GET A PURE WATER SUPPLY.

The Boards of Health could confer a boon on the community if they decreed that all putrid ponds should be fenced in. If human beings were to drink of the contents of these dirty holes, they would certainly contract diseases, and if they persisted in using the filthy water they would die. It stands to reason that cattle who drink from dirty, green scum-covered stagnant pools, must, to a certain degree, be similarly affected, and in the case of cows there can be no doubt that their milk is as likely to be foully-tainted in this manner as it is to be pure and good when the cattle are supplied with water from the running brook. But with people living in rural districts, who have plenty of good food and clothing, and abundance of time to rest, sickness should be the rare exception. Could we but trace diseases, such as diphtheria, malaria, and typhoid fever to their source, how many cases might we not find to result from the drinking of impure water by man and beast? The Boards of Health should lose no opportunity to impress this cardinal truth on the community, which, too often, suffers more from a lack of knowledge of sanitary laws than from carelessness.

Dr. Landerkin's Reply.

To the Editor of the Advance.

Sir,—I have just received your paper with your editorial on the letter you kindly inserted for me last week. I am pleased with the courteous, able, and ingenious character of your article. I highly appreciate the manner, but cannot concur in all the matter it contains. I notice with pleasure your conversion to the doctrines of the Globe, and note what you say about the pernicious influence of the French in Quebec. I am somewhat surprised that you did not find it out before. While the French remained solid for the Conservative party, very little fault was found with them by the Conservative press. Now that they begin to indicate that a change of government would be good for the country, the Conservative press have discovered that they are very bad and very aggressive. Sceptical people may say that you are governed by the doctrine of "political exigencies," when you make the onslaught upon them that you do. I do think it will be hard to find an argument to satisfy reasonable people that Sir John did right in hanging Louis Riel, and granting to Gabriel Dumont a full pardon and a restoration of all his estates. If it was just or right to grant Dumont a pardon, it was nothing less than a judicial murder to hang Louis Riel. Gabriel Dumont's pardon is an admission by the Government that they were wrong and that Blake was right in the Riel matter. There is to my mind no argument that will justify the release of Poundmaker and Big Bear and the free pardon of Dumont, and, at the same time justify the hanging of Riel. No one pretends that Riel personally committed murder; that murder was authorized or countenanced by him, or that it was committed by any one under his control. It is notorious that he never even fired a shot in the rebellion, and that concession, not bloodshed, was his aim and desire. This cannot be said of Big Bear, Poundmaker, or Dumont, with whom—whatever their virtues—rapine and bloodshed was the leading instinct. If Riel was the leader, they were his first lieutenants; and if Riel is consigned to a felon's grave they should scarcely be entitled to the full privileges of loyal citizens.

Louis Riel's execution, compared with the late amnesty, proves that in Canada it is more dangerous to challenge misgovernment than to take human life. If the execution of Riel was justifiable, it was on account of the useless loss of life his rebellion occasioned; but if those, who, with their own hands and of their own motion occasioned that loss of life, are declared guiltless, Riel must take the place that it is least of all in the public interest that any person punished under form of law should take—that of a martyr; a man who has been put to death for advocating a righteous cause; who died that others might go free.

I ask you to again consider how it will be possible for you to reconcile with fair and just principles the policy which sends one rebel to the scaffold and welcomes others, at least equally guilty, to freedom and citizenship as a band of heroes.

A few more words and I am done. Riel never took his seat in the House of Commons during Mackenzie's regime. True, his name is on the roll, but the Clerk of the House was not aware of the fact, I am told, until it was pointed out to him by the late Thos. Moss, M. P., when the Clerk expressed very great surpaise, as he did not know when or how it came there. But then you know, although you did not state it, that Sir John when Premier had promised him an amnesty in 1872, about the time he gave way for Sir George Cartier in Provencher and of course this promise rendered him somewhat of a privileged character.

I do not wish to doubt your honesty or to charge you with endeavoring to mislead your readers when you say the money was not paid paid by Sir John, when Sir John's own letter and Sir John's own oath, and Bishop Tache's oath, show that Sir John sent $1,000 and $2,400 was advanced by Sir Donald Smith at the request of Lieut.-Governor Archibald, who was acting for Sir John in the matter. Sir John sent Riel the $1,000 by letter to Archbishop Tache on the 27th Dec., 1871. He gave the money on the distinct understanding that Riel should remain in the States until the elections of 1872 were over. During the election Sir John spoke at Peterboro, only a few months after he sent Riel the money, and in that speech he is reported to have said of Riel, "That he wished to God he could catch him!"

I will now leave it to you as a man of honor to reconcile Sir John's act with Sir John's words, for I confess that I am unable to characterize such falsehood and treachery.

But I must close, as I do not wish to trespass too much on your kindness, and will only add, in conclusion, that I have nothing to regret in the vote I gave relating to the execution of Louis Riel. I feel conscious, that in that vote I rose superior to the terrible expedient of reforcing at the shedding of human blood, in order to gain human votes, and whether my course is approved or not approved, I have the satisfaction of now knowing, feeling, and believing, that I voted right.

I am, Faithfully yours,
GEO. LANDERKIN.

Owen Sound.

From our own Correspondent.

Thursday, the 19th inst., was our civic holiday. The S. S. "Northern Belle" took Foresters to Collingwood. Several other excursions to Presque Isle were made. S.S. "General Woolsley," ran a moonlight excursion. A game of base ball was played between Kennedy's foundry-men and towns-people: the game was won by the town. A lacrosse match was played between married and single men: the single men had it all their own way and won easily.

The schooner, "Hotchkiss," has arrived with 900 tons of coal for Brown & Co. The barge, "Wales," is her consort.

The C. P. R. boats are bringing down large shipments of canned salmon from British Columbia, for Toronto, Hamilton, and Montreal.

The Government is improving the harbor. The dredge is at work deepening the channel.

The S. S. "Africa," is being refitted into a barge and will be out for fall traffic.

The C.P.R. boats are doing large traffic in passengers and freight to North-West and British Columbia. It is getting to be the favorite route.

Meaford Lacrosse club plays our boys on Sept. 1st. A lively game anticipated.

Weather fine, with light showers.

A Mistake.

To the Editor of The Advance.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union recently published a resolution in THE ADVANCE to the effect that they regretted the "prominence that horse racing is gaining at our Township fair and on Dominion Day." As regards our Artemesia Township fair, this resolution is likely to create a false impression, as horse racing does not form any part of the programme in connection with their fall fair, nor has it formed any part in the past.

Yours truly,
JAS. BRODIE,
Sec.-Treas.

W. C. T. U.

It was Charles Buxton, M. P., who said: "Were it not for the beer house and the gin palace, pauperism would soon be nearly extinguished in England."

A London letter says that William Green, Highgate, President of a Temperance Society, destroyed his cellar of wine, about 2,500 bottles, valued at $3,000, by pouring it into the gutter.

What is the W. C. T. U. doing? Trying quietly, lovingly, to show the evil of drink, and that there are many ways for our boys to be happy and jolly without being sinful. Only think: we shall soon have a chain of mother's hearts, stretching all around the world, to care for the wandering boys. Item of last meeting: Can any one show us a drunkard's happy home?

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

Angus Kennedy's statements are false. His wife had good reason for leaving him when he would not support her nor provide for her in any way, and cruelly used her. It is a blessing such young men are scarce. Angus might have saved himself the trouble of inserting that notice in your paper, for the public know enough of his worthless character not to give his wife anything on his account, except for charity.

THE FATAL POISON.

A Dose of "Rough on Rats" Attended by Almost Fatal Results.

The necessity for great care in handling all kinds of poisons, is amply borne out in the case of Mr. Wm. Buchanan, of Meaford Road, who in mistake took a dose of "Rough on Rats"—a deadly poison—one day last week, which nearly cost him his life.

It seems that his son, Mr. Joseph Buchanan, got a piece of bread, and after buttering it, put on the "Rough on Rats" poison. Not desiring to use it just then, he wrapped the bread up in a piece of paper and left it in the pantry—a very careless thing to do, if, indeed, nothing worse. This happened before tea time. Shortly afterwards, as Miss Buchanan, his sister, was getting the tea ready, she chanced to notice the piece of bread wrapped up in the paper, and thinking her brother had prepared it for a lunch for himself, but had likely not needed it after so doing, she placed it on the supper table along with the other edibles. Mr. Buchanan, sr., sat down to tea, took the piece of bread, and ate half of it before his son came in and, on learning that the piece of bread he had wrapped up had been placed by mistake on the table, stopped him. An antidote was at once given or the dose would have undoubtedly been attended with fatal results, as the poison is one of the most deadly known. As it was, Mr. Buchanan felt "deathly sick," to use a common phrase, so much so, indeed, that Dr. Christoe had to be called in. We are told that the Dr. gave it as his opinion, that had the poison not been ejected from Mr. Buchanan's stomach within six hours, he would have been a dead man.

It is to be hoped, that every one who reads this will exercise all the more care in the use of poisons—more or less of which can be found in every house. "Rough on Rats" is also rough on human beings when taken internally, and so are all the other poisons—strychnine, arsenic, "Paris Green," &c. Have all poisons carefully labelled and put away, and when you have occasion to use them, touch them as tenderly as you would dynamite.

Marriage of Mr. W. F. Doll.

We tender our old friend, Mr. W. F. Doll—wholesale Jeweller, Winnipeg, Manitoba—our heartiest congratulations on his recent marriage to one of Bowmanville's fairest daughters, Miss Higginbotham. DR. LANDERKIN.

We find we have space this week to reply but briefly to Dr. Landerkin, M. P. We have referred to his position on the Riel question several times, in order that he might be induced to define his position himself. This he has done; and however erroneous we believe his logical deductions on the question of the constitutionality of the execution of Louis Riel to be, we are of the opinion that he is conscientious and honest in the matter. The free pardon granted to Dumont, Poundmaker, and Big Bear, was a mistake on the part of the Government of Sir John, which we cannot and will not attempt to defend; but the execution of Riel, the head and front of two rebellions, was, in our honest and unbiassed opinion, a most righteous act. The evidence all goes to show that Riel was a dangerous man to the country, and as such he has been removed. This has been our opinion from the first, and we see no reason to alter it now. Again we say,—so perish all traitors, sane or insane!

The blood of Scott rested upon Riel and upon him alone. He could have saved poor Scott with one word; but that word he never uttered. The then Conservative Government was overturned because of its position with regard to Riel. It showed the rascal clemency he never deserved. Then Sir John was condemned by Reformers and some Conservatives because vengeance was not visited upon Riel; now he is condemned by Dr. Landerkin and many others, because he has executed the traitor. Verily, there is something quite beyond our ken in this seething sea of politics!

Euphrasia Jottings.

From our own Correspondent.

Rain fell in torrents last Sunday and continued until Monday, causing considerable damage to gardens, bridges, &c.

Hugh Johnston caught a cat owl in a trap last week and disposed of him in Thornbury for the nominal sum of one dollar.

J. B. Winter's house had a narrow escape from destruction by fire last week by the upsetting of a lamp.

Mr. D. Loughead is dangerously ill yet. Dr. McLean is attending him.

School has commenced again, and none too soon. Six weeks is too long for rural sections.

A son of S. Gilmour's has been seriously ill through getting overheated and drinking too much cold water when in that state. Under Dr. McBride's care, he is able to be around again.

A son of James Loughead had a narrow escape from death while trying to deliver some cattle at Thornbury. One of the cattle, a steer, becoming enraged, jumped off the bridge at Conn's mill into the pond, and across too lots, followed by the boys. Suddenly the animal turned and made a charge on one of the boys and got his horns under his vest and raised him from the ground, when the buttons broke and let him down. A clod of dirt thrown at this instant, blinded the steer and gave the boy a chance to run for the fence near by, and so saved his life. They decided to kill the steer the next day, but on going to look at him a few hours after the encounter they found him dead.
