Where the Remedy Lies.

The Huntingdon Gleaner has the following sensible article in reference to departmental store competition which will apply with the same force to this district as to the district around Huntingdon. Read it and see what you think: The departmental store sells for cash—nothing leaves its counters which has not been paid for. The country storekeeper gives more or less credit, and, though he may make few bad debts, he loses the interest on his capital. With profits cut down to what they are, little, often nothing is made out of the customer who settles once a year. Were no goods to go out of the country store without being paid for, its owner could in staple goods for which there is steady demand, undersell any city concern. In the credit system the country dealer has his enemy, and until he overcomes him he will see goods coming from Toronto to customers whose names are on his books. In a dairy section like this, where the farmer does not, as he did in the old times have to wait until the fall to change his produce into money, there is no reason why the rule in all dealings should not be spot cash. Were that the rule there would be no inducement to pass the door of the local storekeeper who is a useful member of the community and whose disappearance would be a loss.

Two children from Chicago, who were visiting at Guelph, were stopped at Port Huron by an American immigration official on their way home and sent back to Guelph.

THEIR BRAVE ADIEUX

DARING LAST DEEDS PERFORMED BY DYING HEROES.

Japanese Submarine Commander Wrote His Log Up-to-Date In the Face of His Doom—German School Master's Heroic Sacrifice In Behalf of His Companion — Hero of the Strathcona Fire In 1906.

Brave deeds are often done on the brink of death. Only the other day the newspapers were full of the dramatic story of the loss of a Japanese submarine, an accident to which in manoeuvres off Port Kure sent three officers and eleven men to their doom. But before he had been finally overcome by asphyxiation, the lieutenant in command of the ill-fated boat had succeeded in penning a detailed account of the accident, describing the cause, the steps taken to endeavor to raise the submarine to the surface, and the heroism of his crew, and concluding with a touching request that the Emperor might succour the families of the officers and men. It was the last log-entry of a gallant commander.

The Stoker's Last Act.

The Paris to Bordeaux express is one of the fastest trains in the world. On the night of March 7th last, it was roaring along the flat straight stretch which runs for seven miles from Sainte Maure to Poictiers at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour, when the stoker opened the door of the furnace, and turned to fill his shovel with coal from the tender.

Suddenly some of the back studbolts gave way. There followed a blast of steam and flame, and driver and stoker both were hurled to the floor of the cab. Horribly burned, the stoker turned and saw the driver lying apparently dead, while the train rushed on uncontrolled. With a last effort he struggled to his knees, crawled to the throttle, and stopped the train just as it was entering Poictiers Station. They found him lying insensible. He rallied sufficiently to tell what had happened, and then passed away.

One day towards the end of August, 1906, two German schoolmasters, named Overbeck and Kueppers, set out to climb the Weizsezpetze. The ascent is not accounted a dangerous one, and the two Germans took no guides. All went well until, near the summit, they came to an ice bridge. Kueppers got across safely, but just as Overbeck reached the centre the treacherous ice gave way, and he dropped into the crevasse, and hung there dangling over the darksome depths, suspended by the rope which was attached to his friend's waist.

The Rope of Death.

Out of the chasm below came Overbeck's voice, "There is only one thing to do. Cut the rope. I may survive the fall." For a long time Kueppers resisted. But he was growing weak, and was numbed with cold. In a short time the weight of Overbeck would pull him, too, over the brink. At last he was forced to obey his friend's order. He cut the rope, and, more dead than alive, hurried away for help. Alas! when the relief expedition arrived it was only to find the heroic Overbeck lying dead in his icy grave.

The industrial roll of honor is a long one, and its heroes are found both on land and sea. On a bitter winter night in December, 1906, the Canadian vessel Strathcona was steaming south from Halifax, N.S., with 380 passengers aboard. Suddenly there was a cry of "Fire!" and as flames burst through the hatches the passengers came rushing, screaming, on deck, and made for the boats. But the sea was too rough for small boats to live, and the crew held them off, while the captain ordered the vessel to be headed for Port Dufferin, the nearest landing-place.

Full speed was put on, but this, naturally, served to fan the flames, and soon the whole after-part of the ship was a roaring furnace. Down below the firemen toiled like heroes amid suffocating heat and smoke, but their danger was not so terrible as that of the man at the wheel. In spite of all that could be done, the wheelhouse was soon a mass of flames, the ropes and lashings crumbled to tinder, and before the mouth of the harbor was reached the hero's clothes were burning. Yet he stuck to his post until the vessel was beached, then he staggered across the charred planks, and fell dying.

The story of Alice Ayres is worth recalling. One night, in the winter of 1885, a house in Union street, in the Borough, caught fire, and a nursegirl—Alice Ayres by name—who was sleeping with her charges in the top storey, awoke to find the staircase in flames, and escape cut off.

For the Sake of the Children.

She rushed to the window, flung it open, and the crowd outside shouted to her to jump. Instead, they saw her disappear, and presently come back, lugging a large mattress, which she pushed with difficulty through the window, and as it fell called to those below to spread it on the pavement. Next minute she was back with a child, which she dropped in safety on to the soft bed.

By this time the floor of the room was burning, but she seized another child and carefully dropped that one, too. Like the first, it was unhurt. The state of the room by this time may be judged from the fact that the third child which she dropped died, not from the fall, but from burns.

Having got all three children out, Alice Ayres was seen by hundreds of horrified eyes to climb to the sill, and stand there blackened and blistered, and with her clothes a mass of flames. "Jump!" they screamed. She obeyed; but exhausted and blinded, missed the mattress, and, falling on the hard pavement, was killed.

In Memoriam

On the death of Gertrude Elizabeth England, aged five years, who died at Coldwater a few hours after being badly burned, while playing with a little friend in a play house, June 3rd, 1910.

"This world is full of farewells
And mournings for the dead;"
The fairest blooms are often
The quickest to be shed.

The cherubs sent from heaven
To fill our homes with love
While budding, oft are summoned
To our Father's home above.

Gertrude, our little darling,
The joy of every heart;
How can we live without thee?
How can we from thee part?

O Heavenly Father teach us
In this dreadful hour of grief,
To ask of Thee Thy guidance,
To seek from Thee relief.

When to carry flowers to auntie
She turned from mother's door,
Scarce dreamed they at that moment
They'd see her thus no more.

Her kindly mission ended.
Aside she turned to play
With little playmate Bessie,
Both childish hearts so gay.

Soon shouts and screams of terror,
Instead of shouts of glee;
Will no one come to rescue?
Will none from flames her free?

By sad mischance the fire
In Gertie's clothes had caught,
Help came too late to save her,
She alone the monster fought.

Then moaning, home they bore her,
And loving hands would fain
From tortures dread have saved her,
But soon they saw 'twas vain.

A few short hours she lingered,
Then peacefully she passed
To the arms of a waiting Jesus,
Who will ever hold her fast.

Her last words—"Mamma darling,
What will you ever do
Without your little girl to kiss?"
Brought tears from not a few.

They laid her in her tiny grave
With flowers she loved so well.
Then turned away with aching hearts
To homes where gloom had fell.

Oh parents cease your weeping,
You have hope beyond the grave,
She waits you in the great beyond,
Where He us all would save.

Those scars and burns have faded,
Her agony is o'er,
She's in a realm of lasting bliss
Where pain can reach no more.

May our lamps be trimmed and burning
When our fleeting day is run,
May we ever say with Jesus—
"Oh God, Thy will be done."

—M. F. Ames.

Gas Distended His Stomach

Caused Palpitation, and Prevented Sleep—When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of "Nerviline."

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveler of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the traveling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

Testimonial No. 4890

For general household use Nerviline has no equal; it will cure the aches and ailments of the entire family—refuse anything but Nerviline. 50c per bottle, trial size 25c, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE CURES ALL PAIN

Newspapers report that in the Alpine regions of the Swiss cantons of Vaud and Valais cheese makers will keep their products for years. They assert that cheese improves with age. At Les Ormonts, in the canton of Vaud, it is customary to make special cheeses for certain family feasts. They are tagged with explanatory labels and eaten several years later, at other feasts, or even at funerals. Often such cheeses are bequeathed from one generation to another as family souvenirs. Recently, at Les Ormonts, in a concealed shelter, there was discovered a cheese dating from 1785. It was as hard as a rock, and had to be cut with a saw. It is reported to have tasted good.—Scientific American.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently
BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs, Doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, but it does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Catarrhozone

Yes, Sir, it is taken in air.
"Little drops of healing" carried by air to weak places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Three sizes: 25c, 50c, and $1.00, at druggists, or by mail postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.
