Device May Make Air Travel Safer

An automatic flight recorder designed to promote safer air travel has been developed by the General Electric Company.

The new device will help prevent accidents by detecting possible dangerous airplane or pilot tendencies and warning a pilot by audible signals G.E. said last night.

It also will furnish recorded data to help determine the cause of an accident to a plane.

The flight recorder provides airlines with "easily-read" records of a plane's altitude, vertical acceleration, airspeed and other personal data, the company explained.

The records are not affected by altitude or temperature and can remain submerged in salt water for several days without damage, G.E. added.

Post Offices Help Save Lives At Sea

Every post office coast station in Britain maintains a constant watch, day and night, for distress and emergency calls from ships at sea. On receipt of such a call commercial working is suspended. Information received from the ship regarding the nature of her distress, and the kind of assistance required, is passed immediately to the appropriate authorities who take whatever action is necessary.

In addition, the coast station takes a radio bearing on the ship in distress, and re-broadcasts on full power all the information received, so that in the case of a ship too far away for help to come from the land, other ships in the vicinity may proceed to her assistance.
