KANDY KIDS

Kids are kids the world over. These grass-skirted native children of the Caroline Islands eagerly hold out their hands for the candy which a Navy nurse is distributing.

Chinese boys start their soldiering at an early age. This 10-year-old youngster, carrying a heavy pack and wearing regulation uniform, was photographed as he boarded a plane with a China-bound division at Airstrip in Mtitkyina, Burma.

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING

Powder Trap

It seems that science has invented a new risk for the thief and the housebreaker — a fluorescent powder which is invisible in daylight or under ordinary lighting but shows up clearly under violet rays, is being used by British police.

The powder was used as a trap which caught a cigarette thief in Edinburgh and sent him to jail. Cigarettes were the bait and the bait was covered with this powder, which was found on his clothing and his conviction followed although there was no other evidence against him.

A police official explained that except in fairly substantial quantities the powder is invisible to the naked eye. "But" he added, "under the violet ray a person whose suit is sprinkled with it will have the appearance almost of a baker.

What with fingerprints, invisible light rays that set off alarms, blood tests and all the modern paraphernalia of the crime detector, and now this new invisible powder to trap the wary thief into his undoing, truly the way of the transgressor is hard. The honest burglar would be better off to get transgressor hard work.

Government Spending Of Money After The War Discussed By Maclean's Magazine

A lot of Canadians seem to be convinced that everybody's future can be made secure by unlimited government spending, and that after the war the Government is going to have unlimited money to spend.

They say, "Look at our enormous war expenditures. If the Government can find all the money it needs for purposes of destruction, it certainly can do it for the purpose of peace."

The simple truth is that a government hasn't any money of its own.

* * *

What it spends is the money it gets from you and other Canadians, by taxes and borrowing, and what it gets by way of customs and other similar forms of revenue.

After the war the Government could continue to spend at the present rate only if its income were at the same level. Individuals and businesses would have to pay taxes at the same rate they now pay, and lend the same sums as they are lending through Victory Bonds, war savings certificates, etc.

To avoid depressions and want most Canadians would willingly pay and lend. But their ability to do so would depend on them earning the same amount as they earn under war conditions. Production would have to be as great as it is now. So would our markets.

* * *

The difficulty is that war production is vastly different from peace production. So much of it is exploded, sunk or quickly worn out that there isn't any comparison. War provides an insatiable, quick market wherein price is no object. In peacetime markets are not insatiable and price is very much an object.

There are people who say that a government doesn't need to borrow or tax heavily; that it can "create" money. It can. But money is worth only what it can buy. And if a state creates more than a certain ratio of money the result is the same as happened in Germany after the last war and what is happening in China today — an inflation that completely wrecks a nation's economy.

Power trains of eight cars, capable of generating power for a community of 15,000 now are being built for the United Nations to supply devastated areas.

Mistake Made When Farms Added To List

"If Canadians wake up some day to find themselves in the complete and rigid grip of socialism they cannot complain they weren't warned," says The Financial Post. "The CCF National Convention in Montreal certainly were frank regarding their ultimate objective, which is the complete socialist revolution — taking over by government of all business, big and little."

CCF stands for out and out Socialism, and out and out Socialism means the taking over by government of big business and small business, and farms as well. The CCF leaders find that when they added farms to what would be State property they started something they wished that they never had touched, but it is too late now to retreat.
