PANGS AND TORTURES OF A WEAK STOMACH

Prompt Relief and Cure Can be Obtained Through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Indigestion is a condition in which the stomach is more or less unable to digest the food. Even a light case of indigestion means much misery, but when the trouble is at its worst the life of the sufferer is one of constant and acute misery. Indigestion is recognized by a burning sensation in the stomach, bloating, an appressive feeling of weight, belching wind, pains in the region of the heart, often vomiting and nausea, and a dread of food for the misery it causes. Dieting and the use of pre-digested foods may give same relief, but will never cure indigestion. The work of indigestion depends upon the blood and the nerves and the only way to cure indigestion is to so tone up the stomach that it will do the work that nature intended it should do. The very best way to cure a weak stomach is through a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These renew the blood, strengthen the nerves and thus give tone to the stomach, and enable it to do its work with ease and comfort. No one suffering from indigestion in even the slightest form should neglect the trouble for an instant; to do so means that it obtains a firmer hold, and daily the misery and suffering is increased, and the cure made more difficult. At the first approach of the trouble take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and it will speedily disappear. These Pills will cure even the most obstinate case of indigestion, but naturally it takes longer to do so. Mr. Philip Lafleur, St. Jerome, Que., says: "After I left college, when I had studied hard for four years, I suffered so much from indigestion that I found it difficult to earn my living. I was troubled with terrible pains, a bloating feeling, and a soreness in the stomach. This led to a loss of appetite and I began to show signs of a nervous breakdown. I tried several different treatments without finding any apparent relief, and my nervous system had grown so shattered that I could not work. A priest who was interested in me advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I followed his advice. It was not long before they began to bring me back to health, and in the course of a couple of months my stomach was as sound as ever; my nervous system strong and vigorous, and I have since enjoyed the best of health. I owe all this to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for which I shall always feel grateful."

THREE-YEAR-OLD GENIUS.

Spanish Infant Plays Piano With Absolute Precision.

Pilar Osorio, the three-year-old daughter of a Spanish physician, is a new wonder in the musical world. With her tiny hands running up and down the keys with lightning-like rapidity and absolute precision, she plays most difficult passages from classical composers with the ease of a master.

Little Pilar's remarkable talent [illegible]t manifested itself in a rather [illegible]liar fashion. She has a half-[illegible] is a[illegible] Pepito, 10 years old, who [illegible]ly a distinguished pianist. [illegible] years ago Herr Nikisch, the c[illegible]ated conductor, was touring St[illegible] with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra. Hearing of Pepito's musical ability, he advised the family to take him to Berlin to study.

This they did, and in that city Pepito received his musical education under the guidance of Herr Nikisch himself. Then the family took Pepito around on a series of concert tours. While they were staying in Leipsic Pilar was born.

One day Pilar, but 28 months old, was sitting on the carpet playing with her toys while a German maid sat singing a volkslied. Suddenly the child dropped her playthings, toddled over to the piano and, climbing up on to the stool, began to strike the keys in search of the combination that would reproduce the melody she had heard.

At last, after much fumbling, the child stupefied the maid by playing the tune correctly.

That was the beginning of Pilar's musical career, and since that day the child's progress at the piano has astounded everyone who has had the pleasure of hearing her play.

Without apparent difficulty Pilar has mastered, entirely by ear and unaided, a number of pieces to the learning of which practiced musicians have devoted much time and effort. She has never had a teacher, but her ear is so true that she can reproduce nearly everything she hears.

ONE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE.

Death in England of Troop-Sergeant-Major Lincoln.

The death occurred at Portsmouth, England, a few days ago of Troop-Sergeant-Major Lincoln, one of the few survivors of the famous charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclave. Lincoln, a fine old man, standing over six feet, was born at Cambridge ninety-five years ago, and served through the Crimean campaign in the 13th Light Dragoons (now the 13th Hussars), but which he called the "Bangalore Gallopers."

He led his troop in the famous charge. His horse was shot under him, but he captured a riderless one—that of Captain Nolan, who brought the fatal order and was shot down early in the charge. Lincoln soon lost his second horse, which was shot under him, and, without a scratch, he fell sprawling among the wounded and dying.

Before he could get on his feet he was gripped by some Russians, frog-marched to Var, and questioned about the English forces; but he refused to give any information, though threatened with the knout. Lincoln spent a year in Russia, and used to declare that he had been in every Russian prison. Once he was closely watched by the Czar Nicholas. He afterwards reached England through an exchange of prisoners.

On leaving the army in 1869, Lincoln had a chequered career as a drill instructor and insurance agent, and, finally, being unable to take care of himself, agreed to enter the workhouse, where he was one of the honored veterans. Then an ex-inspector of the Portsmouth police discovered his whereabouts, became a Good Samaritan, and gave him a home until he passed away. Lincoln enjoyed good health to the last, but was mentally feeble.

COW KNEW ITS STABLE.

Bucharest Magistrate Gave Judgment Worthy of Solomon.

"A judgment worthy of Solomon, as homely and almost as wise, was pronounced recently by a civil magistrate in Bucharest," according to a traveller in Paris the other day after a tour of eastern Europe. "It came about this way," explained the traveller. "In the month of May of last year a peasant living in the village of Predeal, near the Hungarian frontier, lost his cow. About two months ago he happened to be standing at the railroad station, watching a train load of cattle about to be sent across the frontier. Suddenly he gave a shout. 'That's my cow!' he cried, running toward one of the cars.

"The trainmen only laughed at him and he went before the magistrate. This good man listened to the peasant's story patiently. Then he pronounced this judgment: 'The cow shall be taken to the public square of Predeal and milked. Then, if it goes of its own accord to the plaintiff's stable it shall belong to him.'

"The order of the court was carried out. And the cow, in spite of its ten months' absence, took without hesitation the lane which brought it, a few minutes later, into the peasant's stable."

LUCKY QUESTIONS.

Lord Fitzgibbon was holding assizes in Tipperary county when a man was brought before him on indictment for murder. The case was proved that the victim came to his death by being hit with a stick in the hands of the defendant, but the doctor testified that he had what they called in medical parlance a "paper skull." The case looked dark for the prisoner, however, and the jur-- returned a verdict of guilty. As the man was brought before the court for sentence it was noticed that his lordship had his black cap in his hand. "Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you," demanded Lord Fitzgibbon. The man looked for a moment and then said, "No, your lordship, I have nothing to say, but I should like to ask one question." "What is that, my man?" said Fitzgibbon. "I should like to know what a man with a head like that was doing in Tipperary?" The black cap was put away and a prison sentence imposed.

"SING NO SAD SONGS FOR ME"

Artist Wanted No Tears, No Mourning, No Spectators.

Theodore James Ralli, an artist, who died recently in Paris, left the following letter appended to his will:

"Let me be placed in my coffin as quickly as possible after my death, and let nobody outside the household be admitted to my death chamber before I am placed in the coffin. In a word, I do not wish anybody to attend through curiosity to see how I look. Let no portrait or photograph be made of my corpse, and let me be buried in the shortest time possible.

"And do not weep for me. I have lived a life happy enough; the aim of my life was my painting, and I gave all of which I was capable. I might have lived another twenty years, but should not have progressed any more, so what would have been the good?

"And how content I should be if no one wears the marks of mourning. I always had a horror of this show, so if you cannot do otherwise, then wear the least of it possible."

ROYAL MOTOR CARS.

Easily Recognizable in Germany and in England.

King George's motor cars do not bear number plates. Those of the German royal family are recognized by their warning signals. They alone may use the two and three noted horns.

"The cars used by the German Emperor and Empress have their approach heralded by three noted horns and those of the royal princes by two noted horns. No infringement of this prerogative by ordinary motorists is tolerated.

"The fact that the royal cars, both in England and in Germany, may so easily be distinguished is an indication of the confidence which exists betwetn the monarchs and their respective peoples," says the Gentlewoman. "In less happier times it would have been courting danger to have carried such marks of distinction, and even now in less fortunate lands the rulers dare not travel so openly."

ONE WAY OUT.

A very original method of proposing to a charming girl was adopted by a young man, who was of a painfully shy disposition.

"Well," he remarked carelessly, "I daresay I shall get married some day."

"I suppose I shall, too," responded the lady dreamily.

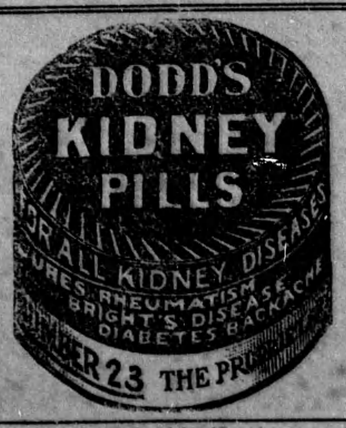
"I say," he continued, "wouldn't it be strange if we both got married the same day?"

"Yes, wouldn't it?"

"And what a joke if the clergyman made a slip, and, instead of uniting us with our selected partners, married you and I to each other! That would be a slip!"

"Well, would you wish to rectify the mistake?"

"No--er—I don't think I would!" he said.



MEAT IS HIGH IN EUROPE.

Prices Soaring in London, Paris, Berlin and Rome.

Going up! is the price of beef, mutton and pork. Meat is dearer in Europe to-day than it has been for some thirty years. The cause of it all is the meagre exportation from Canada and the United States. The only source of supply is the Argentine, but this was cut off on account of the prevalence of the foot and mouth disease among the stock there. The prices may be cut down when the Irish cattle are sold in English markets in the autumn.

The prevailing prices in London markets are: Ribs and sirloin, 22c and 23c per lb.; mutton, 22c to 24c per lb.; while veal is just about as bad.

In France, where protection prevails, beef runs as high as 33c and mutton 23c per lb., while in Rome, where meat is always dear, beef soars to 40c and veal at 48c. In Berlin, sirloin is about 35c, and pork, everywhere, is following the leader owing to a scant supply from foreign markets.
