PARLIAMENTARY BULLS.

Mixed Metaphors Frequent In Fervid Oratory of Commons.

Parliamentary deliverances have much ordinary fallibility, says H. W. Anderson in Canadian Courier. Members have largely tabooed the effort for oratorical effect, and the plain-spoken contribution to debate is recognized as the acceptable and telling one. Nevertheless many "bulls" and mixed metaphors occur, always to the unsympathetic and sometimes boisterous enjoyment of the listening members. So old a Parliamentarian as Mr. Hugh Guthrie, K.C., last session informed the House that his political opponents had "stepped upon a coiled adder, and dropped it like a hot potato," while Mr. David A. Lafortune, another King's Counsel, gravely informed Mr. Speaker that he had "only one word to say, and I will say it in two words." Probably the best of last session's contributions was that contained in Mr. A. S. Goodeve's classic description of the Hon. W. S. Fielding's announcement of the fateful reciprocity arrangement. "He placed his Pandora's box upon his desk," declared the British Columbia man, "opened it, and out stepped the Trojan Horse."

The new Parliament has already contributed its quota of members possessing peculiar oratorical qualities. Richard Bedford Bennett, of Calgary, drives Hansard to the tall timbers with his fusilade of words and two-hundred-odd-per-minute delivery, while Aikins, of the many initials, who succeeded Hon. Clifford Sifton in Brandon, holds the record of poetical quotations. Foster, the baby member, who defeated Sir Frederick Borden, and Armstrong, who takes Sir Allen Aylesworth's constituency, possess the strongest lung power and prevent the House from feeling lonely over the absence of Hon. William Paterson. But the maiden speech of Webster, the vanquisher of the doughty Hon. George P. Graham in Brockville, took the palm. In the course of his two-hour deliverance Mr. Webster traversed a wide field. Canada for the Canadians, he opined, was "the greatest battle-cry ever unfurled." He did not propose to "conduct a post mortem over the dead corpse of reciprocity." Entering upon the agricultural field he noted that "Canadian cheese has climbed to the top of the ladder." and, in a burst of eloquent patriotism, proclaimed that 'if the firmament of Heaven was a blackboard and the Rocky Mountains a piece of chalk, space would not suffice to write what this great country might become." Nor was the pathetic touch missing. "There is no more sadder sight," wailed Mr. Webster, "than to approach a big city and find all the chimneys lying dead."

Story About Mr. Hays.

Mr. Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Railway System, owes not a little of his success, according to those well acquainted with his methods, to his habit of learning something from everyone he meets. When he became general manager of the G. T. R., he started out to inform himself thoroughly on the condition of the road and its operation. And when he had the time he would listen to the opinions and suggestions of an engine driver as attentively as to those of a district superintendent. For the purposes of close observation and the free accumulation of information, he sometimes traveled incognito instead of in a private car.

One day, the story goes, he boarded a train on a branch line, paying his fare in the ordinary way. He sat beside an old villager, to whose talk he listened with every appearance of interest. Presently the conductor came along and the general manager presented his ticket. After the man with the punch had passed, the countryman said to his unknown companion:

"Say, you're foolish to pay a fare on this line. I've been riding on it for twenty years now and I gave up buying tickets long ago. The conductor's generally about half drunk, and I pretend to be asleep or something like that, and he thinks he got my ticket away up the line. If he doesn't—why, I fix him up easy enough. See?"

Mr. Hays saw. He saw a whole lot of things on that line and on every other over the entire system before he had his general re-organization completed.

Nova Scotia's Prestige Restored.

In October of last year, when the first census returns were published, some rather ridiculous statements were made as to the decline of population in Nova Scotia.

The uncorrected census reports emphasized the fact that in the past ten years the population of Nova Scotia had not increased by more than 2,500 souls. According to the census officials, Nova Scotia had lost her proud prestige as the third most peopled province in the Dominion.

These statements were doubted from the first by Nova Scotians. There must be something wrong. Not all the young men in the province by the sea had piked out west.

Recently, the corrected census figures have been issued from Ottawa. They tell a different story. The population of Nova Scotia in the past ten years has actually increased by 32,765 souls. And Nova Scotia is still the third province in the federation with respect to the number of its people.

Sydney's Harbor.

Sydney, N.S., takes every opportunity of booming her harbor facilities. The newspapers of the city daily impress upon their readers the superior situation of the Sydney haven. The other day The Record printed a story about some adventurous members of the Yacht Club who went swimming in the harbor during the first days of January. The bath of the sailormen took place a few weeks after the late surf bathing indulged in at the American sea side resorts to which the papers devoted much space and headlines lately.

The Record's story ends with one of the characters making this cryptic remark:

"It's a great harbor, good for shipping, good for swimming and almost good for drinking. And this is January! Can you beat it?"

TEACHING THE INDIAN

EDUCATIONAL WORK HAS MADE GREAT PROGRESS.

Department of Indian Affairs Has Done a Magnificent Work, In the Elevation of the Standard of Training and Life Generally Among the Aboriginal Races of Canada—11,000 Pupils In the Schools.

With the exception of those directly interested, it may be said that the public generally have little conception of the efforts put forth by the Department of Indian Affairs to provide educational facilities for the children of the Indians of Canada and of the great development that has taken place.

The raising of the Indian from his primitive state to that in which we now find him has been largely the result of the co-operative work of the missionary and the teacher. In the early days of our history, the missionary, who was the pioneer in Indian work, was the teacher. The first organized effort to establish schools was made by the missionaries among Indians on the Grand River, where an industrial training school was established in 1830.

A number of day schools were also conducted, and in a report dated 1837, we are told that many of the Wyandot Indians in Upper Canada were able to read. In 1826 a school was opened at Caughnawaga, where to-day there are seven schools, all conducted in buildings, erected within the last five years, on the most modern plans.

The first funds available for Indian education arose from the commutation by certain bands of Indians of their annual distribution of ammunition. This contribution began in 1848 and ended in 1862. The first grant by Parliament was made 2in 1875-6, when several day schools were opened in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. In 1879-80, the first appropriation for education in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories was made. The first school established by the Department in the West, was at Battleford in 1883. At that time there were 134 day schools in operation throughout Canada and four industrial schools in Ontario.

In 1882 a policy of expansion was pursued, as shown by the expenditure for Indian education. In 1878-79, the expenditure was $16,000; in 1888-89, $172,980, and in the year 1910-11, $539,145.52.

The returns show that during the year last mentioned there were in operation 251 day, 54 boarding and 19 industrial schools, with a total enrolment of 11,190 pupils and an average attendance of 6,763. These schools are situated throughout the country, from Prince Edward Island to the far away Yukon and Mackenzie River district.

During the past three years, says the Civilian, a vigorous policy of improvement in conditions of both day and residential schools has been pursued. On several reserves an improved system of day schools has been established by competent teachers. Instruction is given the girls, and in some instances also the women in their homes, in domestic science, sanitation, etc.

A mid-day meal prepared by the girls, under supervision of the teachers, is given. Gardens are also conducted at some of these schools and the results have been most satisfactory. Only a few days ago samples of work performed in the sewing-class of a school on Manitoulin Island were forwarded to the Department to show what was being accomplished. This work was highly creditable and could not be surpassed by white children of the same age.

About the same time samples of canned fruit and vegetables prepared by the girls of a school in the Bruce Peninsula, from the products of their school garden, were received. There can be no doubt of the value of this practical education to the Indian youth. The academic aspect is not neglected and there are, in all the provinces, Indian schools that compare most favorably with the white rural schools. An Ontario public school inspector recently stated in an official report, that the Indian schools in his inspectorate, in respect to buildings, equipment and general work were superior to many of the white schools within his jurisdiction.

It may here be said that the Indian schools in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are inspected by the provincial inspectors while in the other provinces and districts the work is performed by officers of the Department. In all day schools, systematic instruction is now given in calisthenics and hygiene, and good results are anticipated.

Whenever possible, qualified teachers are engaged, but owing to the dearth of teachers during the past few years and the fact that many of the Indian schools are situated remote from white settlements, it is not always possible to secure teachers with certificates. Nevertheless many of the teachers without professional training, imbued with a missionary spirit and a desire to uplift their dusky brethren, are performing for the state valuable service.

The results are, that in the older provinces there are few Indian children who have not received at least an elementary education. A number of progressive boys and girls may be found in our higher institutions of learning (colleges and universities) where they compete successfully with the white pupils.

The Department gives, when necessary, financial aid to worthy pupils to enable them to follow these advanced courses. As a consequence, there are to be found, in mercantile and professional life, representatives of the race, successful in their chosen calling and respected in the community.

In the outlying portion of Ontario, Quebec and the Western Provinces, where the Indians largely follow the chase for a livelihood, the only practical means of education is the boarding school, where children are clothed, fed and educated while their parents are absent from their home.

STRIPPED THE LOUVRE.

Restitution of Works of Art After Napoleon's Downfall.

The Louvre has known a still blacker day than that on which "La Giocondo" was abstracted. This was Sept. 23, 1815, when formal restitution had to be made of the pictures looted during the conquests of Napoleon. Commissioners attended from fourteen different states. The lion's share was obtained, curiously enough, by the representative of Cassel, who recovered no fewer than 421 pictures. Austria recovered 323, Spain 284, Holland 210 and Prussia 119. Altogether 2,065 pictures were removed, together with a number of statues, bas-reliefs, bronzes, wood carvings, cameos and enamels.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Life of Napoleon" gives a graphic account of the removal of the masterpieces, which were being frantically copied by enthusiastic students until the last moment before their departure. Thanks to the exertions of Baron Denon, who was then director of the Louvre, a certain number of stolen pictures were retained, among these being the finest example of Paolo Veronese extant, "The Marriage at Cana." The gallery, however, was left with only 270 pictures and remained closed until the vacant spaces had been filled, mainly with the works of French artists.—Pall Mall Gazette.

TRESPASSING IN ENGLAND.

If No Damage Is Done Intruders Need Have No Fear.

Many timid pedestrians in rural England are frightened away from inviting fields by the notice "Trespassers Will Be Prosecuted." They need have no fear, says an English exchange.

As the law stands any trespasser who does the smallest damage—injures a fence, breaks a small branch, etc.—can be summoned before a magistrate and fined. But if he does no damage the landlord must bring an action at law and get an injunction. This costs a lot of money, and unless the trespasser is a man of means the landlord won't bring his action at law. All he can do otherwise is to ask you to get out. If you go peaceably you can return an hour later and repeat the visit as often as you wish. Nothing can be done beyond asking you to leave again. But if you resist then sufficient force can be used, and if you show fight you may be legally knocked down, your legs tied and yourself bundled on to the road.

The landlord may, however, play some tricks on you. He can saw a bridge crossing a stream, so that you will get a ducking; he can dig a pit for you to fall into, and he can so fix the stile you are likely to cross that you will break it, and then he can have you up before the magistrate. If you don't commit any damage, however, you can trespass to your heart's content.

Winnipeg's Crusher Plant.

Winnipeg owns the largest municipal stone crushing plant in the world. The output is from 600 to 1,000 cubic yards per day. The price obtained is 50 cents or $1.20 a yard, according to the grade, and in five years there has been a profit of nearly $100,0000.

Where It Could Be Seen.

Sign Painter—I don't see any suitable vacant space on your walls. Where do you want the motto "Terms Strictly Cash" painted?

Barber Shop Proprietor—On the ceiling, of course.

May Keep Her Name.

An English court has decided that a woman is not compelled to change her name when she marries and that she incurs no legal disability by such refusal.

Publish My Letter The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

A Business Suggestion.

Bobby had worn his mother's patience to the limit.

"You are a perfect little heathen!" she remarked, giving way at last.

"Do you mean it?" demanded Bobby.

"I do indeed," said his mother.

"Then, say, ma," said Bobby, "why can't I keep that 10 cents a week you gimme for the Sunday school collection? I guess I'm as hard up as any of the rest of 'em."—Harper's Weekly.
