"PILLS LIKE A FYLE"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Are Mild--Never Gripe

ENGLISH PATRIOTIC POETRY.

The nearest that Englishmen care go to lyrical expression about national affairs is such a sonnet as Wordsworth's "Milton, thou shouldst be living at this hour," or the dedicatory poem appended to Tennyson's "Idylls," which contains a memorable passage about the retention of the Colonies—

So loyal is too costly! friends—your love
Is but a burthen; loose the bond, and go.
Is this the tone of Empire? here the faith
That made us rulers? this, indeed, her voice
And meaning, whom the roar of Hougomont
Left mightiest of all peoples under heaven?
What shock has fool'd her since, that she should speak
So feebly? wealthier—wealthier—hour by hour!
The voice of Britain, or a sinking land,
Some third-rate isle half-lost among her seas?

or again, such a majestic simile as that in Matthew Arnold's "Heine's Grave."

Yes, we arraign her, but she
The weary Titan! with deaf
Ears, and labor-dimmed eyes,
Regarding neither to right
Nor left, goes passively by,
Staggering on to her goal;
Bearing on shoulders immense
Atlantean, the load
Well-nigh not to be borne
Of the too vast orb of her fate.

Among modern poems which strike this high reflective note are two school odes, one by Mr. Bridges about Eton, printed in his "Shorter Poems," and one by Mr. Newbolt called "Clifton Chapel."—Canon Beeching, in Provincial Letters."

Big Derby Sweepstake.

This year the great Calcutta Turf Club sweepstake on the Derby was worth £66,666, no less than £16,666 more than the previous best attained last year. On that occasion Captain H. T. Raban, of the Indian army, drew Lemberg, drawing ticket No. 92,211, for which he paid 14 shillings. Within half an hour of his being advised by cable that he had drawn the favorite he had negotiated with a London syndicate, who purchased a half share in the lucky ticket for £7,500. Captain Raban won £33,000 in all.

Nearly a quarter of a million tickets are bought annually in this, the greatest sweepstake in the world. The tickets, which cost 14s. each, are keenly competed for. Sometimes syndicates buy up thousands, and pool the result. Of the total amount subscribed the chance of the winner takes 40 per cent., the second 20 per cent., and the third 10 per cent. The other starters divide 10 per cent. between them, while a further 10 per cent. goes to the drawers of non-starters left in the race at the time the sweep closes. A final 10 per cent. goes to defray expenses. Needless to say, romance has abounded in the history of the sweep, which originated as a small private affair at the Calcutta Turf Club.

One year the six-year-old daughter of a native signalman won £30,000. Though the tickets are sent to the other ends of the earth, India has been curiously favored. A Madras bank clerk drew Signorinetta, while Orby fell to a merchant officer on an Indian liner, and £30,000 a few years previously to an Indian engine-driver. Strange indeed! Alone of Londoners, a valet at a West-End club drew Minoru, and sold half his ticket for £6,000.

King's Wagon Journey.

King Lewanika, the paramount chief of Barotseland, who is the donor of a Sitatunga deer to the King's South African collection of animals in London, was present at the last coronation and the inconveniences which he underwent in passing through South African territories on that occasion left a very bad impression upon his mind.

No fewer than five weeks were occupied in making the journey by ox-wagon to the Zambesi River, and the much-traveled king, who during his stay in London had been accommodated with every comfort at a well-known hotel in the West End, was then 300 miles from his capital and home.

His Majesty was accompanied by Col. Colin Harding, the commandant of the Barotseland Police, who has had the unique experience of having been attacked at one and the same time by nine lions, some of which he killed. When Lord Selborne visited the King at Livingstone his lordship was presented with a tame hippopotamus, and subsequently a big-game drive was arranged in his honor. During his visit to London King Lewanika did most of the sights of the metropolis.

Citizens "Dunted."

The ancient ceremony of riding the bounds at Newbiggin, Northumberland, England, was followed by the "dunting" of two new freeholders at the historical "dunting" stone on the moor. For the first time in living memory one of the recruits was a lady. They were seized by stalwart men and carried face uppermost to the stone, and "dunted" — gently struck against the stone—three times. The ordeal is peculiar, and not dignified. Subsequently the recruits, according to custom, scattered their bounty among an interested and cheering crowd of onlookers.

A Loss That Was Felt.

Captain Hardess Lloyd, the famous polo player, was talking about the cessation of flogging at the great English public school of Eton.

"I am glad," he said, "that flogging is now done away with. Eton boys used to suffer a good deal from the birch. There was one Eton master in the seventies who flogged so severely that his death, when he came to die, was announced in the papers among the shipping news. They announced it under the head:

"'Loss of a whaler'."

SUBMARINE SHIPS

Life Aboard These War Craft Is a Sequence of Discomforts.

TORTURE FOR THE NOVICE.

Between Choking For Air and Suffocating From the Fumes of Gasoline the Agony Is Excruciating—Added Terrors When Caught In a Storm.

Submarine boats have been developed to the point where they can cover on their own power a radius of 800 miles in effective fighting trim. In storm and calm the submarines are capable of navigating the seas with credit to their inventors and constructors. With a fleet of these vessels stationed in the vicinity of any of our large coast cities it would be difficult for battleships to get within effective striking distance.

The first impressions received on descending into the hold of a submarine are those of discomfort and suffocation. The accommodations for a crew of thirteen seem about right for half a dozen. One is in too close proximity to whirring machinery, too, to enjoy the sensation.

On all sides are arranged electrical devices and machinery to operate the craft and the torpedoes. A thin shell of steel separates the visitor from the torpedoes, and the outside water is so close that one can almost feel its moisture.

When under way on the surface the submarine hums and trembles. The fumes of gasoline are almost suffocating. There is no escaping from them. Some of the men contract what is called "gasoline heart." If under water too long the fumes make one sick and dizzy.

A novice cannot remain in a submarine under water for any great length of time without suffering excruciating torture. In time, however, one gets used to it, and a trip may be one of enjoyment.

But it is when the submarine dives that the most unpleasant symptoms come. There are ten compressed air tanks supplied, and these furnish sufficient air to keep the crew alive a good many hours.

But did you ever live on compressed air? If not it will be a new sensation, especially if you are fifty feet below the surface of the water. There is a tingling sensation all over the body, a pounding of the eardrums and possibly a sense of nausea.

As the air is automatically regulated from the compressed air tanks one gets his share of the oxygen, but sometimes the supply may vary. It certainly does in different parts of the ship. One may be choking for lack of good air in one part and be exhilarated by a too abundant supply in another.

Sometimes when the engines are running to charge the batteries the fumes of the gasoline become so strong that men are rendered unconscious. They must be taken up on deck then to get a whiff of fresh air.

For this reason the batteries are only charged when above the water. But in time of war it might be necessary to charge them while running below. Then, indeed, the man aboard the submarine might envy the aerial navigator flying above the sea with his abundance of fresh air to breathe.

Cooking under water is a pretty uncertain and disagreeable work. The only appliance for this purpose is a small electric heater. This is just about big enough to heat water to make a cup of coffee and nothing else. The crew have their food cooked aboard the tender.

The submarine is built on the principle of economizing space in everything. There is no room for anything except the actual necessities. Every inch of space is given over to machinery. This is everywhere compact and efficient, but multiplied so often that one wonders what it is all for.

There is machinery for running the boat, for guiding it under water, for controlling it when it dives, for compressing the air tanks, for operating the torpedoes and even for regulating the power of vision above and below water.

When caught in a storm in a submarine life is really not worth living. It consists of a series of intense struggles to prevent death by being battered against steel walls or to keep from becoming involved in whirring wheels and dynamos. If you survive the ordeal you conclude that it is not necessary to wait for war to find hades. It is with you all the time.—Harper's Weekly.

Quicker.

"How are you makin' out?" asked one Pullman porter.

"Well, I used to think I was doin' pretty good," replied the other, "but after seein' a train held up by a road agent the other day I feel a good deal like throwin' this old whiskbroom away and gettin' a revolver."—Washington Star.

Modern Children.

"How old are you, Elsie?"
"Nine years."
"And you, Erna?"
"I am twelve."
"Really twelve? You are wonderfully well preserved!"—Fliegende Blatter.

Glad He Left.

Actor—There was a thunder of applause when I left the stage. Bored Friend—Serves you right! You shouldn't stay on so long!

What the stars are to the firmament kind deeds are to the earth.

TREE TRUNK CANNON.

Wonderful Wooden Hide Wound Guns of the Antilles.

The mention of wooden guns suggests a company of boy soldiers commanded by a captain who wears a tin sword. The revolutionary soldiers of Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic, however, have from time to time made cannon from trees and applied them to practical purposes. In the Antilles there grows a peculiar tree with a winding grain, so tenacious of fiber that to split it by ordinary means is almost an impossibility.

When wanted for artillery purposes the tree is felled, a section some five feet in length and one foot in diameter is selected and cut, the bark is removed, and uneven places on the surface are dressed down.

The embryo cannon is then placed on rude trusses and a bore burned in it, a process that serves further still to harden the wood. While the bore is being burned green ox hides are cut into long strips by beginning in the center and working toward the outer edge as one would peel an apple.

When all is in readiness one end of this rawhide band, which is about three inches in width, is spiked to the wooden cannon near the breech. A lever or bar is attached to the butt. Two or three negroes grasp the arms of the bar and slowly turn the hollowed log on its supports. The band of green hide is kept under a strain, and in this way the core of the cannon is wound with one of the toughest materials, wire excepted, in the world.

The first layer of hide is tightly wound to the muzzle of the growing gun and back toward the breech again until a number of layers have thus been wound on and the promising piece of artillery has grown several inches in diameter.

It is then placed in a draft of dry, hot air and allowed to harden. When the hardening and curing process is complete the persevering inhabitants have a really serviceable weapon.

One of these homemade wood and rawhide cannon used during the last Cuban insurrection is said to have withstood 104 charges of powder before becoming useless. The projectiles for it were made of scrap iron, broken stone and fire hardened clay balls.—St. Louis Republic.

REAL JAVA COFFEE.

You May Get a Cup Almost Any Place Except In Java.

It seems strange that in the far east, where tea and coffee come from, it is very difficult for the traveler in nearly all places in India, the Straits Settlements and elsewhere in the orient to procure a cup of really good tea or coffee. This, says Sir Frederic S. Isham, the novelist, although seemingly paradoxical, is only on a par with conditions in so many of our little American hamlets and villages where good butter, rich cream and good chickens for the residents are practically nonobtainable, all of them having been "sent to town."

In Calcutta I heard an American in the best hotel there say to the waiter: "If this," indicating the contents of a cup before him, "is tea, bring me coffee. If it is coffee, bring me tea." And the waiter (an Eurasian), who had no sense of humor, took away the drink and phlegmatically brought something else—equally bad, no doubt.

So after India, Burma and the Malay peninsula we waited with bated breath for the coffee of Java. "Java coffee!" The excellence of it was a childhood tradition. The coffee "mother used to make" was compounded of real Java. In Java surely we should find a nectar of the gods. What did we discover? An extract of coffee served in little casters! It would have made the gods ill. Another illusion gone!

Don't go to Java for real Java coffee. You may find it in Ypsilanti, Mich., or Paris, O., but you won't unearth it in Java—not for money.

Too Much For Him.

Voltaire could not speak much English. The reason why he refused to study the language is this: It was drilled into him that "plague" was pronounced "plaig," which he thought very pretty and acceptable. But right on top of it he was introduced to "ague," which his teacher said must be called "a-gue." Finding it impossible to reconcile the difference, he went off into a philosophical tantrum and dropped the study.

A Bit of a Brag.

Lawyer—Are you acquainted with any of the men on the jury? Witness—Yes, sir; more than half of them. Lawyer—Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them? Witness—Say, if it comes to that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of them put together.—Milwaukee Journal.

Deserving of Pity.

"There goes Roxham. Every time I think of that man's financial embarrassment it makes me yearn to help him."

"Financial embarrasament?"

"Yes. He's got so much money he doesn't know what to do with it."—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Main Thing.

Political Leader—How does Bump stand? Henchman—All right, I guess. He belongs to the same political party as we do. Political Leader—Confound it! That's no sign. Is he with us or against us?—Puck.

About the Same Thing.

Scribbler—Can you suggest a simile for giving advice? Scrawler—How would pouring water on a duck's back do?—Philadelphia Record.

SELECTED POEMS

When I Go Home Again

It comes to me often in silence,
When the firelight sputters low,
When the black, uncertain shadows
Seem wraiths of long ago.
Always with throb of heartache
That thrills each pulsive vein,
Comes the old unquiet longing
For the peace of home again.

I'm sick of the roar of the city,
And of faces cold add strange,
I know there's warmth and welcome
And my yearning fancies range
Back to the dear old homestead,
With an aching sense of pain—
But there'll be joy in the coming
When I go home again.

When I go home again, there's music
That never may die away;
And it seems the hands of angels
On the mystic harps at play
Have touched with a yearning sadness
On a beautiful broken strain,
To which my fond heart is wording
"When I go home again."

Outside of my darkened window,
Is the great world's crash and din;
And slowly the autumn shadows
Come drifting, drifting in.
Sobbing the night wind murmurs
To the splash of the autumn rain—
But I'll dream of the glorious greeting
When I go home again.

—Eugene Field.

LUNG TROUBLE

Mrs. Biny Brown, of Tenecape, N.S., Was Cured by Catarrhozone of Lung Trouble and Catarrh, After Hundreds of Other Remedies Failed

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold, or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler, the local symptoms, such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets, which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons, and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.
