"BURNING WINTER."

The Swiss Have a Picturesque Celebration When Spring Arrives.

The coming of spring is eagerly looked forward to in all countries, but it is in those parts of the globe where the winter is long, and where the snow lies on the ground for many months at a stretch that spring is, perhaps, fully appreciated. In several of these countries a day is set apart as a national holiday when the winter snows begin to melt, and in many towns the entire population assembles in the principal square, where they perhaps burn the effigy of winter, or, indulge in some form of national rejoicing.

Throughout the whole of the world, however, there is perhaps no more curious or picturesque custom than that indulged in by the Swiss of Zurich, and in other parts of that beautiful country, on the approach of spring. By far the greater portion of Switzerland is covered with snow from late in November till about the middle of April, and thus it is not altogether unnatural that the Swiss should indulge in some form of rejoicing when the valleys and the low-lying hills become green once more.

Next to the Swiss Independence Day, which is celebrated every year early in August, the "burning" of winter or Sechselauten Festival, as it is called, is the greatest of all Swiss holidays. The most animated scenes of rejoicing are to be witnessed at Zurich, though Basle and other places also take part in the festival, and here from early morning till late at night a scene of ceaseless gaiety prevails. The streets are brightly decorated for the occasion, and at night the sight which the beautiful Lake Zurich presents is one of great beauty.

The principal event of the day, of course, is the burning of the effigy of winter — a well-built snow man of gigantic proportions, known by the Swiss as the "Bogg." This always takes place at the stadthauplatz, a large open space some little distance from the city and overlooking the lake. Here, on the top of a huge pile of pine logs, well saturated with tar and other highly inflammable substances, the "Bogg" will presently be placed and burned amid the cheers from a thousand throats.

But apart from the burning of the "Bogg" itself, there are other interesting incidents in the day which are well worthy of mention. Chief amongst these, perhaps, are the two processions which take place during the day, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. The first of these takes place immediately after breakfast, and is composed of gaily dressed boys and girls, whose duty it is, amongst other things, to drag the "Bogg," seated on a specially-constructed vehicle, amidst a display of evergreens, through the principal streets to his place of destruction. Another interesting feature of this procession, too, is a beautiful figure of spring, which is placed amidst an abundance of the finest flowers which the Riviera is capable of producing, and is drawn by a troupe of boys and girls some distance behind the "Bogg." The whole city turns out to see this procession, and though the "Bogg" is perhaps the great attraction, yet "Spring" finds many admirers.

Two Recipes.

For a Wedding—To one summer's night add two young persons, a beach and a little propinquity. Mix in one lock of wavy hair, an atom of delicate perfume and stir with a slight breeze. Sprinkle the whole with moonlight and let alone for the evening.

For Happy Wedded Life.—To one woman add numerous kisses, each supplemented with "Yes, dear; I love you more than ever." Mix thoroughly with long pleased expressions at sight of new gowns and hats, and season with many remarks about "youthful appearance." Sprinkle liberally with checks and bonbons (courtship brand). Do not stir up.

The Luck of a Goat.

A man once owned a fine and resourceful goat of which he was very proud. One day this goat lost caste with his master by swallowing a red flannel shirt which was the property of his owner. Angered beyond reason, the man led the goat to the railroad track and, tying the animal to the ties, left him to what he believed was certain death. The goat was opposed to capital punishment and made violent efforts to release himself from his bonds. In this he was unsuccessful, but in straining himself he produced a violent fit of coughing, and he coughed up the shirt and flagged the train.

A Tip to Tired Wives.

"Mrs. Brown never sits up to wait for her husband."

"No?"

"No. When she expects him to be out late she retires early, sets the alarm clock at 3 o'clock, and when it goes off she gets up and dresses and is ready, refreshed and reproachful."

Sorrow and Happiness.

Sorrow, with his pick, mines the heart. But he is a cunning workman. He deepens the channels whereby happiness may enter and hollows out new chambers for joy to abide in when he is gone.—Mary Cholmondeley

A Great Territory.

The 1,000 mile survey across the great Australian desert for the proposed railway between western and southern Australia gives a hint of the amount of unexplored territory in this island empire.

Grown on a Mat.

One of the most remarkable exhibits at the Royal Agricultural Show was a fine crop of mustard, which had been grown on an old door-mat on the roof of a house in Queen Victoria street, London E.C.

Suffragette Losses.

The damage done to store property during the recent window smashing campaign of London suffragettes is officially estimated at $30,000.

FORGOT HIS BRIDE.

Curious Matrimonial Romance of the Eighteenth Century.

Did every match based on worldly considerations turn out as charmingly as the one told about in Lady Russell's book, "The Rose Goddess," English social history would be very pleasant reading. According to Lady Russell, Lady Sarah Cadogan was married to the second Duke of Richmond in return for the payment of her father's gambling debts.

Lord March, as the duke then was, was eighteen; the bride was thirteen. Immediately after the wedding Lord March went with his tutor to the continent to make the "grand tour," and Lady Sarah went back to the nursery.

Three years elapsed. Lord March returned from his travels with so uninteresting a recollection of his bride that he was in no hurry to claim her. On the first evening of his return to London he went to the opera.

There he soon noticed that all eyes and lorgnettes were turned toward one of the boxes, in which, surrounded by many admirers, sat a most beautiful young girl. Turning to his neighbor in the stalls, Lord March asked who she was.

"You must be a stranger in London," the gentleman replied, "not to know the reigning toast of the town, the beautiful Lady March!"

Lord March lost no time in going to the box and introducing himself to his bride. Thereupon followed a belated courtship and so happy a married life that the devotion of the pair to each other was proverbial.

CURE FOR A COLD.

Heroic Remedy to Which the Red Man Pinned His Faith.

The Indian was not especially hardy in battle, except when he fought the pneumococcus, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The very fury of his attack so far discomfited that terrible germ as to leave the red man in possession of the field very soon after the battle opened. Major Cicero Newell, who was for many years an Indian agent among the Brule Sioux, tells in his reminiscences how the Indians conducted themselves in action. He says:

"If an Indian caught a bad cold his friends went with him to the bank of a stream, where they put up a little tepee large enough for one person to crawl into. Then they built a big fire and put stones on the fire. When these were hot the friends put them in the tepee with the sick man and poured water on them. In this way they soon filled the tepee with steam. They continued to do this until the sick man was warm and perspired freely. Then they took him to the creek and threw him into the cold water. After that they chased him with a whip up and down the bank of the stream until he perspired freely again. Then they wrapped him in a buffalo robe and allowed him to sleep. This always broke up the worst cold."

The trouble with us is our disposition to permit the pneumococcus to put us on the defensive. The Indian rushed him at the tap of the bell.

The Best She Could Do.

They had quarreled and were returning the presents.

The love tokens made a pitiful display on the polished center table.

The man added a blue knit tie to the little heap in front of him, and then they were silent for awhile.

"Mr. Brown."

"Yes, Miss Simmons."

"I feel that I am taking an advantage of you."

"In what way?"

"You have given me almost countless boxes of candy and no end of good dinners. I can't return those to you. I have eaten them. They are now a part of myself. And so, as I want to be honest with you, George, the only way I can settle this part of the transaction is to—to give you myself."

And the quarrel ended then and there.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Star of Brazil.

The most important cut stone of Brazil is that called the "Star of the South," which was found by a negro woman in 1853. It was appropriated by the mine owner who gave her in return a pension for life. The stone was sold for $15,000, the new owner depositing it in the Bank of Rio Janeiro and receiving on this security a loan many times greater than the value paid for the gem. The diamond was at length sold for ten times the amount paid. It was finally acquired by a syndicate and cut in oval form at a cost of $2,600 by a firm in Amsterdam. An Indian rajah offered more than $500,000 for it, but was refused. A little later it was bought for the gaekwar of Baroda.

At the Critical Stage.

"I understand that he was critically ill."

"He was as soon as he became convalescent."

"As soon as he became convalescent?"

"Yes. He was dangerously ill, and then as soon as he became convalescent he became so critical there was no pleasing him."—Houston Post.

Feminine Verdict.

"What was the verdict of that lady jury?"

"That the defendant was wearing a fright of a hat and that her gown didn't fit."—Pittsburgh Post.

Two of Them.

Reeder—Is it true that it takes a genius to live with a genius? De Ruyter—I'll ask my wife about it when I go home.—Puck.

A Close Shave

There might have been a terrible accident at Mr. Neely's saw mill, at the Jim Stitt farm, 7th concession St. Vincent, recently. The rain interfered with the belt, and when the machinery started up it ran off the pully and in an instant had wound itself around the line shaft and before the engine could be stopped the revolving belt jerked out the line shaft with a bang and hurled it with the force of a cannon, right through a number of men and up against the boiler and smokestack. It was done so quickly and the place was so suddenly filled with debris that no one had a chance to get out of the way. The shaft whizzed close to Bob Davidson, barely touching him, but where it left a terrible bruise. Had it hit him or any of the other, they would have been instanly killed. Where the shaft hit the boiler it knocked off the throttle and put a big dent in it, and entirely demolished the smokestack where it struck it. How the men escaped is a miracle, for one can hardly conceive how that shaft could be hurled from its place through the mill without killing two or three of the hands. However, it did not seriously hurt anybody and Mr. Neely considers the escape was almost marvelous. A small expenditure will make the mill as good as ever again.—Meaford Monitor.

During a recent thunder storm, a bolt of linghtning did quite a stunt at the home of Mr. Wm. Hoy, 10th con. of Morris. It struck the dwelling tore up the floor in one of the rooms, killed the cat that was lying under the stove, knocked Mr. Hoy down and nearly tore the left shoe from his foot. Mrs. Hoy and child, who were in an adjoining room, escaped uninjured. Other than a severe shock, Mr. Hoy was not injured.—Blythe Standard.

Samuel Moore of Shelburne was nearly killed a year ago by a pole from a derrick falling on him and knocking him backwards into a well. Last week he met with another accident of a serious nature. He was engaged driving a horse attached to a hay fork for unloading hay at Reeve Large's farm and was in the act of unloading a bundle when the whiffletree flew up and struck him, breaking his jaw bone in two places. He suffered a great deal of pain for a couple of days and has considerable trouble in taking any nourishment. Dr. Thompson attended to his injuries.—Shelburne Free Press.

Mr. Allen Sherra, of Camilla, received a pleasent surprise while fishing in the Nottawa near Canning's Falls, one day last week. He got a bite followed by a tug that threatened to snap his fishing rod in twain. However, pole and line stood the strain and after some maoeuvering managed to land the biggest trout that has been pulled out of the Nottawa for many a day. It turned out to be a salmon trout that measured 24½ inches from tip to tip and weighed 4½ lbs. The fish is supposed to have come up the stream from Georgian Bay early in the season.—Banner.

While out driving on Monday of last week Mrs. E. A. McAllister, mother and sister were run down by an automobile driven by Mr. James Robertson of Owen Sound. The buggy and harness were badly damaged but luckily the occupants were unhurt. As a result the driver was invited to appear before magistrate Norton on Wednesday evening and was assessed $10 and costs and damages. The evidence was somewhat conflicting and Mr. Robertson, we understand, intends to appeal the case. Mr. H. G. Tucker of Owen Sound was lawyer for the defendant.—Chatsworth News.

Prize Winners At Priceville

Following is a list of prize winners at the Priceville sports last week, as supplied to the Durham Review:

Mile Race—R. Crawford, R. McNulty A. Johnston.

Boys' Race, 100 yards—Wm. McLeod, Arthur Johnston, Jas. McDonald.

Girls' Race—Emma Whittaker, Gladys Hassard, Maggie Aldcorn.

100-yard race—Well Whittaker, Robt. Ferris, R. McNulty.

Fat Man's Race—Chas. Kennedy, Dan McDonald, Otto Konold.

Vaulting—Les. Watson, John O'Neil, Dan McDonald. Highest 7 ft. 4 in.

Running high jump—R. Black, J. B. Neilson, W. Whittaker. Highest 4 feet 8 in.

Running hop, step and jump—W. Whittaker, 39 feet 8 in; R. Black 38 feet 7 in.; Robert Aldcorn 37 feet 2 in.

Putting 16 lb. shot—Dan McDonald, 39 feet 7 in, A. McArthur 37 feet, Whittaker 34 feet.

Putting shot overhead—Angus McArthur 33 feet 5 in., Whittaker 32 feet 9 in., Dan McDonald 32 feet 9 in.

Tossing the caber, a 16-foot telegraph pole—Dan McDonald succeeded in "upending it" at 21 feet 6 in., other competitors struggling with it being A. McArthur, W. Whittaker, Alex. McDonald.

Tug of war—Ten men to a side and the townships of Glenelg, Artemesia and Proton contested. It was one of the sights of the day to see these 30 men assembling, representing about three tons of muscular humanity. The first to pull were Proton and Artemesia, but the excited crowd rushing in made it end in a fluke, some one shouting that Proton had won when there was still feet to pull. Another pull under better conditions was fairly well contested and in 1½ minutes Proton won. Later in the day a struggle took place between Glenelg stalwarts and Proton, and by agreement if not settled in five minutes it was to stop. This was a gruelling (we have heard somewhere that Scotchmen are fond of gruel—Ed. Advance) exhibition, almost cruel, to look on the distorted faces, swollen veins and muscles of men straining to the limit of physical nature is to decide this is not sport. The contests ended in good feeling, which is sometimes not the case. Proton, if anything, had the advantage in honors.

The line ups: Artemesia—Dan McDonald, Alex McDonald, Jas. Ferris, L. McArthur, Alex. Stewart, Arch Stewart, W. Whittaker, Thos. Irwin, A. McArthur, Dan Campbell.

Glenelg—Allan McLean, Ed. Sullivan, Otto Konold, John McMicken, Nor. McIntyre, Angus McArthur, Archie McKinnon, Chas. Kennedy, Wm. Mather, Jerry McAsey, Lawrence McEwen. Captain not pulling.

Proton—John Aldcorn, Dan. McGinnis, Hugh McLean, W. Wiltshire, Ab. Shearson, Sam McLean, Robt. Watson, Neil McLeod, Jos. Billings.

Mr. W. S. Gunsalas, a farmer living near Fleming, Pa. says he has used Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for fourteen years, and that he has found it to be an excellent remedy, and take pleasure in recommending it. For sale by all dealers.
