Wise Farmer Will Buy Fertilizer Now

From the fertilizer manufacturers comes a warning that unless farmers will order and take delivery of their fertilizer early, they may not get it in time for use. This is due to labor problems and to the fact that more farmers are buying more fertilizers than formerly.

If the Spring season is a short one a situation will confront the fertilizer manufacturers with respect to labor and transportation which may be beyond their overtaxed capacity to handle. The wise farmer will see to it that his fertilizer supply is safely stored in his barn before this Spring rush begins.

Of course, care must be exercised in storing it. Bags should be placed on either a thick layer of straw or a false bottom floor and piled as one piles cordwood, thus leaving plenty of air space between the bags. It should be stored in a dry place and in reasonably small piles, if possible.

Farmers will safeguard their own interests and help the general situation greatly if they will buy and take delivery of their fertilizer requirements in the very near future.

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING

Counting Bullets

How does a combat pilot know how many machine bullets are left in his guns?

Let us assume, for an example, that the fighter plane under consideration is equipped with two machine guns of .30 caliber, and two more of .50 caliber, and that they are so located about the ship that the pilot cannot tell by looking how many rounds of bullets are left after he has been firing a while.

He can obtain this vitally important information, however, by looking at his Ammunition Remaining indicator, developed by General Electric engineers. Regardless of where the guns are located on the plane, a glance at the instrument will tell him how many rounds of ammunition are still available for use against the enemy.

The indicator has four dials. Two of the dials, each marked from 0 to 500, are used to keep track of the supply of .30 calibre bullets. The other two dials, marked from 0 to 200, tell the facts about the supply of .50 calibre bullets.

Electrical impulses operate the Ammunition Remaining indicator, the hand on each dial pointing to the number of rounds of bullets remaining (if any) and this information tells the pilot whether to engage a new enemy in combat or to turn tail and cut for home for lack of bullets to feed his guns.

An Offense

Nazi-controlled police in Milan, Italy, arrested 100 young people for dancing, the Geneva newspaper La Suisse said in an article reported recently to the Office of War information. Before imprisoning them, the police forced them to march through the city carrying this poster: "While the country bleeds, we dance."

HELPS STRAIGHT SHOOTERS

One reason why U.S. Rangers and paratroopers are straight shooters is Bill Allender of the Winchester Arms Company's New Haven, Conn., plant. He has straightened more than 2,000,000 gun barrels by hand in 30 years, using the hand operated press seen in the photo. Master craftsmen like Allender straighten the barrels of every carbine that comes off the production line. "Curved" part of barrel is rested on die which, under Allender's keen eye and delicate touch, literally pushes out the curve.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

1. Should a man and a woman rise if they are dining in a public restaurant, and another couple stops at their table to talk for a minute?

2. What should one do when he is at a social gathering and is seated next to a person he doesn't know?

3. If one is buttering a piece of bread, should it be held in the left hand?

4. When dining out, on what sized bill should one apply the "ten per cent" rule?

5. If a man and his wife are signing their names to greeting cards, whose name should come first?

6. What time should a ball begin?

Answers

1. The man should rise, but the woman should remain seated. 2. He should introduce himself. 3. No; hold the bread against the plate while buttering it. 4. If the bill amounts to $2.50 or more. If less than this, the tip may be just as much as one wishes to give. 5. Whenever the titles Mr. and Mrs. are used together as a name the Mr. comes first. 6. Usually ten o'clock, but dancing seldom starts before about ten-thirty.
