"Our Family Regulator is DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS"

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING

Poison Oak

Poison Oak, public enemy of the forest, is about ready to start paying its debt to society—at a rate of perhaps $5,000,000 a year, a scientist estimated.

This bad boy of the plant kingdom, tormenter of picnickers and fishermen, has reformed under the benign guidance of chemurgy and is in a position to earn an honest living, said Dr. A. C. Shead, University of Oklahoma chemistry professor.

Mindful of the plant's painful rash, people have been busily stamping out the plant for years, but Dr. Shead raised a warning hand. What we should do, he said, is plant more poison oaks and thus give this country three important new commercial products.

The scientist said the same juice which has spread itchy rashes would, when oxidized to eliminate the irritant, make a lacquer of high quality, 20,000,000 pounds of which is at present imported annually from India.

The non-poisonous berries, Shead explained, are rich in fat that could be used to make Japanese wax, large quantities of which were imported from Japan before the war at prices ranging to 25 cents a pound. The Japanese got it from a poison oak similar to the North American variety.

The third product — and Shead said it was a rare plant which yielded as many as three useful substances — is tannin for the leather trade, extracted from the leaves.

The professor's estimate of the potential commercial worth of the plant was, he said, conservative.

And The Farmer Bought The Bonds

Here's an example of teamwork in selling Victory bonds: "The other evening I saw two Victory loan salesmen approach a man busily plowing a garden with a team of horses. They talked a few minutes then one of the salesmen took over the team and continued the plowing while the other made out the bond application."

THE WAR · WEEK — Commentary on Current Events

British Navy Has Almost Stopped Essential Imports Reaching Reich

There is one long, hard task of the war that the British Navy has almost completed; it has practically stopped German imports of munitions from outside Europe, writes F. H. G., in The Vancouver Province. Relentlessly the Navy has tightened its grip about Germany's throat until one supply line after another has been stopped.

It has been a long struggle, as it was in the last war, but in the last two years or so the Navy has had valuable aid from the Air Force.

Now Spring is here again and no more German ships will try to reach Europe from the Far East. Blockade-running is over for this season; it may well be over for the war.

In the Winter of 1940-41 Germany was able to import cargoes from French overseas territories via Unoccupied France—especially rubber from Saigon. The Royal Navy stopped that traffic. Mica and meat were imported from Madagascar. The Royal Navy stopped that traffic by sinking one ship.

Most Serious Blow

During 1941 and 1942 other routes through the blockade were stopped. German ships ceased to attempt to cross the South Atlantic from neutral South American ports. But the most serious blow to German supplies was the Allied occupation of French North Africa in the Autumn of 1942. That stopped all imports into Europe by small vessels sailing from Mediterranean ports.

By the end of 1942 Germany was left with only one country outside Europe from which to obtain the rubber, tin and edible oils she needed—Japan. But Japan needed other things: machine tools, ball-bearings, and especially models and plans of weapons that had been tested in the European theatre. So the blockade-running had to be arranged on a system of exchange with Japan.

That was begun in the Winter of 1942-43. Of the ships that left the Far East for Europe, seven were sunk. Others were damaged so they could not make the voyage. During last Winter five ships left the Far East for Europe; four of them were sunk.

Exchange System Broken Down

No ships left Europe for Japan. Several were ready and loaded; two were so badly damaged in port they could not have sailed; the rest have never sailed for some unannounced reason. The system of exchange has broken down. It may be that Germany did not wish to risk the ships; it may be that Germany could no longer spare ball-bearings and machine tools for Japan.

Today, out of 30 vessels that during the last two years were engaged in running the blockade between Japan and Europe, only 10 are left. Out of those 10 several are badly damaged, and nearly all of them are in European ports under the eyes of the R.A.F. Only one or two are left in Japan, and it may be doubted whether the Japanese will be willing to send any more cargoes to Europe before they have got something in exchange.

Allied Sea Power Grows

Germany's need to import cargoes from overseas was proof of her failure to make Europe self-sufficient. Her attempt to import cargoes in unescorted merchantmen, relying on speed and evasion, was a result of her lack of sea power. The fact that these supplies are coming to an end at the very time when Germany needs them most is a result of the steady growth of Allied sea power.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

1. In whose name should a girl's wedding invitations and announcements be issued if she has no parents nor close relatives?

2. Should one be embarrassed if it is necessary to ask a person his name in order to introduce him?

3. Isn't it proper for one to add a postscript to a letter?

4. At dinner, how and in which hand should a waitress hold the dish she is serving?

5. Is it all right to typewrite an invitation, acceptance of an invitation, or regrets?

6. Is it good manners to use Mr. or Miss when introducing members of one's family?

ANSWERS

1. In this instance, the wedding would probably be too informal for her to need either invitations or announcements. If determined to send them, the only thing she could do would be to send them in her own name or have her fiance's family do so. 2. No; be courteous and natural, without offering an apology. 3. It is all right but one should trp to avoid postscripts except when necessary. 4. The dish should be held on a folded napkin in the left hand. Then, if necessary, the right hand can be used to steady the dish. 5. While it is being done, the typewriter should be used for business purposes only. 6. It would be better to avoid the titles if possible.

"Popability"

Popcorn sometimes loses its "popability" due to dryness; this essential property may be restored to the corn by putting it in a fruit jar with a tablespoonful or two of water, shaking and letting stand a week.

Paint Is Preservative Protector, Beautifier

Among Post-War planners, the Canadian Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, with 95 per cent of the paint manufacturers and dealers of Canada backing the scheme, is unique. Although wartime sales are higher than they have ever been, the industry counts on a still further expansion when the war is over.

An aggressive and dynamic selling policy is being outlined to members of the Association at various city and provincial group meetings by pointing out that a wide campaign of advertising and publicity would open new selling fields if manufacturers and suppliers placed before Canadians all the hitherto little-mentioned attributes of their products. For years paint has been known chiefly as a beautifier, protector and preservative. It also has decided assets as a protection against fire, as a fighter against germs and disease, as an improver of health and vision, as a product that could lessen strain and fatigue, make work more pleasant, living more enjoyable and the world a brighter place in which to live.

In the eyes of the paint industry, Canada today is paint shabby, rural shabby, and urban shabby and industrial maintenance has suffered a letdown. Everywhere there is a crying need for the application of the old slogan "Save the surface and you save all."

Transport Barges

Barges of from 600 tons to 2,000 tons capacity have been commandeered by the Germans in Belgium, France, The Netherlands, Poland and Yugoslavia. These boats have been taken to Germany, for transport service on the Rhine and side canals, to supplement the insufficient means of conveyance.

FINE CUT CIGARETTE TOBACCO

Have You Heard?

A typical example of the unconquerable Cockney spirit. A famous city tavern, windows shattered, has the following notice posted up where the windows once stood:—

OPEN AS USUAL

The little tea and coffee shop next door, windows all shattered, has gone one better and announces cheerily:—

MORE OPEN THAN USUAL

—o—

Girl of eleven, asked what a peninsula was and what was a gulf, replied: "A peninsula is a piece of land with three sides of water. A gulf is three sides of land with one piece of water."

—o—

"William, I used to have a luxuriant beard like yours but when I looked at myself in the mirror, I decided to shave it off."

Quick as a flash, William retorted: "Sir, I once had a face like yours but when I looked at myself in the mirror, I decided to grow a beard."
