Publish My Letter. The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

Don't be cajoled into receiving anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." Large bottles 50c., trial size, 25c. Sold everywhere or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

NERVILINE • A Family Liniment

Brides Who Perch In Trees.

Among the Lolos of western China it is customary for the bride on the wedding morning to perch herself on the highest branch of a large tree while the elder female members of her family cluster on the lower limbs armed with sticks. When all are duly stationed the bridegroom clambers up the tree, assailed on all sides by blows, pushes and pinches from the dowagers, and it is not until he has broken through their fence and captured the bride that he is allowed to carry her off.

An Emperor's Rebuke.

A diplomat in this country recalls a rebuke he heard the aged emperor of Austria administer to a snobbish noble who had lamented the scarcity in Vienna of personages exalted enough in rank to be cultivated as his acquaintances.

"Were I like you, sir," replied the emperor, "in such anxious search for blood equals, I would find companions only among the dead Hapsburgs."

Ordeal of Fire.

Throughout the dark ages of Europe an accused person had to carry a piece of redhot iron some distance in his hand or to walk nine feet barefooted over plowshares at white heat. The hand or foot was bound up and inspected three days afterward. If the defendant had escaped unhurt he was pronounced innocent; if otherwise, guilty.

Sneezing.

Aristotle maintained that to sneeze at any time between midnight and noon was bad, from noon to midnight good, while at high noon it was propitious. Xenophon records that in the retreat of the ten thousand Greeks it was regarded as highly propitious for a general to sneeze while giving counsel to the troops.

Horses In War.

In one of his campaigns Napoleon saved only 1,600 of the 121,121 horses with which he started.

LONDON MESSENGER BOYS.

They Are Often Entrusted With Remarkable Jobs to Perform.

Some curious instances of the quaint tasks which the ubiquitous London District Messenger boy is called on to undertake were given at the annual presentation of prizes—made by Princess Marie of Schleswig-Holstein—at the Duke of Portland's house in the city a few days ago.

All sorts of tasks, some romantic, some comic, had been performed by the boys who won these rewards.

If any of the boys earned his medals Alfred Beale did. He received three—one for good conduct, one for going to Rome, and one for going to Paris.

Beale is one of those persons who have greatness thrust upon them. He is quite willing to go whenever he gets an order from headquarters giving him the route to some foreign country, and he enjoys the trip.

His Rome trip was undertaken for the purpose of delivering a suit of court uniform, made by a West End firm, to a customer in Rome who was in a hurry.

He took some geometrical projectors to a customer in Paris for whom the ordinary mail was not quite quick enough. That, however, was an uneventful job, though he was there and back inside twenty-four hours.

But probably his most curious job was a journey to Liege, undertaken solely for the purpose of handing to the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg—who was on his way from Paris to Berlin—a luncheon basket from London containing delicacies which the Grand Duchess particularly favored.

"You are the first messenger boy I have seen, I think," said the Grand Duke, "and it is pretty smart of you to come over here alone."

Beale has already traveled about 4,000 miles alone.

Several of the other boys decorated had won their laurels in peculiar ways. Messenger Robbins, for instance, had to fetch an elephant and its keeper, an Indian boy, from Brixton to the Palladium and to take it back the same night—a task which gave him the precious experience of a ride on an elephant's back.

One of the most amusing tasks mentioned was that of a boy who was sent for in hot haste to a house where he found standing on a table a terrified lady, who refused to descend until a mouse which she had seen in the room had been captured. The messenger caught and dispatched the unhappy mouse within half an hour.

Another queer task mentioned was that of Messenger C. Cliff, who was sent for and instructed by some irate residents to stand in front of a German band which was playing in the street and suck a lemon. Eventually one of the tormented musicians threatened him under the ear, but the lad stolidly stuck to his task, though whether or not he succeeded in stopping the "music" was not stated.

Cause For Economy.

"A new hat, my dear?" said Mr. Needall. "I must say you don't seem to be following my suggestions of economy."

"It's the first new hat I've had this six months!" answered his wife, sniffing.

"Nonsense! What's wrong with your old one?"

"It's out of date," she brindled. "And, after all, while I've been pinching and saving, what have you been doing, I'd like to know? You've been going to your clubs and music halls and smoking your expensive cigars"—

"Of course, my darling," he interrupted in a pained voice. "What else do you suppose I asked you to economize for?"—Answers.

China's Food Problem.

No natural resource is too trifling to be turned to account by the teeming population of China. The sea is raked and strained for edible plunder. Seaweed and kelp have a place in the larder. Great quantities of shellfish no bigger than one's finger nail are opened and made to yield a food that finds it way far inland. The fungus that springs up in the grass after a rain is eaten. Fried sweet potato vines furnish the poor man's table. The roadside ditches are bailed out for the sake of fishes no longer than one's finger. Careful observers say that four-fifths of the conversation among common Chinese relates to food.

Legal Advice.

"Sir," said a barber to a lawyer who happened to be passing his shop, "will you tell me if this is a good half sovereign?"

The lawyer, pronouncing the coin to be quite genuine, coolly deposited it in his pocket, adding with great gravity, "If you'll send you boy round to my office I'll return the three shilings and fourpence change." — London Ideas.

The Usual Fate.

The unconscious stranger lay on the sidewalk breathing heavily and groaning. Two teeth were missing, his eyes were marked and his nose was bleeding.

"Who can he be?" said the crowd again and again.

"I guess he was some peacemaker," suggested the ambulance surgeon, surveying the wreckage.

No Romance.

Mr. Farwest—I met my old schoolmate Lakeside to-day for the first time in an age, and I thought from the way he acted when I mentioned you that you and he must have had some romance or other before we met.

Mrs. Farwest—No romance about it. We were married for a few years, that's all.

Simple Remedies For Fever.

The hot pack, the cold pack and cold bath for reduction of temperature should be used only under the advice and direction of the physician. In mild cases of fever, however, sponging the body with cold or tepid water or alcohol and water will prove grateful and often reduce the fever.
