Walkerton

A rather dangerous precedent was flashed on the police court here last week when a local lawyer argued that his client, who was charged with assaulting his wife, should be acquitted because the law reports showed that an eminent judge had acquitted a wife-beater on the grounds that hubby had ordered his wife off the premises prior to assaulting her. Believing that here was a sample case the Walkerton magistrate felt obliged to follow this precedent, which he did, and acquitted the accused. While there may have been lenient circumstances associated with the Walkerton case, which would justify its dimmisal on other ground, yet the precedent on which the acquittal was based, is a dangerous one. The question naturally, arises, "Does the wife become a trespasser in her own home by remaining after her husband has ordered her to leave and is he then justified in assaulting, like a common intruder, the girl he swore at the alter to cherish and protect? If there is a decision in the law reports sanctioning such a thing and if magistrates are to blindly follow it, then the sooner some other judge gets busy and establishes something different for the J.P.'s to copy, the better it will be for society in general and a multitude of abused wives in particular.—Herald and Times.

Dundalk

The sad news reached Dundalk of the death, on Sunday, of Mrs. Alfred J. Calhoun, a former resident of this place, who was highly thought of by all who knew her. Death took place on Sunday, after a lingering illness, in a hospital in Colorado. Mrs. Samuel Simmons, of Dundalk, is a sister of the deceased.

A real estate transfer of some importance took place in town this week, by which Mr. S. McCullough's fine residence property comes into possession of Mr. T. F. Lockhart. This is the choicest property in Dundalk and Mr. L. is to be congratulated on procuring it. The residence which he has been occupying for six months is required by Mr. Hall, the owner. We understand Mr. Lockhart will move to the new premises soon.

Masquerade Carnival

The carnival given on the rink here Thursday evening of last week, under the auspices of the band, was probably the best ever held in Flesherton. One hundred and one maskers registered at the door, and the costumes were exceedingly creditable. There was also a large number of spectators present. A prize of five dollars had been offered to the teamster who would bring in the largest load of people. Mr. Al. Best roped this in with a bunch of humanity numbering officially 52. The judges were G. L. Kitchen, W. L. Ainley, and Geo. D. Lloyd, and these gave very general satisfaction, although they certainly had a difficult problem to face, as in nearly every case there was keen competition. Talk about competition though ! When it came to competing for best skater in both lady and gent, and best looking couple on the ice, why everybody considered themselves entitled to the ribbon and all sailed confidently out on the ice. Each individual disclaimed any desire for the prize, however—it was simply to get warmed up, you know. The prizes were good ones and were all donated by citizens for the benefit of the band. As a consequence the band funds are augmented to the extent of $47 after paying rental for the rink. Following is a list of the prizewinners.

Qualified to Paint Him.

Ambrose Patterson, the Australian painter, secured a commission once to paint a very lengthy and wealthy suburbanite. Patterson himself is a lank brush, shooting up beyond six foot one inch. He was rather priding himself on having been given this commission, bearing in mind the great pressure of artists round every possible job in Australia. Eventually, however, the sitter explained. "I was a long time lookin' for a sootable hartist," he said. "I'm six foot two an' a 'arf, and till I struck you I 'adn't seen a painter what 'ad enough 'ight to do a full length of me."—Argonaut.

Schiller and Goethe.

Schiller was, from all accounts, a much finer man than Goethe, but in mental grasp and artistic power the Sage of Weimar was head and shoulders above his dear friend Schiller. The Germans know this, and while they love Schiller far more than they do Goethe, they are not blind to the fact that the latter was much the greater intellect.—New York American.

Brutal Delay.

"His love is growing cold," she said, with a sigh.

"Why do you think so?" her mother asked.

"I told him he might call this evening at 8, and it was half a minute after that when he arrived."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Figures Don't Lie.

Hoax—Men live faster than women.

Joax—That's right. My wife and I were the same age when we were married, but I'm fifty now, and she's just thirty-one.—Illustrated Bits.

Education.

Education does not consist of knowledge alone. It is the mental capacity of being able to establish and maintain harmony between ourselves and the world.
