HOMESEEKER'S EXCURSIONS AND SETTLERS' TRAINS TO THE WEST

It is the only all-Canadian route. Only line operating through trains to Western Canada. No change of depors. Only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers to Winnipeg and Vancouver. All equipment is owned and operated by Canadian Pacific Railway, affording the highest form of efficiency.

Homeseekers' fare will be in effect each Tuesday, March 3rd to October 27th inclusive, and round-trip second-class tickets will be sold via Canadian Pacific Railway from Ontario points (Azilda and East) at very low fares—for example, from Toronto also West and North of Toronto, to Winnipeg and return $35, to Edmonton and return $43. Tourist sleeping cars are also operated on regular train leaving Toronto 10.20 p.m.

An Offer Worth While

Between now and November 1st there will be all sorts of interesting news, and newspapers will be well worth while. It is the season in which Canadian national life finds its greatest activity.

We have made arrangements with the Toronto Mail and Empire by which we are able to offer the big Metropolitan Daily and our own paper—the two together—from now till November 1st, 1914, for the nominal sum of $2.25 to new subscribers. Surely this is a heaped up measure that few can resist. We make this concession in price with the object of increasing our list of readers, as we feel that the merits of our own paper only require to be known to be appreciated, while The Mail and Empire is generally conceded to be Canada's Greatest newspaper. Send all orders to office of this paper.

A TRIP ON THE KONGO.

Care Free Voyaging on Small Wood Burning Steamboats.

A trip by steamboat on the Kongo river has its lazily amusing attractions as you descend from Stanleyville to the railway at Leopoldville, a voyage of twelve days. The boats, small, stern wheel affairs, carry from twenty to thirty cabin passengers each. On the lower deck are the black travelers, sometimes in a stifling crowd, sprawling over the cargo. Most of the captains are Swedes, Russians or Germans, and the engineers are picked up in Sierra Leone. Two companies run boats, and several of the mission stations have steamboats of their own besides.

Some of the boats have small dining rooms; others set the tables on deck, protected from the sun by awnings. The food is not luxurious, and very little fresh meat is to be had. The fuel is wood, and every five or six hours the boat must stop to replenish the supply from a heap of cut sticks on the bank. These piles of wood are made by natives or by scattered traders, often where no habitation is near, and in such cases the captain pays for the wood by putting money in a box that the trusting woodsman has provided for the purpose.

Every boat carries a drum, and as it approaches an inhabited district the drum is beaten to tell the natives that goats, fruit or vegetables are wanted. Every night the steamer ties up against the bank, and all the black passengers go to sleep on shore. But they devote most of the night to merrymaking and keep those on the boat as wide awake as themselves.—Youth's Companion.

SAVED BY A CAMERA.

A Photographer's Narrow Escape From an Enraged Orang.

As a rule, orang outangs are caught young and tamed before they are shipped to Europe. Mr. W. P. Dando tells in "Wild Animals and Cameras" of such an animal that arrived in London with the best of characters. He was considered a docile, steady going old thing, and Mr. Dando was engaged to photograph him.

I entered the orang's cage as I had entered scores of others. I had not exposed many plates before I saw that the animal was intent on mischief. He was a very powerful beast, and I should have stood no chance at all if he had attacked me.

My only chance was to use the camera as a weapon. Making a sign to the keeper to keep silent, I pointed my hand camera at the orang and with slow and steady step approached him. The keeper was outside the door, ready to open it, but neither of us uttered a sound. I was relieved to see the orang retreat gradually and at the same time slowly rise from the crouched and menacing position he had taken. Once he was on the move, I knew I had a chance. I succeeded in working him round to the corner farthest from the door, which the keeper had silently and slowly opened.

Still pointing my camera at the orang, I very, very slowly backed out of the cage, the door was slammed to, and I was safe. Even when I was partly through the door opening any quick movement on my part would have been a fatal mistake. The animal could have reached me in an instant.

POLARIZED LIGHT.

Why the Rays of the Moon May Chemically Affect Foodstuffs.

Moon rays are said to make men go blind and mad, and to turn foodstuff bad. There is even quoted by the London Lancet a death the cause of which was officially stated to be exposure to moonlight. Apparently the food most seriously affected by the moon's radiations is fish, and seemingly trustworthy statements have been made as to the ill effects produced in persons who had partaken of fish which had been freely exposed to moonlight.

E. G. Bryant, writing from Port Elizabeth, South Africa, suggests that a possible explanation might lie in the well known fact that the light of the moon, being reflected light, is more or less polarized, and possibly polarized light may exert a peculiar chemical action. Polarized light was obtained by him from a powerful metallic filament lamp, the light being polarized by means of a pile of sheets of plate glass backed with silver and placed at the correct angle.

The experiments showed certain marked results when fish were submitted to this light. When two slices cut from the same fish were hung, one in the direct light and the other in the polarized beam of light, the latter invariably began to decompose before the former, though the temperature of the polarized beam was several degrees lower than the direct light.—New York Press.

TWO FACED RONCONI.

He Could Depict Tragedy on One Side and Comedy on the Other.

In "The Memoirs of an American Prima Donna," by Clara Louise Kellogg, there is a good story of Ronconi, who played second cobbler in "Crispino e la Comare." We are told that he was one of the finest Italian baritones that ever lived and succeeded in getting a degree of genuine high comedy out of the part that has never been surpassed.

"He used to tell of himself a story of the time when he was singing in the Royal opera at St. Petersburg. The czar—father of the one who was murdered—said to him once:

"'Ronconi, I understand that you are so versatile that you can express tragedy with one side of your face when you are singing and comedy with the other. How do you do it?'

"'Your majesty,' rejoined Ronconi, 'when I sing "Maria de Rohan" tomorrow night I will do myself the honor of showing you.'

"And accordingly the next evening he managed to turn one side of his face, grim as the tragic mask, to the audience, while the other, which could be seen from only the imperial box, was excessively humorous and cheerful. The czar was greatly amused and delighted with the exhibition."

Pelicans and Their Pouches.

The pelican is not an attractive bird. He offends both the eye and the nose. But he is commendably regular in his habits. The parent birds catch fish and after eating their fill deposit the others in their pouches under their bills and carry them to their young. These pouches will hold from three to eight pounds of fish. They are elastic and when distended to their utmost nearly touch the ground. When empty the pouch lies close up under the big bill and is merely a mass of wrinkles. It is this pouch that gives the pelican his characteristic and disagreeable odor, caused by particles of decaying fish. The pelican's legs are short and strong, and its feet have large webs. It is not a fast swimmer or a rapid flier, but it is practically tireless in both air and water. On land it is awkward and unwieldy.

The Actress' Retort.

Georgette Leblanc, the actress, wife of Maurice Maeterlinck, was on tour in a French town, where the local company "supported" her in one of her husband's plays.

But the support was weak and halting. The poet's lines were mangled, and several characters seemed unable to understand what they were saying. Mme. Leblanc sought out her manager and spoke to him.

"A writer like Maeterlinck should be treated with more respect."

"Madame," he answered, "M. Maeterlinck is not the first to suffer. Sophocles, Moliere, Racine, Shakespeare, Goethe and other great dramatists are daily murdered in the same way."

"Possibly, but they are not murdered alive, at any rate."

Anything to Please.

Speaking of accommodating hotel clerks, the best I ever saw was in a certain small town. I reached the hotel late in the evening. Just before I retired I heard a scampering under the bed and saw a couple of large rats just escaping. I complained at the office. The clerk was as serene as a summer breeze.

"I'll fix that all right, sir," he said. "Front! Take a cat up to room 23 at once."—Exchange.

Expensive.

"No; I've decided never to accept friendly advice any more."

"Why not? It doesn't cost you anything."

"Well, I've found out that it almost invariably costs you your friends."—Exchange.

No Rehearsals.

Wife (pouting)—You have ceased to love me. Hub (enjoying cigar and newspaper)—No, my dear; I've only ceased making love to you.—Boston Transcript.

Brave actions never want a trumpet.—Italian Proverb.

Two wild ducks were seen by Mr. Robt. Nicholson, of Egremont, in the barn yard of his farm, near Yeovil, Saturday of last week. The sight of the ducks so surprised Mr. Nicholson that he stared in astonishment at them so long that when he thought of going for his gun it was too late, the birds having gone.

INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD
Makes Cows Give More Rich Milk.

International Stock Food conquered England, just as it conquered Canada and the United States, by proving to the Dairy Experts that it is the greatest milk producer and health restorer in the world.

The test was made on three cows from the dairy herd of S. W. Hackney, Esq., Leeds, England, Chairman of the Yorkshire Federation of Dairy Farmers.

Quantity and quality of milk was tested for a certain time—then "International Stock Food" was added to the regular feed.

INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD showed an Increase in Milk of 14.2 pints daily, and 1.21 pounds of butter daily.

This proves that International Stock Food, added to the regular feed will increase the quantity and improve the quality of milk from every cow.

It shows that International Stock Food aids digestion and keep cows in better condition. It proves that International Stock Food is a money-maker for the farmer—that every farmer who owns one, or a hundred, cows should feed International Stock Food every day.

Make the test yourself—weigh the milk you are getting now—then feed International for a few weeks, and weigh again. Then you'll see how International Stock Food will make money for you.

HARDWARE!

Listen: Life insurance for your house.

A tree often lives several hundred years. Nature has protected the wood by covering it with bark to shield it from the elements.

When trees are sawed into lumber, Nature's protection is lost. Therefore the wood used in your house must be protected to insure it against the weather and wear.

S. W. P. is a good life insurance policy on your house. It protects against decay—pays for itself over and over again in the repairs it saves. It adds value and beauty to your home, as well as long life to the wood.

Sherwin Williams' paint is genuine white lead, oxide of zinc purest colors, and linseed oil—ground to extreme fineness by powerful machinery—a combination of which produces a paint that is greatest in hiding, covering and wearing qualities, and makes it the cheapest paint to use, as well as the most satisfactory.
