Rod and Gun

The most interesting portion of the fine story of the trip to Hudson's Bay via the Albany River by W. J. Malone appears in the June issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock Ontario. The trip was quite an adventurous one and is written in a spirit of thorough appreciation of the beauties and allurements of the wild and of the advantages enjoyed by one able to go so far from the beaten track. The interest is deepened by Mr. Malone's treatment of the theme and the fine illustrations accompanying the narrative. As maskinonage fishing opens in the middle of the month, two papers dealing with maskinonage fishing in the Kawartha Lakes and in the St. Lawrence are most appropriate. The vacationist will turn to Summer Holidays and Where to Spend them, while many lovers of firearms will read Comparing 12, 16 and 20 Bore Guns by F. H. Conover and note the illustrations with the interest born of enthusiasm. A paper on Game Law Violators who commit offences in one province and escape punishment by going to another, raises a question that will have to be settled sooner or later and which, in the interests of the game, should be settled without undue delay.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE FOR MAN OR BEAST

IS MYSTERY SOLVED?

THE SPHINX MAY HAVE REVEALED ITS SECRET AT LAST.

The Inscrutable Head That Has Gazed Out Over the Desert Is Said by Professor Reisner to Be the Gigantic Statue of Cephren Who Built the Greatest of the Pyramids —Yields Rich Treasures.

What man or woman is there among us who has not heard of the Sphinx? What traveler in Egypt, that land of fascination, shrouded in mystery and majestic calm, who has voluntarily missed paying a visit to the mighty stone image which for centuries has defied all efforts to lift the veil concealing its origin and symbolism. For hundreds of years it has kept its motionless watch in the desert, striking a chill into the hearts of all who see it. It seemed a great mocking thing of stone set up to teach man the lesson of his own impotence and fraility, mocking at the fruitless efforts of puny mortals to read its secret, certain in the knowledge that it was safe. And now the man is with us who claims to have accomplished what all his precursors throughout the centuries have failed to do—to have read the riddle of the Sphinx. The archaeologists of to-day, of course, claim that Professor Reisner's solution is just what they themselves expected, nothing startling, nothing particularly original; but archaeologists are like the rest of humanity in most vital respects, and they have learnt the wisdom of saying, "I told you so."

Authorities have held widely divergent views as to the date of the carving of the image; by some it is allotted to the period before the fourth dynasty, in which the Second Pyramid was built; whilst by a majority of others it is credited to later times, owing to the more frequent appearance of sphinxes at a later date. Professor Reisner has discovered the statue of the builder of the Third Pyramid which also owes its origin to the fourth dynasty, and his headdress is in every respect similar to that of the Sphinx. Since this particular form of head-dress does not appear anywhere else, the two obviously synchronise. Thus it is proved that the Sphinx is the effigy of Cephren, son of Cheops, who built himself the first and greatest pyramid of the three tombs. The intention in placing the head of the king on the body of a lion is to convey the idea of the monarch trampling down his foes.

Aker, the watchman of the netherworld and guardian of Ra, the sun-god, is frequently depicted as a sphinx, as, indeed, is Ra himself when he goes forth to war. That explains the fact of the Sphinx being face to face with the rising sun. The peculiar duty of sphinxes is to guard tombs from desecration at the hands of the stranger, so that its position with regard to the pyramid is accounted for. And it is strange how that lifeless thing of cold stone does trouble the minds of those who venture near. You who have gazed at the immobile features of that mighty countenance, which yet has such a strikingly searching and awe-inspiring effect, will realize what I mean. The last strong proof that the Sphinx is representative of Cephren Prof. Reisner came across during excavations around the Third Pyramid, for he, as stated, discovered the statue of Mycerinus, builder of the same. It is probable that this Mycerinus was a nephew of Cephren.

In 1903 three professors, Steindorff, Schiaprelli, and Reisner, were allowed to investigate at Gizeh. Schiaprelli took the First Pyramid, Steindorff the Second, Reisner the Third, which was productive of most interest. The last named professor first turned his attention to the great cemetery west of the First Pyramid, which had been divided between the three of them, his particular portion being the northerly. Here he unearthed the tombs of many of the sons and daughters of Cheops and other matters of interest, his chief work in this direction being the identification of the royal cemetery of Cephren, near the Second Pyramid. In 1906 and 1907 the excavation of the Pyramid Temple of Mycerinus was undertaken. Here was discovered a magnificent alabaster statue of Mycerinus, of which the head was outside the temple, so close to the surface that a tourist's stick or umbrella might have given away its whereabout.

In 1908, while searching for the valley temple of the Third Pyramid —for the Germans had previously discovered a valley temple to a pyramid of later date, proving that the Sphinx Temple was the valley temple of the Second Pyramid—a mud-brick building was discovered, and therein were disclosed a number of priceless treasures. In 1910 was found a beautiful pair statue, in dark slate, of Mycerinus and his queen, which was almost incredibly well preserved and had passed through the centuries undiscovered with only a stone between it and the light of day.

Three temples in all were found, one by Mycerinus, one by his son Shepseskaf, both unfinished, and one by Pepy II. of the sixth dynasty. Unfortunately in an article of this kind, one can only touch lightly on this enthralling subject. The great point is, however, that proof is given of the fact that the statues discovered are of the fourth dynasty pyramids had valley temples. Therefore the great Sphinx Temple is the valley temple of the Second Pyramid, the tomb of Cephren. Moreover, the dispute as to the date of the great diorite statue of Cephren and of the Sphinx itself was finally settled, for exactly the characteristics of the Cephren statue and the Sphinx which were supposed to be of later date were found in the newly unearthed statues.

TRAVELING IN INDIA.

Changes of Temperature Necessitate Wide Range of Clothes.

Everybody when on a journey in India carries his own bedding, and outside the large establishments of the Government officials everywhere it is needed. You are supposed to carry your own bedding with you just as you carry your own tooth-brush. In the trains—and there are very long train journeys, by slow trains, in India—in the guest-houses of the native princes, in camp, of course, always, and in the hotels and inns, your own bedding is a necessity. Indeed, you can scarcely carry too much in India if you wish to be comfortable.

All sorts of clothing, from fur coats to the thinnest of linen, all sorts of hats from a cap to a pith helmet, a spirit lamp, a folding table and chair, a small amount of tinned or bottled food and a supply of mineral water for the train, a large supply of linen and underclothing, for one changes them often, and the laundry work is done by beating on flat stones.

The changes of temperature from noon till midnight are startling. One must give up cold baths and take to tepid or hot water, and be careful, indeed, what, and how much, one eats and drinks. No alcohol before sunset, and very little then, and the plainest and most nourishing food. In this land, as large almost as the whole of Europe, there are only a few large cities, where one can buy any of the luxuries or comforts of life outside the obvious, and what you need you must carry with you. On a large scale you do what the native does, you carry your household gods and goods about with you.

How differently "pick up your bed and walk" sounds in your ears when you see a whole population of hundreds of millions actually carrying their beds with them whenever they move. Why should one take heed as to what one shall eat, or drink, or wear, when a handful of rice, a thimbleful of water, and a loin-cloth surface. The group of servants in front of their master's door at the hotel, or the hundreds of families traveling by train, by bullock-cart, or even on foot, have squeezed and sifted life's necessaries down to the vanishing point.

One of the Tallest Officers.

Lieutenant-General J. M. Grierson has had a long and varied career in the army, and is generally regarded as one of the best of what may be described as our younger generation of soldiers. His abilities were first discovered by Sir Evelyn Wood, whose right hand on Salisbury Plain he was for some years. Since General Grierson is one of the tallest soldiers in the army at the present day, and Sir Evelyn Wood is, to put it mildly, below the middle height, the contrast between the two, when standing side by side, used to be most amusing, and the name of "Dignity and Impudence" was bestowed upon them by some of the younger officers in the command. General Grierson has a very nice wit, and on one occasion, during manoeuvres, a Howitzer was fired before the sponge stick —the rod used for cleaning the weapons out after a shot has been fired —had been removed. The result was that the stick went sailing through the air, to fall to the ground some distance away. "One of the best efforts I ever saw to 'sweep' the enemy in front of you," was General Grierson's smiling remark to the officer in charge of the gun. It is considered probable that he will be given the command in India before the end of the year, and if this is so it will recall one of his aphorisms to the effect that "India is a mighty convenient place to send soldiers whose presence is not desired at home."

Caste Law.

It is difficult for a European to realize the insuperable barriers which separate the castes of India, but the following may be interesting. The Hindus are divided into over three thousand castes, most of them with sub-castes, speak about nineteen developed languages, and over one hundred dialects.

There are two essentials to a true caste: (1) There is no entry, except by birth; (2) marriage outside the caste is absolutely forbidden.

The highest caste is the Brahmans, admittedly and undoubtedly superior to all the rest. After them come those who are acknowledged to be twice born. The less honored follow in a graduated descent until the untouchable and unspeakable are reached at the lowest depth.

If a man is excommunicated by his caste-fellows, nobody in the caste will marry him. He is dead to his family. Nobody will eat or drink with him. If he is married his wife will not touch him or speak to him. The village barber will not shave him, and the washerwoman will not wash his clothes.—Indian Daily News.

Reviving Grist Mills.

English newspapers tell of an organization of 200 farmers of Hawarden to revive the ancient water wheel gristmills in their vicinity and grind there all the wheat reserved for their own use. Numbers of old country mills are elsewhere being put to a similar use. It is declared that the flour thus produced is "nutritious and fragrant beyond any other in the world."

A "Fifteen-Gunner."

The number of guns to be fired in honor of great officials and foreign potentates is carefully calculated, and the honor is jealously prized. King Edward conferred an inestimable boon on the Nawab of Junagarh when he raised his salute from eleven to fifteen guns. But this has caused the dusky prince to be fiercely envied by all the other Indian princes, who are only "eleven-gunners."

Musical Glasses.

Richard Pockrich, an Irishman, was the inventor of musical glasses —ordinary drinking glasses tuned by selection and played by passing wet fingers over the brim. He showed his invention first in Dublin and took it to London about 1750.

Struck By Train

Two brothers named McColeman, of Sullivan township, had a miraculous escape from being killed by being struck by the C. P. R. northbound evening train on Wednesday last. They were approaching a crossing near Owen Sound, when the train came in sight. They evidently miscalculated the distance to be covered by the train before reaching the crossing and attempted to cross. Seeing they would be overtaken by the train before getting across they turned partly north on the track. The engine caught the back of the wagon and carried part of the vehicle along until the train was stopped a short distance down the track. The men were found along side the track where they had been hurled with awful force. Malcolm was badly bruised and shaken up, but his brother escaped with a slight shaking up. They were brought to Owen Sound on the train and Malcolm was taken to the hospital. On examination it was found that his injuries were not as serious as was at first thought. One of the horses was instatly killed and the other one was uninjured. The engineer saw the men at the edge of the track and immediately threw on the brakes but was too close when he saw them to avert the accident. Had the train been going at regular speed it is certain there would have been more disastrous results.—Chatsworth News.

Catarrh and Bronchitis

The Bane of Thousands, and has Hitherto Baffled the Skill of Medical Science.

Catarrhozone

Dry air treatment is the one treatment that will cure these diseases.

What stomach medicine has ever been known to cure Catarrh or Bronchitis?

Catarrhozone is not a stomach medicine, but an air medicine, that carries to the remotest parts of the throat lungs, and air cells little drops of healing so curative that whenever it touches germ life it kills and eradicates them from the system.

Thousands of doctors and patients have been disappointed by using stomach medicines for coughs and colds. Have you not found it a rather roundabout way to reach the diseased portion of the throat and lungs?

Why not use Catarrhozone, which is breathed to the very root of the disease and heals so quickly and perfectly that every spot is rebuilt with new healthy tissue?

Catarrhozone is the only medicine that will cure. Thousands have testified.

Think for a moment. Is it not sense? Little drops of healing—the air carries them just where disease exists That is why
