Ten Bulgarians, who were employed at the dam here, laid down the shovel and the pick and left last week to take up more dangerous weapons for their country. Hurrying to Toronto they joined a contingent who are crossing the water to battle with the Turks. While wishing the boys every success, yet if some of them don't fight any harder yonder than they worked here, Turkey needn't be much alarmed at their coming. —Bruce Herald.

BEETLE BITS.

Cook Learned the Secret of Their Utility From an Insect.

Ransom Cook was little known outside of the village of Saratoga, where he lived, but he gained a small fortune from a carpenter's bit, invented by him, which has been in common use for years. This device has two lips, protruding slightly above the edge and opposite each other.

Simplicity itself, but the world never had such a bit until Cook made it, and an insect taught him how to do it. Sitting down on a recently felled pine tree one day outside Saratoga, he heard the crunch, crunch of something inside the log. Curious, he investigated and saw that an insect of the bettle family was boring into the wood at one end of the prostrate tree. And the hole was lengthwise. Moreover, it was perfectly smooth. Cook had no bits in his kit that would make such a hole without slivering the interior so that it would be rough. Procuring an ax, he chopped off the end of the log where the insect had been working, split the section and, capturing the beetle, took it home and examined it under a microscope. Then the secret of the insect's ability to bore smooth horizontal holes in any kind of wood was revealed. The beetle was provided with powerful nippers on either side of its jaws, and they operated in precisely the same manner as do the small blades of the bits which he immediately invented, patented and put on the market. "Beetle bits" were the foundation of his fortune.—New York Press.

SPEED OF A TRAIN.

You Can Figure It Out From the Clicks of the Rail Joints.

If any reader wishes, when on a long railway journey, to test the speed at which the train is traveling he might perhaps do worse than follow the method suggested by "Nothing to Do."

"We were coming down from London to Holyhead," he says, "and the wheels flying over the rails beat out to my brain the rhythmic tune 'Nothing to do, nothing to do,' as they went over the joints in the rails. I took out my watch and with the aid of the second hand counted the number of 'nothing to do's' which were beaten out during one-quarter of a minute. I found that twenty-two was the number. Twenty-two by four gave me eighty-eight for one minute. The rails of the L. and N. W. railway are sixty feet long; therefore 60 by 88 gave me 5,280, which was, of course, the number of feet we were traveling to the minute. Thus I was able to tell my traveling companion, with some degree of accuracy, that at that time we were traveling at a mile a minute.

"Any reader can do this. All that is necessary is to find out beforehand the length of the rails and after that to watch your watch."—London Answers.

Profanity would seem to be rampant at the O. A. C. at Guelph. It was interjected into the new college yell, and it has been painted on the walk right in front of the main entrance of Macdonald Hall. As a result President Creelman rightly declared the college sports off. This led to meetings of the various years and the confession of a second year man that he did the painting. Whereupon Dr. Creelman raised his interdict and will deal with the offender. The young men, or some of them at least, attending the O. A. C., would seem to require instruction in more things than agriculture.—Mt. Forest Confederate.

Here is another animal story from Guelph: A piano tuner in Bell's had an exciting episode on Sunday morning. When he awoke from a "deep dream of peace," he was surprised to find that he had a bed mate in the person of a large sized rat, which had evidently been keeping him company for the major portion of the night. With a loud yell he jumped out of the bed, taking off about two inches of the cuticle from his nasal organ when he landed against the bed post. With little time lost he got down the stairs about five steps at a time, and got his bull dog, which he took upstairs and watched the ratting which resulted. After a few minutes the dog nipped the rat, and the young man felt repaid for his broken rest and the loss of the skin off his nose.
