AMONG THE ISLANDS.

Cool Breezes, Beautiful Scenery, and Fish.

THIRD LETTER.

It was 3.40 p.m. on Monday, July 6, when the yacht "Zephyr" with sails spread to the wind, the crew aboard and under command of Commodore Bones, left her moorings at Manitowaning dock and headed northward. The boat, besides the crew and the commodore, contained an endless variety of stuff, including two trunks, bedding, tent and tent poles, and provisions for a week. A spanking breeze (by the way this is a nautical term and does not convey the same meaning that it did in yours and my infancy)—we say a spanking breeze from the south-west bowled us along at a foaming rate, and the islands off Manitowaning bay loomed up clear and fast. It was a close race between the "Zeyphr" and the waves, with results slightly in favor of the latter. Rabbit island, ten miles from Manitowaning, was passed in an hour and twenty minutes. In another hour we were crossing the channel and towards Badgeley and Round islands. All this time the crew stuck to the tiller with a gritty enthusiasm worthy of all praise, while the Commodore lolled and read Kenilworth.

A narrow entrance between the two islands named was soon sighted, and in a few minutes we had passed between two prettily wooded points and entered the Badgeley channel. This channel is six miles in length and passes between the towering mountainous mainland and Badgeley island. It was a beautiful sail down this channel towards the north-east, and here we witnessed one of the most magnificent sunsets that it can fall to the lot of man to witness. Over the granite bluffs to the westward dark clouds were looming up, and the sun passed behind and was obscured, but the outer edge of these clouds was illuminated with a narrow ribbon of intense silver brilliancy and rays of light shot out across the sky in long streamers. The mountains at this point resolved themselves into the form of a couchant lion, and over his head hung all this crown of brilliant coloring, such as the art of man will never learn to reproduce.

Rounding the northern point of Badgeley, eastward about two miles lay Killarney, and a lively run across the wind brought us to the little fishing village which has been casually mentioned on the up trip, after a run of twenty-eight miles in four hours and thirty-five minutes. We pitched our tent, had luncheon and that evening made the acquaintance of some of Killarney's business men.

THE FISHING INDUSTRY.

The village of Killarney is built upon a foundation of rock, and granite rock at that. There is granite in front of it, granite in under it, granite behind it, all adamantine, but still more prominent than all is the odor of fish. This permeates the place from end to end, and is even more adamantine than the everlasting rocks themselves. Here is the principal shipping point for all the fish caught on this north shore of the Georgian Bay and one firm of shippers—the brothers J & C. Noble—shipped from Killarney and the Bustard islands last year the enormous quantity of seven thousand tons of fresh fish! This firm now represent the fish monopoly of the Georgian Bay, viz., the Buffalo Fish Co., having sold last year all their fish houses and freezers to the Buffalo company, and now simply turn over all their fish to that company. The fishing industry of the Georgian Bay is one of the most important local industries in the world, and Killarney is its headquarters. The islands, bays, inlets and rivers of the north shore appear to form particularly favorable grounds for the propagation of fish, and the business is a prosperous one. It is a pleasant sight to see, in the early morning, the fleet of fishing smacks leaving its moorings and wafting swiftly out on the calm bosom of the lake to "fish up," as the fishermen term it. Some of these boats have the veritable "white wings that never grow weary," others, brick colored wings, which are just as tireless but scarcely so poetical. It is an animated scene from five to six o'clock in the morning, when the last boat has left, after which the place wears a deserted, sleepy appearance until it wakes up again in the afternoon about three o'clock when the fishermen return, or when one of the regular line of boats calls at the docks. As a rule the fishermen own their own boats and tackle, selling their fish to the company, although the company themselves own a large number of smacks, and have three tugs engaged in the business. The fishermen of this place are all Frenchmen or half breeds; in fact more than half Killarney's population is half breed. We found these men to be as jolly, kindhearted a lot as one could desire to meet. They were more than willing to talk of their business and pressed the crew and Commodore of the "Zephyr" to accompany them to the fishing grounds to see for themselves. There is nothing lazy about a Killarney fisherman, although he only works during eight months of the year. He is up before the lark, is home at 3 p.m., fixes nets or chores around until bed time. When the wind is fair he has it comparatively easy, but there are times when the lake's tempestuous tumbling makes his avocation an extremely arduous, as well as dangerous one. A fisherman must depend much upon fortune and his good sense in choosing proper ground on which to cast his nets. In the early spring, until the fifteenth of June, he receives 3½c. per lb. for all the fish he catches, after which the price is lowered to 3 cents, and one boat manned by two men will make all the way from six dollars to seventy-five dollars per day. As a general rule the fisherman is improvident and saves little from his earnings, although some frugal ones have laid by a snug competency. His expenses are large for maintaining repairs and his year's labor is condensed into eight months. As a general rule it does not require the remaining four months to spend the earnings of the eight. In conversation with Mr Charley Noble, to whom we are indebted for information, we learned that his views with regard to the fishery regulations were that that there should be no close season and that the government should establish hatcheries whereby our waters could be replenished. He spoke disparagingly of the work done by the government cruizer, but then we have an idea that Mr. Noble is a grit and talks from an opposition standpoint. The cruizer was doing good work even while we were at Killarney and the fishermen are well kept in line by Capt. Dunn. The Buffalo Fish Company have stations at the Bustards, Killarney, Squaw island and Serpent River There is another company doing business at one or two points, but the Buffalo company monopolizes most of the business.

KILLARNEY AND ITS ENVIRONS.

The village of Killarney consists of probably four hundred inhabitants. It has a Catholic church, under the jurisdiction of the Wikwemikong Jesuits; a neat frame public school, two hotels, a lock up, two general stores, post office, etc. One of the stores is owned by the Messrs. Noble and the other by Mr. T. H. Jackman, a gentleman whom The Advance delights to pronounce as one of the best hearted men in Canada. He does a large business and deserves it all. We still feel grateful to Mr. Jackman for favors received at his hands, and hope to meet him again some time.

Eugenia

From our own Correspondent.

Haying is pretty well ahead in this locality. The crop is not so bad as it appeared to be. The refreshing showers we had were a great benefit to all sorts of growing crops. Fall wheat is a good crop and is pretty free from rust.

Mr. McKenzie Duncan is pretty independant looking these days. The reason is, a very pretty little boy arrived at his house a few days ago. It is to become a permanent member of the family circle, so we tender the young stranger a hearty welcome.

Mr. John Jamieson was made very happy by the arrival of a pretty little girl at his house a few days ago. We are pleased to think our population is increasing so fast.

We are very pleased to welcome back in our midst Mr. J. R Hogg. He has a great many warm friends around Eugenia who are glad to tender him a real hearty welcome back again.

Miss Fida Bowerman is home on a visit from Flesherton at present.

Mr. Thompson, the Methodist minister, is visiting his parents at present. Dr. Halstead, from Kimberley, occupied the pulpit on Sabbath last.

The Rev. Mr. Wells still preaches to a large congregation at the Orange hall every Sabbath afternoon at 3 p.m.

There have been more raspberries picked this season than any season for a long time, as Messrs. Hogg & Cairns bought all they could get, and shipped them to Toronto. Some families have made very good wages at picking.

Mr. Robert Wilson has been very sick for some time. Dr. Carter and Dr. Scott are attending him.

Mr. Thomas Betts is erecting a fine brick house at the Morey corner. He says he wont bach it any how.

Mr. Henry Fenwick is building quite an addition to his house. It will be a great improvement to his place.

Miss Ida May Rutledge is home from Toronto. At present she is visiting her sister Mrs. James A. Jamieson, near Salem.

Mr. Andrew Sample, jr., is the happiest man in Artemesia The reason is Mrs. Sample presented him last Saturday with a handsome little daughter.

Miss Esther Hopps has gone to visit friends in Owen Sound.

Miss Mary Baillie, of Chicago, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Jamieson, near Salem. Her numerous friends are all pleased to welcome her among them once more.

Editor's Table.

A cablegram announces that Amelie Rives has sailed for the United States where she will arrive soon after the appearance of her latest novel in the August number of the Cosmopolitan. After nearly two years of silence the new story of Miss Rives' will be received with the greatest interest by those who enjoyed her earlier work. Married, travelled, and in every way matured, her latest production is said to be worthy of the talent which gave such great promise. The scene is laid in Paris where the author has been living for two years, and the heroine is a Virginia girl who is studying music abroad with a negro servant for a chaperone. The story has been illustrated by Kate Greatorex, one of the most promising of American painters in Paris, and a charming portrait of Miss Rives is the frontispiece of the Magazine.

Two papers in this number which will be read with great interest by journalists, are those by Valerian Gribayedoff—who is called 'the father of pictorial journalism"—and 'The Woman's Press Club of New York,' by Fannie Aymar Matthews. Gribayedoff has discussed artistically and practically the question of the illustration of the daily newspaper in a way to afford information to all who are interested in journalism.

Anent the baccarat scandal, Gen. Adam Bandeau, of Grant's staff, who was afterwards Secretary of Legation in London and saw much of the English aristocracy, writes an article on "Gambling in High Life." "The Dukeries," by Pelham-Clinton, is another article which will please those who take an interest in the great country houses of England. Thomas A. Janvier, who is always delightful with his pen, gives a quaint sketch of the old ducal town of Uzes. To those interested in education, President Gilman, of the Johns Hopkins, furnishes food for thought in an article on this great southern university.

The cartoons which have been made of Bismarck, furnish a subject for Murat Halstead, reproductions of many of the most noted cartoons, illustrating the paper. There is an article on Placer Mining with instantaneous photographs, and one of the Court Jesters of England by Miss Esther Singleton, who is making a reputation as a graceful writer, besides the usual departments by Edward Everett Hale, Brander Matthews, etc.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands yearly it proves a veritable elixir of life.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Wells, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attewell, Sharbot Lake, Ontario.
