"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New"

All Who Lack Vigor, Those Who are Dispirited and Worn Out, Should Read This Carefully.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Right Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work. and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

MONTENEGRO IN WAR TIME.

Graphic Pen-Picture By a Newspaper Correspondent.

Even in time of peace, Montenegro is one of the most picturesque and interesting corners of Europe; during the recent war against the Turks the country of the Black Mountain had a fresh fascination for the observer from the West. A correspondent of the London Times writes thus of the piquant civilizations that he saw in the streets of Podgoritza:

Side by side with the Montenegrin soldiers in greenish khaki uniforms, with light shoes for climbing over the rocks, walk wild-looking Albanians, each man clad in fantastic clothes of grayish-white home-made cloth, trimmed with black braid, a sheepskin over his shoulders, and a rifle, with thin, murderous-looking bayonet, slung across his back. Montenegrin women, wearing the long, sleeveless coat and carrying heavy loads,—for the women form the real commissary department of the army,—pass along the street, their ranks broken now and then at the creaking of an old-time ox-cart, with wheels four feet high, or at the hooting of a very modern motor-car. Well-to-do Montenegrins, in the modern dress of red and blue and gold lace, mingle under the trees with peasants who wear the old whitish-gray national dress and carry old-fashioned rifles and as many cartridge-belts as they can get round their waists.

In the soldiers clad in khaki and armed with excellent modern weapons lives the spirit of a bygone age. There have been many examples of dash and audacity that might well be the envy of any army. But misdirected and in some cases carried out in spite of the commands of the officers, they have merely led to unnecessary loss of life. All classes of the population are animated by enthusiasm for their country's cause, by the pride of clan, and by the inborn hatred of the Turk. From all parts of Europe and from America have come Montenegrins anxious to take up arms.

Yesterday at the little village of Reika I found in the temporary hospital two wounded soldiers who, although just returned from America after many years of absence, were as full of ardor as if they had lived all their lives in continual fear of the Turk. At the same place, waiting for the little steamer that plies to Virpazar, were old men armed with rifles, on their way to join the army, and a boy of fourteen, whom his mother in vain implored to stay at home. Somehow he had obtained a rifle and bayonet, and go he would.

The women are not behind the men. Accustomed as they are to the carrying of heavy loads, they transport the food to their husbands and brothers at the front.

Arms and ammunition are plentiful, but there is almost no provision for the treatment of the wounded. Fortunately, the open-air life of the mountains makes the Montenegrin a hardy product.

PRINCE ARTHUR IS GENIAL.

Made Quaint American Dances Popular In England.

The Connaught family are nothing if not original. In some ways Prince Arthur is the most daring of them all in this respect. He more than anybody else has helped to make the quaint American dances the fashion in England. It is now recognized in society with a large "S" that he will not go to a ball unless the hostess intends to have some of these on her programme.

When staying at Welbeck Abbey some time ago, as the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Portland, he discovered a few hours before the great ball given on that occasion, that there was not a single "two-step"' or other innovation on the programme. Whereupon he went to the Duchess, who is extremely conventional, and said this would not do at all.

The Prince is very genial and pleasant, but has a knack of getting his own way. "I'll be dancing-master for the next few hours," he informed his hostess, "and I shall teach some of the members of the house-party how to dance these delightful steps."

Very soon he had initiated Lady Victoria Cavendish-Bentick into the intricacies of the "Turkey Trot," and it appears that even the Duchess of Portland herself, the most stately Duchess in England, also fell a victim to its attractions.

MATCHES FROM STRAW.

Scarcity of Lumber Calls for Odd Substitutes.

The annual consumption of wood in the manufacture of matches is next to incredible. In view of the scarcity of lumber and its consequent high prices Carre, an Englishman, offers what he claims to be an efficient and economical substitute which he calls artificial wood. It is a composite made of straw and dried grass.

The straw is passed through crushing rolls, thence through cylindrical cutters, which divide it into strips, afterward supplied with an adhesive, the strips inclosed at both ends with layers of paper, are forced through other rolls and through linked molds in the form of a chain, where they are subjected to heat and pressure, whence they emerge in the form of round splits and are then cut to the proper length for matches. It is thought possible that this product may be also used for building purposes.

A fear of becoming ridiculous is a good guide in life, and will save a man from all sorts of scrapes.

One trouble with the family skeleton is that it refuses to stay in the closet.

SCALES, DANDRUFF AND ITCHING

Head so Itchy Could Hardly Stand It. Dandruff Showed on Coat Collar. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in One Month.

223 Elizabeth St., Montreal, Que.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me permanently from dandruff and scalp itch that I was suffering with since over a year. I had an inflammation of the lungs and a very strong fever. When I recovered, my head was covered with scales and dandruff, and it was so itchy I could hardly stand it. The dandruff showed on my coat collar. I had used various medicines without relief. I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them, and I am very glad of it, because I am perfectly cured. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap. It took one month to cure me. I take pleasure in recommending Cuticura Soap and Ointment to anyone who is suffering with scalp or skin diseases." (Signed) Hector Perras, Dec. 30, 1911.

"BLEEDERS" IN ROYALTY.

Strange Malady of Czar's Heir Affects Other Families.

In Russia very serious alarm has been aroused by the recent pronouncement of the Court medical advisers to the effect that the Czar's heir is a haemophilic, in other words a "bleeder." This extraordinary malady has cropped up at intervals since the early Middle Ages among scions of European royal families.

In popular language the victims of this constitutional tendency to bleed excessively after comparatively slight injuries have been said to have "only one skin instead of three."

The truth is of course that haemophilics have the same number of skins as any one else, namely, one, but that their blood lacks to a greater or less degree that power of coagulation or clotting which in normal persons leads to natural arrest of hemorrhage after any except very serious injuries to large blood vessels. At the present time it would seem that haemophilia is more prevalent than ever among princes.

The late Duke of Albany suffered from it and eventually died of it. The second son of the King and Queen of Spain is said to be afflicted by it and to be incurably deaf in consequence of hemorrhage into the internal ear.

Rumors are also current that the Hohenzollerns are not exempt from it and that some of Queen Mary's relations are haemophilic to a slight degree. The disease hardly ever occurs in females, but is handed down almost exclusively through the female line. That is to say, the children of a male haemophilic are not likely to suffer from the disease, whereas the male offspring of a female whose brothers are "bleeders" are eligible for the display of haemophilia.

In view of the youth of the Czar's son and the serious illness through which he has passed the constitutional delicacy from which he appears to suffer is bound to occasion the utmost concern for his future among the whole Russian people and the greatest sympathy throughout Europe.

Expected Death From Day to Day

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by Nerviline.

We have all read and heard of the agonies of sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration. "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down, because the money I had spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended 'Nerviline.' I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day and got relief. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica, to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

Strange Names.

British Guiana is a land of quaint Christian names. Rev. L. Crookall quotes, from the baptismal register of the church in which he ministered to a congregation of all the colors, Nannie Bellona, Queen Elizabeth, Prince Albert, John Pantaloon and Frank Locust. One negro whose child he christened was called Whiskey Emmanuel. Another black man brought his child, and when the minister asked the name replied, "Seriatim ad Valorem." Another gave a puzzling answer which sounded like "Ax, parson," and when requested to explain, said: "Well, parson, my mind gie' me to go troo' de New Testiment. I have had four boys: one was called Matthew, another Mark, another Luke and another John, and this is Acts, parson."—London Chronicle.

SAW DIFFERS FROM SWORD.

Odd Fish Commonly Found in Tropical Seas.

Related to the sharks are the odd saw fishes of the tropics, which are common in the lagoons, bayous and sounds of the West Indies and the southern coast. These fish grow to a length of twenty to twenty-five feet, and as they are of no real value are never fished or hunted to any extent.

In fact, the fishermen dread these creatures, for they often become entangled in their nets and rip and tear them to pieces by lateral jerks and sweeps of the huge "saw" on the nose. This "saw" is a bony elongation of the nose and is armed on either side with large, sharp, strong teeth, and in the largest fish these "saws" grow to be five or six feet long and nearly a foot wide.

Very different from the saw fish is the sword fish, which is related to the mackerels and is of great value for food and is widely and assiduously hunted or fished on the southern New England coast as well as in the Gulf of Mexico and in the West Indies. The sword fish is a splendid creature, often weighs as much as six hundred pounds, and has huge, brilliant eyes, clean, speedy "lines," and a long horny snout or "sword" with which it can impale another fish or even pierce the strongest oaken timber of a boat.

The Stranger.

A stranger knocked at a man's door and told him of a fortune to be made.

"Um," said the man, "it appears that considerable effort will be involved."

"Oh, yes," said the stranger, "you will pass many sleepless nights and toilsome days."

"Um," said the man, "and who are you?"

"I am called Opportunity."

"Um," said the man, "you call yourself Opportunity, but you look like Hard Work to me."

And he slammed the door.
