least three and a half feet lower than at any time last year. This is probably owing to the immense amount of extra power required to keep the broom handle factory, the woolen factory, and the flour and saw mills in running operation. Our other factories are also having a very heavy season's work.

On Saturday evening last a number of boys were engaged in selling lemonade in a stand on Mr. R. Trimble's vacant corner lot in this place. The stand was pretty well patronized by the village small boys, as the lemonade was being offered at the rate of two glasses for five cents. After dark a lamp was lit in order to facilitate business operations. Suddenly some person blew out the light, and at the same instant some other person quickly took possession of the pail of lemonade and made off with it. Of course business had to be suspended, and up to the hour of writing no clue has been discovered as to the identity of the thieves.

We might state here, that the debentures have been disposed of in a manner highly creditable to the Reeve and other Township officials, and financially beneficial to the ratepayers of this section.

Sealed Tenders will be received for erection of a Brick School House in the Village of Flesherton, up to and including July 16th. Plans & Specifications may be seen at the office of M. Richardson, Flesherton.

SUPPLEMENTS.

We are again compelled to refer to this subject, because of the manifest injustice to which we are being subjected by Post-Office Inspector Spry. As our readers are aware, we have been ordered to discontinue the practice of sending out supplements in connection with the ADVANCE. It seems we have been specially singled out from a host of newspapers, from the fact, that although some weeks—nay, months—have elapsed since we fell under the ban of the Postal Inquisition at Barrie, other newspapers have been flooding the country with supplements of every description—with remarkable regularity—from that time to the present. We now demand, that the Inspector shall attend to his duties and settle the supplement question forever; that he ahall give fair play to all publishers; that he shall do unto others as he has been doing to the ADVANCE, or else frankly acknowledge his inability to fulfil the functions of his office in this important particular, and give place to some man who will.

A Critic at the Oratorio.

Amongst the large assembly of people who attended the Oratorio of "Esther the Beautiful Queen," last evening, was a rather short, stout, goodlooking, but somewhat fussy and dictatorial lady, aged about—well, she wasn't forty. Every little while this person would burst out with such startling exclamations as—"Oh, dear! that scene's spoiled!" "I know that curtain won't work right!" "There! didn't I tell you the curtain wouldn't work!" Ladies dresses were freely discussed; their singing, unless faultless, was characterized as "something awful," or in some other term equally characteristic of the female mind. In fact this fussy little critic made things decidedly unpleasant and annoying in her immediate vicinity, and said things which would have been infinitely better and more ladylike if left unsaid; for there was hardly a performer on the platform who had not friends or relatives scattered through the audience. These spiteful public criticisms, during the performance of an Oratorio or anything else, are in horrid bad taste, and have a tendency to create much ill-feeling. We don't know who the fussy little lady was—as the facts given above were furnished us by one of our reporters, who sat near by—but we hope she will do her criticising at home next time.

JAS. G. RUSSELL,

THE "BOSS" WATCHMAKER.

CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS

A few minutes after six o'clock last evening, while going home from his office, the Editor of this paper was startled by the screams of a woman for help. On looking around it was perceived that the cry came from the premises of Mr. Edward Whitten. A gentleman with a horse and buggy had just driven up to the residence opposite, and seeing a woman in such terrible distress, hastily tied his horse to the fence, and making his way around the back of the house, discovered that Mr. John Whitten's youngest child, a bright little boy—and his own grand-child, as we have just learned—had fallen into the well. In less than five minutes the child was rescued and restored to its mother, very little the worse for its mishap.

In the meantime the noise and excitement had startled the brave rescuer's horse, which, breaking the strap by which it was tied like so much pasteboard, dashmadly down the street. He had only gone a few feet when he got clear of the buggy—which was pretty badly smashed—and did not stop until he arrived at the Schoolhouse, where he was secured

Mr Harrison, grandfather of the child, was the rescuer.

How to Make Good Roads.

The old fashioned method of repairing and mantaining our roads is a relic of a bygone age, all very well when the country was newly settled. What is now wanted is the collection of a fixed sum sum from each person liable for taxation, and the money properly expended in a systematic manner by employing laborers who are used to that kind employment, and superintended by competent persons skilled in road-making. Then it would not be many years before the country would be provided with good roads instead of the quagmires which we now have during spring and fall. As the work is performed at present, it is simply patchwork. There is no concentration of force. if the work were done systematically, beginning at one end of the road and continuing right through till there would be a good stretch of excellent road, lasting for years, instead of as now, where the result of the labor expended one season is scarcely perceptible the next. In most cases the ordinary pathmaster is contented with having a ditch cut alongside the road to hold the water, vainly imagining that the road-bed is thus drained. Such is not the case; for, unless there is a good outfall for the water in the ditches, the road-bed is totally undrained, and is like a sponge in a basin of water. It is no use dumping gravel on wet portions of a road unless those wet parts are first properly underdrained, either with tile or cobble stone. We know of places in certain roads that have absorbed loads of gravel year after year only to sink down into the mud, whereas, by a little judicious draining, these wet spots could be made dry and the cost of the draining would soon be saved out of the cost of gravel. One thing we certainly would like to see, that is, each township council the proprietors of a good road plough or scraper whereby a couple of men with a smart span of horses could round up a road-bed of three or four miles in a day. These road scrapers are extensively employed in the United States, where, by their use the road-bed is rounded off in a manner that cannot be done by shovelling. —Rural Canadian.

DECLARED INCURABLE.—E. C. McGovern, of Syracuse, N. Y., who is a well-known resident of that place, was declared incurable by his physician, the disease being a complication of kidney and liver complaint. In two days he found relief in Burdock Blood Bitters, and in one month he entirely recovered.

Sublime Check.

Mr. Wm. Smith, the excellent caretaker of the Methodist Church here, had just finished cleaning up the grounds in connection with that edifice a few days before Dominion Day. On the day named there was a large crowd in town, of course. One man brought his horse up to the church, and, although the gates were locked, lifted them from their hinges, and turned his horse into the grounds to graze at his leisure. This was all done as cooly as though the grounds belonged to him. Now, how is the caretaker to keep things in decent order if every cheeky wayfarer is at liberty to use these grounds as they may think fit?
