A Plea For Canadian Scenery.

Written for the Advance.

There is much told in print now-a-days about the glories of the East, the sublime grandeur of the Swiss Alps, the humid wastes of Africa and South America, the islands of the sea, and the castle-dotted forests of Germany. But when we read about, or view for our-selves these foreign scenes, we are very apt to forget that somewhere, in the Western Hemisphere, lies a country called Canada, the home of our birth, or it may be adoption, where the sun shines as brightly as it does upon the nations of the East; where may be found scenes as welcome to an artist's eye as those afforded by any foreign country; and where, though the first generation has scarce passed away, may be found historical spots which are cherished as dearly by Canadian patriots as are, by their zealous guardians, the numerous crumbling battlements of German fortresses or Scottish castles.

I do not propose now to enumerate any Canadian scenes of this latter character. They are pretty well known. But there are other scenes, not many hours' travel from Flesherton, which well repay a visit by any one who can bring his mind to dwell on home scenery, and duly appreciate what has been bountifully provided in that line in our own country.

Among the readers of THE ADVANCE I assume that there are but few who have not heard of Owen Sound, and in all probability a great majority of them have visited it. I have nothing to do with the present appearance of the town as it is visited by tourists who pass through. Although it is picturesque in itself, lying at the head of a bay below the limestone battlements on either side, there is something still more attractive not far away which would not be noticeable to a casual observer or a transient visitor who has insufficient time or inclination to take a short drive into the country.

It is an October evening when we leave the town and drive southward up the valley, along a fine gravelly road, leaving the lively little town behind. We ascend a hill, lined on either side by small trees wearing their rich Canadian autumn dress. At the apex, and on the right, lies the cemetery—towering marbles and granites, flanked by the sombre grey of limestone cliffs still further west—and on the farther side of the valley bright rays from the setting sun set the many-colored foliage of the trees in a blaze of glory.

Still we drive on for a couple of miles, and then begin to ascend the mountain by a well made road cut from the face of the cliff. Overhanging trees and shrubbery shut out the lingering daylight almost altogether, trickling rills issue from the very rocks on our right, and on our left. away down below, the little Sydenham river frets and fumes in its rocky channel. And down in that hollow we hear a voice which is seldom heard in this part of Canada—a plaintive but distinct voice. It says "Whip-poor-will, whip-poor-will." It sounds like an omen from the woods—an echo from some Indian legend of the dead and a perturbed spirit.

Still a little further on and we have scaled the hights. To our left we see a mill and hear the roar of a cataract. Here the river enters the valley over a precipice some sixty or seventy feet high, and the mill is on the very brink, a portion of the fall serving to drive a water-wheel. The sun has set, and as we look down the valley my mind reverts to the year 1836—only fifty years ago—when the white settler first gazed upon this valley and these waters. The growth of this Canada of ours has been marvellous, and of no mushroom character either. She is a sturdy offspring of the mother soil, and even around me where I stand still dwell many of the brave pioneers who did such noble duty in planting the foundation stone of a new nation in a new country.

As we look around now we see comfortable farm houses; fine homesteads dot the country on all sides, and two miles to the north lying at the head of its cornucopia-shaped bay (fit simile for a place so bounteously blessed with fair surroundings) lies the town in the gray of evening, and beyond a stretch of blue water is discernable, dotted with pleasure craft. The lights of the town begin to appear, one by one—bright electric lights, shining with a steady lustre like the diamonds in a pure sky above. This has only been secured during the past few months.

As we near the town once more there approaches up the bay one of the magnificent C. P. R. steamers; her hoarse whistle blows, making the woods, hills, rocks and valley echo and reverberate again and again with a mighty rolling sound.

Are there not many scenes in this country as fair as the one I have described, and which have not even been touched upon in public print? Indeed Canada is rich in scenery, from the quiet, mellow landscape of rolling country to the more pretentious and grander proportions of cloudy or snow-capped mountains beyond the prairies, Sylvan lakes grand rivers and sublime waterfalls abound to the north and west, which were scarcely heard of until within the last few years. In the matter of lake scenery Ontario is especially rich. Few people who have not studied the subject can form any idea of the vast numbers of these liquid jems which form the setting of the landscape in Ontario's northern counties. From miniature, glassy ponds, hidden among rocks or trees, away from every breath of wind, to the wind-tossed sheets of water like Nipissing, Temiscaming or Simcoe, they lie in pretty confusion from the head waters of the Ottawa to the Lake of the Woods.

While speaking of lake scenery let me add one more picture. Those who have sailed up the Georgian Bay from Collingwood have always had reason to admire that beautiful sheet of water. After leaving this port ones eye rests upon the North Shore and Christian Islands. What memories this portion of the landscape recalls. Scenes of hardship and martyrdom—the most conspicuous, perhaps, of any in early Canadian annals. There still remain relics and ruins of the Jesuitical zealots who died while attempting to plant the standard of the Cross among aboriginal tribes. Upon the left a country of more peaceful memory unfolds itself. As we pass along there open up fertile valleys and high lands, well tilled and dotted with comfortable homes. Villages and towns lie peacefully at intervals along the shore. We see a black streak of smoke and a moving train scarcely discernible to the naked eye. Finally the lake expands to the north; the vision loses itself upon the waste of waters, while on the other side we could almost cast a stone upon the pebbly shore of Cape Rich. And so it continues almost untill we reach the waters of Lake Huron. I made this trip one warm June day. The lake was like a millpond, calm and glassy. Another vessel steamed along a short distance in advance of ours. And as I sat upon the hurricane deck, enjoying the beautiful panorama spread out before me, watching the revolutions of our companion steamer's screw, which could be distinctly seen from my position, as a boiling streak of water shot from its powerful flanges, I thought no more pleasing picture of perfect nature was ever presented to man than the one I gazed upon.

Can such scenes as this be overshadowed by any "fashionable" foreign landscapes? I think not. Of late years some praiseworthy attempts have been made to bring into prominence the attractive qualities of Canadian scenery, and with some success. Let us hope that a still greater degree of success awaits those who are laboring to that end.

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gage, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, three bottles of this medicine, have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendal T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now look steadily at a brilliant light without pain. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky.
