LIFE IN MACEDONIA.

It Is Very Much In the Open, With Little or No Privacy.

We arose early one February morning and left our fairly clean hotel in Neapolis for four hours of travel over the modern road near the Via Egnatia, which should take us to ancient Philippi. Our vehicle was a somewhat dilapidated hack, such as Americans are familiar with at almost every considerable railway station, but a surprisingly comfortable conveyance for this part of the world. Rattling down some steep, roughly paved streets, we came to the center of the old Neapolis, passed near the great Roman aqueduct and ascended another steep street on the other side of the market place.

Early as it was, we found that the people of Kavalla were up and doing. The stalls of the fruit men were attractive with oranges, pomegranates, lemons and dates. The vegetable dealers displayed a tempting array of cauliflowers, cabbages, onions, okra, leeks and potatoes.

As in all eastern cities, there was no privacy. The cook was preparing his breakfast on the sidewalk, the shoemaker was plying his awl, the tailor his needle, and the blacksmith was shoeing his horses almost in the very street.—Christian Herald.

A MOTHER'S TRIBUTE.

Pathetic Ceremony at Night on an Atlantic Ocean Liner.

Strange, perhaps, to us, but very touching, is the tender, intimate solicitude of the Latin races for their dead—"I nostri morti," as the Italians are wont to call those whom they have lost. There is a simple pathos in the incident that was related by a passenger on one of the great transatlantic mail boats.

A few days before the steamer sailed from Havre its captain received a letter from a peasant woman of Indre-et-Loire. In it she explained that her only son had been a cook on the Titanic and had gone down with the vessel. She was sending, she wrote, a cross which she begged him to drop into the sea at the spot where the disaster occurred.

The cross came in due time, a simple cross of wood, fashioned rudely enough by the mother's fingers, and one night, as the great vessel neared Newfoundland, for the space of a minute her engines ceased to pulse, and the little wooden cross, weighted with lead, sank beneath the waves of the Atlantic.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

Stevenson on Invalidism.

Robert Louis Stevenson, himself the most heroic of invalids, would have agreed with Sir George Birdwood in his contempt for the valetudinarian. "To forego all the issues of living in a parlor with a regulated temperature," he writes, "as if that were not to die a hundred times over, and for ten years at a stretch! As if it were not to die in one's own lifetime, and without even the sad immunities of death! As if it were not to die, and yet be patient spectators of our own pitiable change! The permanent possibility is preserved, but the sensations carefully held at arm's length, as if one kept a photographic plate in a dark chamber. It is better to lose health like a spendthrift than to waste it like a miser. It is better to live and be done with it than to die daily in the sickroom."—London Chronicle.

California's Petroleum.

Petroleum was produced in a small way in California very early in the history of the country—in fact, long before it was invaded by the army of gold seekers. Mr. C. Morrell, a druggist in San Francisco, is commonly credited with being the first to attempt the distillation of kerosene from crude petroleum. This was in 1857, but several years prior to that Andreas Pico made illuminating oil from petroleum which he obtained in the Newhall region in Los Angeles county. This oil was burned, so it is said, in lamps in the mission San Fernando.—Argonaut.

Not Stationary.

A carpenter who had been engaged to build a cabinet for paper, envelopes and other office supplies in a local commission house was busy at his task when one of the bookkeepers inquired:

"Is that going to be a stationery cabinet?"

"No. I don't think so," replied the worker. "At least I have instructions to put casters on it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Portrait.

The painstaking artist, anxious to please, remarked to prospective customer:

"I can paint you a portrait of your wife which will be a speaking likeness."

"H'm. Couldn't you do it in what they call still life?"—Lippincott's.

A Fellow Feeling.

Rector—I hope you didn't find my lecture dry last night?

Old Garge—Well, zur, I wouldn't go so far as to say that, zur, but when you stops in the middle to 'ave a swig, though it was only water, I sees to meself, "'Ear, 'ear!"—London Tatler.

All Stars.

Wiseguy—I want a dramatic sketch with forty heroines in it. Sketch Writer—Forty heroines? Wiseguy—Yes, sir. We have forty young ladies in our dramatic club, and they all want to play the lead.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Patience is the strongest of strong drinks, for it kills the giant despair.—Jerrold.

ORPHANS IN AUSTRALIA.

They Are All Wards of the State and Carefully Protected.

There are no orphans in Australia. That is not because parents never die there, but because when they do the state at once steps in to the rescue of their little ones. Children who have been robbed by death of their natural protectors are practically adopted by the government.

Unless some near relative manifests a desire to assume the responsibility and can demonstrate his ability to do so the child is committed to the children's council, which selects some home among the farmers of the country. These foster homes are examined closely, and often two or three are tried before one is found in which the child finds congenial surroundings.

After thirteen the state feels that its ward should earn more than board and lodging. At that age, therefore, he is hired out, usually, however, to the foster parents who have been previously taking care of him. Three-fourths of his wages are deposited in savings banks; the remainder is his. When he becomes of age or if he wishes money in order to learn a trade or to attend a more advanced school—or, in the case of a girl, when she wishes to marry—the savings are turned over to the ward.—New York World.

FATE OF THE GRIZZLY.

The Tenderfoot Was Anxious to Get the Full Particulars.

An Idaho guide whose services were retained by some wealthy young easterners desirous of hunting in the northwest evidently took them to be the greenest of tenderfoots, since he undertook to chaff them with a recital something as follows:

"It was my first grizzly, so I was mighty proud to kill him in a hand to hand struggle. We started to fight about sunrise. When he finally gave up the ghost the sun was going down."

At this point the guide paused to note the effect of his story. Not a word was said by the easterners, so the guide added very slowly, "for the second time."

"I gather, then," said one young gentleman, a dapper little Bostonian, "that it required a period of two days to enable you to dispose of that grizzly."

"Two days and a night," said the guide, with a grin. "That grizzly died mighty hard."

"Choked to death?" asked the Bostonian.

"Yes, sir," said the guide.

"Pardon me," continued the Hubbite, "but what did you try to get him to swallow?"—Lippincott's.

In London Clubland.

In some of the ultra exclusive clubs, says the London Tatler, it is a serious breach of etiquette for one member to speak to another without obtaining a ceremonious introduction beforehand. A painful case has just occurred in a certain old established and extremely respectable Pall Mall caravansary. It appears that a newly joined member in callous defiance of custom ventured the other afternoon to make a remark about the weather to a gentleman with whom he was not personally acquainted. The recipient of this outrage glared stonily at its perpetrator.

"Did you presume to address me, sir?" he demanded, with an awful frown.

"Yes, I did," was the defiant reply. "I said it was a fine day." The other digested the observation thoughtfully.

Then, after an impressive pause, he turned to its bold exponent. "Well, pray don't let it occur again," he remarked as he buried himself once more in his paper.

A Knocker That Meant Life.

So cruel were some of the punishments meted out to criminals in England centuries ago that it was small wonder the poor wretches claimed the "right of sanctuary." If they reached a church or some other privileged place the law could not touch them. A curious relic in connection with this custom exists today in the form of the quaint knocker on the door of Durham cathedral. The applicant having hammered at the portal, one of the persons inside would inspect him through the eyes of the copper mask above the knocker and after due parley would admit the frightened criminal.

Natural Tweezers.

Indian tweezers are simply a small pair of clamshells, with edges clean and hinge unbroken. "The old time Indians," writes Ernest Thompson Seton in "The Book of Woodcraft and Indian Lore," "had occasionally a straggly beard. They had no razor, but they managed to do without one. As a part of their toilet for special occasions they pulled out each hair by means of the clamshell nippers."

Her Help.

"The fact of the matter is, I never amounted to anything before I was married."

"Then you give your wife credit for awaking your ambition?"

"No; for making it necessary for me to get out and hustle."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Made a Hit.

"Did you make a hit with your speech at the banquet last night?"

"I guess so. I forgot what I intended to say and said what I ought not to have said."—Detroit Free Press.

His Point of View.

Landlord—Sir, the other tenants will not stay in the flat if you insist on playing the cornet. Mr. Toots—I'm glad of that. They were very annoying.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Jas. Ashdown Injured

Mr. James Ashdown, 1226 3rd Ave E, had a serious mishap a few days ago, which might have been a serious affair. As it is he escaped with a severe shaking up which will lay him up for a time. Mr. Ashdown was working on the C.P.R. construction force near Orangeville, where the company is widening one of the bad cuts. He was descending a ladder from the steam shovel to a car when he missed his footing and fell 15 ft. to the ground. The full force of the fall came on his shoulders. He was badly crushed, but fortunately no bones were broken. When he was picked up his injuries were thought to be very serious, but he was able to be taken aboard the night passenger train and brought to his home in Owen Sound, where he is making good progress towards recovery.—Sun.

Electrocuted But Survives

From the Elmvale Lance.

On Saturday afternoon as Blain Ritchie and Thomas Robson were stringing wire for the municipal telephone system at the corner of Amelia and Peter streets, the telephone wire came in contact with the hydro wire on Peter street. Blain tried to pull down the loose telephone wire with his plyers, but was unable to reach it. Robson, who is considerably taller, reached up and grasped the telephone wire, which had become live by contact with the hydro current. The instant he grasped the wire he fell backward on the ground and almost instantly his clothing and the grass where he fell caught fire by the passage of the current through his body. Blain ran to Mr. J. R. Graham's yard, which is near by, and returned with a scantling with which he knocked the plyers out of Robson's hand. He then went down to the reducing station and asked Mr. Tideman to turn off the current.

Robson's right hand, by which the plyers were held, was frightfully burned by the passage of the current. Parts of two fingers were removed and there is a probability that the hand may have to be amputated. Where the end of the plyers touched the left breast a hole was burned in the clothing, and where the head came in contact with the grass the hair and the scalp were burned.

Robson is making progress towards recovery and was, indeed, fortunate in escaping electrocution. Had it not happened that one end of the telephone wire which crossed the 2200 volt hydro primary was grounded there would have been no escape from instant death.

A Motherly Rooster

"Poultrymen see many curiosities, but here is an exceptional one. A breeder in a neighboring town had a Buff Cochin hen that became broody the fore part of August, but on account of the lateness of the season he did not care to set her, so broke her up.

"Her mate, a buff bantam rooster, at once took possession of the nest, occupying it steadily from morning until night for three days. To be sure that he meant business a china egg was place under him. Still he continued to set, some eggs were placed under him. This was on August 17, and six eggs were placed under him. He sat as steadily as an old hen, and on September 7 five of the six eggs hatched. As a mother he proved very successful, raising every one of the five chicks."—Farm and Fireside.

Exchanges Echoes

John Finn, a Hanover Boniface, was fined $100 and costs for selling on Sunday and bottle selling.

Collingwood Council will issue a distress warrant against the Northern Iron and Steel Works for three years arrears in taxes.

A red sunflower is the latest achievement of plant breeders. It is a cross between the common yellow sunflower and a wild variety. The predominating color is crimson and brown, the tips of the florets are golden. The flower heads measure from six to eight inches in diameter. While this new plant will serve no economic purpose it will add to the variety and profusion of our flower borders.

Tommy Burns is coming east to visit his old home in Hanover. The ex-champion is through so far as any personal activity within the squared ring is concerned, but is on the lookout for promising material for the padded mit market. Tommy is desirous of dropping his "nom de plume" and desires to be known by his original name, Noah Brusso.—Post.

Frank Madigan, of Tavistock, who was on the Hamilton-Toronto flyer the other day, wanted the train to stop at Oakville which it was not timed to do. He pulled the emergency rope, stopped the train, and hustled down the street to one of the hotels. He thought it a big joke that he should stop the train, but found out otherwise. He was arrested at the hotel and appeared in Police Court at Oakville, on Monday. Then he found out that he might have to go to the penitentiary for tugging the rope, but he did not. The Magistrate fined him $35 and bound him over by a $3,000 bond to keep the peace.

Meaford High School

will re-open on

TUESDAY SEPT. 2, 1913

When classes will be formed to meet the needs of all students. This school prepares for Matriculation, Teachers' examinations (entrance into the Normal Schools and the Faculties of Education), Commercial Specialist and Commercial Diploma.

"NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS."

We would like all parents having children to educate to consider carefully the following points about this High School:—

1. BUILDING, grounds are unexcelled in the province; four and a half acres of ground with splendid athletic field; well ventialted class rooms; gymnasium; good board in private families; fees $10 a year.

2. THE SPLENDID WORK of this school has attracted to it large numbers of students from far and wide, and has caused its attendance to increase rapidly.

3. AN UP-TO-DATE Science Room, fully equipped, in which the Student performs HIS OWN experiments under the supervision of the teacher.

4. FULLY ORGANIZED Commercial Department in Book-keeping, Stenography, Type-writing, Business Law, English Branches, Etc., in the hands of a Specialist who is a Chartered Accountant; special attenrion given to writing and spelling. This Department is equipped with seven of the latest, up-to-date Underwood Typewriters. Each graduate receives a beautiful Diploma. Our graduates easily obtain positions.

RECORD OF THE SCHOOL FOR 1613

5. In 1913 this school passed 22 out of 25 candidates for entrance into the Normal Schools, 12 of those securing honor certificates; the whole class of matriculants, 15 obtaining full matriculation and two partial;3 for honor Matriculation with 7 honors; 19 out of twenty-two in the Lower School examination, with two honors; 5 for entrance into the Faculties of Education with two honors, and the whole class of 8 for Commercial Diplomas with two honor certificates.

6. The High School Inspector in his report says: "No school in the Province is in a more flourishing condition. The spirit of the school is admirable and impresses a stranger at once as quite out of the common."
