PHYSICIANS Failed to Cure Rheumatism

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Sufferings and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks and months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago, and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

Concerts showing in Walkerton of late have been playing in rather hard luck, and few of the companies have probably got away with anything more than their expenses. Judging from our exchanges they have been faring little better in the neighboring towns, and one troupe who recently toured this section and played in Walkerton a few weeks ago creditably informed the Times that they had lost over $1900 on the road since January. The cheap moving picture theatres which are situated in almost every town are killing out the travelling shows, and country opera houses will soon have to board up the doors, for with the extinction of the travelling troupe the rural stage will vanish from the scene.—Bruce Times.

W. J. McKelvey of Mono had a cow and a steer killed by lightning on Thursday afternoon of last week. The animals are valued at $90.00.

FILLED WITH CURIOSITY.

That Was Why He Was Anxiously Waiting Outside the House.

The man was standing behind a tree in front of an apartment house in a cross street when the cop on that beat came pounding along on the sidewalk. It was close to midnight, and naturally the cop stopped and looked at the man standing behind the tree.

"Howdy," says the cop, by way of opening conversation.

"You're another," replied the man good naturedly.

"Whutchuh doin'—waitin' for somebody?" inquired the brave policeman.

"Nope."

"Just standin' there, hey?"

"You've hit it."

"Live near here, do you?"

"Right in there," says the citizen, jerking his thumb in the direction of the apartment house he was standing in front of.

The cop looked at him thoughtfully for a minute.

"Mebby it's none of my business," he says, "and then again mebby it is. I don't like to go round buttin' into anybody's private affairs, but tell me, neighbor, what's your graft, anyhow?"

"Well," loosened up the citizen, "if it's a case of me a-tellin' you or you croakin' from curiosity right in front of my eyes, I'll tell you how it is—provided it don't go any further. My wife says to me when I started downtown this evenin', 'If you're not home by midnight I'm goin' to pack up and go right back to mother's. So there!'"

"Well," says the cop.

"Well," repeated the citizen, "it's just about midnight now, and I'm like you—I've got curiosity. I'm waitin' here to see if she's goin' to keep her word."

The cop's curiosity ceased at that point, and he walked on down the street whistling, without waiting to see the thing out.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE SPEED MANIA.

Sensations That Come With a Ride In a Racing Motor.

Imagine yourself in a big racing machine plunging over a course at eighty miles an hour. For the average man the sensation is awful, but the speed kings revel in it. Down the road streaks the car. Lashed into a typhoon by the appalling speed, the still air roars in your ears. You think you will never regain your hearing. The resistance of the atmosphere is fearful. The slightest forward movement is an effort. Distant objects loom up suddenly before you and jump by. The landscape is a streaky line of green, blotched here and there as a house is passed. The gale seems to cut your face, and you feel yourself being gradually flattened out against the back of the seat. It seems that the glass in your auto goggles is on the point of breaking. Particles of dust are driven back in your eyes. You may become blinded. The vibration of the engine is terrific. Mysterious indicators fluctuate alarmingly. It may mean that the engine is on the point of exploding. What makes the floor tremble so? Surely something will happen now!

And then you hear explosions booming from the exhausts as the drivers "shut off." A sharp turn is ahead. The noise is deafening. The terrific speed does not seem to have been checked. The outline of the turn grows more distinct. It is sheer folly—maybe death—to rush at it at such a pace. You dare not breathe as the car tears into the bend. It skids and a wall of dirt is thrown up alongside you as the driver, with a sharp twist of the wheel, sends the car once more back in the middle of the road. You are safe—until another turn is encountered.—Hampton's Magazine.

A Painful Inference.

A teacher was instructing a class of boys and had spent half an hour trying to drive into their heads the difference between man and the lower animals, but apparently with little success.

"Tommy," he said coaxingly to a little chap, "do you know the difference between, say, me and a pig or any other brute?"

"No," replied Tommy innocently, but another teacher standing by laughed.—London Answers.

Alternating Currant Pie.

In the light of what has been learned about the housefly there is no longer any excuse for the gay insouciance of the poet who wrote a summer boarding house lyric, in which these lines occurred:

Here, sir, is your currant pie,
Alternating currant pie.
First a currant, then a fly
'Neath the crust alternate lie.

—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Not an Authority.

There are some persons who can't take a joke, but Fogg is not one of them. One of the boys, acquainted with Fogg's frequent changes of abode, asked him which he thought was the cheaper, to move or to pay rent.

"I can't tell you, my dear boy," replied Fogg. "I have always moved."

Willing to Be the Goat.

"'Why should the spirit of mortal be proud?'" quoted the impassioned orator.

Then he paused a moment to let it take effect.

"Well," spoke up a half inebriated man in the audience, "I'll be the goat. Why should it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Lightning Rods

The following extract from an article in the Monetary Times is of interest at this season:

"Farm barns, icehouses and all buildings and locations which give off rapid evaporation are special marks for lightning. Moisture is one of the very best conductors of electricity.

The evaporation from a barn has both moisture and heat rarifies and charges the atmosphere as it ascends, thus preparing a channel for lightning, which following this course, comes straight at the farmer's barn. In such a case the presence of proper conductors might and undoubtedly would save the building from destruction. The material for properly roding a farm building may be purchased at from $5 to $15, depending upon the size of the building, and with the assistance of his help the farmer can instal it himself in a single day, so there seems to be no good reason for allowing farm buildings to remain unprotected.

The proper grounding of a conductor is an essential feature. This is imperative, and whether it be near the surface or very deep, the conductor must lead to permanent moisture. In view of the heavy losses occasioned by lightning to stock in the field, it becomes us as far as possible to guard against this. A column of heated air such as will go up from a large number of cattle huddled together as during a storm, is a serous menance. Trees in pasture fields may have conductors, and all wire fences should be grounded at short intervals."

John Taggart, a former well known bricklayer and contractor of Shelburne, who was living at 234 Adelaide St. west, Toronto, was struck by a street car on Saturday evening last and seriously injured and died on Sunday morning at St. Michael's Hospital, without regaining consciousness.

Death of Mrs. Robert Kells.

Mrs. Robert Kells, relict of the late Robert Kells of Maple Creek, Sask., died at her home there on the 12th inst. The Maple Creek News gives the following particulars: Shortly after her husband's death last August, she went to Rochester, Minnesota, to consult specialists. An operation was performed and she returned home much benefited. She continued to enjoy fair health until last January when the old trouble reasserted itself.

Mrs. Kells was a woman who stood high in the opinion of those who knew her best. Her retiring nature led her to hide her best qualities from public gaze, but they were revealed to those who enjoyed her friendship. She was a loving wife and mother, and her devotion to the family circle knew no limit.

The deceased was married to Mr. Robert Kells in Chicago in 1891. They lived at Moose Jaw for a couple of years, coming to Maple Creek in 1893. The sad circumstances which surrounded the death of Mr. Kells, are still fresh in the public memory. One daughter, aged 16, is left to tread life's journey without the guidance and protection of either mother or father. To this lonely one unsparing sympathy will be extended.

Milne--Bird

Married—At "Hope House Farm," Beaver Valley, by Rev. Mr. Milligan, on May 17th, at 3 o'clock p. m., Lily Rosedale Bird, of Toronto, to John Charles Milne of Maxwell.

For soreness of the muscles whether induced by violent exercise or injury, Chamberlain's Liniment is excellent. This liniment is also highly esteemed for the relief it affords in cases of rheumatism. Sold by W. E. Richardson & Son.

The Wingham Advance says:—It looks as though the day was past when every little hamlet or village could boast of having a local paper. At least four papers in this part of Ontario have gone out of business somewhat recently—The Wroxeter Planet, the Harriston Tribune, the Gorrie Vidette, and now the Holstein Leader. These were not all new ventures, for the Vidette and the Tribune were long established businesses. Publishing a newspaper involves persistent labor to build up a successful business, and necessitates heavy expense. With a limited field and keen competition, a popular paper and paying business are out of the question. Besides the common sense of the public seems to be manifesting itself by the the support of those papers that have proved themselves worthy of existence and to some extent at least "fill the bill." It seems to be a question of the "survival of the fittest."
